FINN RADIO REPORTS SINKING OF RUSSIAN CRUISER WITH THE LOSS OF CREW OF 500

Moscow Forms Government To Take Over Finland

Soviet State Is Planned To Rule Finns under Iron Hand of Stalin

Forming of "People's" Regime Said To Have the Support of Large Number of Finlanders

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Dec. 1. (AP)—Establishment of a "People's" government for Finland, which "invites" Russia's Red army to help it overthrow the present Finnish regime, and formation of the first corps of a new army in Finland were proclaimed tonight by Soviet Russia.

The announcement was made by the Moscow radio which broadcast a statement made earlier by Tass, Soviet official news agency, telling of the formation of the new government.

(The plan outlined in the broadcast and Tass' announcement indicated Moscow envisaged a Soviet state in Finland.)

At the same time, it was learned that more Red troops had been called for chauffeurs.

The number of men called up and where they would serve were not disclosed.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt returned to Moscow this afternoon from a trip to Stockholm for dental treatment.

The new Finnish government announced by Russia was headed by Otto Kusinnen, who was one of the founders of the Communist party in Finland and who was commissar of education during the brief Bolshevik uprising there in 1918.

The Tass announcement said that besides Kusinnen the following "entered the People's government":

Others in Cabinet

Kusinnen, also named minister of foreign affairs, is a member of the Central committee of the Finnish Communist party and is one of the Comintern (Communist International) secretaries.

The Tass statement said the provisional "People's Government of Democratic Finnish Republic" was formed today in the Finnish city of Terijoki ,ten miles from the Russian border on the Karelian isthmus where Russian infantry troops first entered Finland Thursday morning.

It said the government was organized by "representatives of the left parties and of soldiers who revolted against the present government."

The new government was described as provisional, scheduled for reorganization on a permanent basis after its forces had marched on and conquered Helsinki, the capital, with the help of the Red army. Some of the Finnish army already has joined the new government, said the announcement.

Drastic Economic Change

It could not be "a state of the Soviet type" before this reorganization, it asserted. After the reorganization, however, the estates of

Molotoff Scores Tanner as Evil Genius of Finns

Russian Premier Says New Government Is Unsatisfactory

Moscow, Dec. 2 (Saturday) (AP) — Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff declared today that substitution of a "Tanner government" for the resigned Finnish cabinet "unfortunately does not improve matters" between Russia and Finland.

Molotoff's statement, made in a communique distributed by Tass, official news agency, referred to Vaino Tanner, who was retained as finance minister in the new Finnish government formed today by Premier Risto Ryti.

Calls Tanner "Evil Genius"

"Tanner was, and undoubtedly remains the evil genius in Soviet-Finnish negotiations," Molotoff said.

Tanner was a member of the Finnish delegation, headed by Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, which conducted the futile negotiations on Russia's demands on Finland.

"If the negotiations on behalf of Finland had been conducted by Paasikivi without Tanner's participation, as was the case in the first stage of the negotiations, they would probably have ended in an acceptable agreement," Molotoff asserted.

"But Tanner's participation in negotiations spoiled the whole matter and evidently tied Passikivi's hands.

"In view of this, the Soviet Union expects no good from Tanner's government. Besides, the formation of a new government in Finland, a People's government headed by (Otto) Kusinnen, introduces a new and important factor into the situation and causes the Soviet government to hope for a peaceful and satisfactory solution of the present crisis."

Finnish Success Against Russians Reported as New Group Takes Reins

Defenders of Little Nation Claim Important Successes; Women and Children Bomb Victims

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Helsinki, Dec. 1 (AP) — Finnish successes against Russian attacks in bitter fighting on land and sea were reported tonight as a new government, headed by a banker, took up the little republic's struggle against the Soviet Union.

At least thirty women and children were reported killed in Helsinki today when Russian warplanes subjected the capital to a prolonged bombing and machine-gunning but elsewhere on the 800-mile Russian-Finnish frontier there were stories of destruction of Russian tanks. Capture of Russian prisoners and increased Finnish resistance.

A Russian warship was reported sunk in the violent battle between red warships and the Russaroe fortress at the strategic city of Hangoe, which guards the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. The fortress was still held by Finland tonight.

New Premier Is Banker

The new premier is Risto Ryti, 50, governor of the Bank of Finland. In his cabinet are two men, Vaino Tanner and Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, who dealt personally with Joseph Stalin at the Kremlin during the prolonged but vain negotiations over Russia's demands for territorial concessions.

Tanner, Socialist finance minister in the outgoing cabinet of Premier Aimo K. Cajander, was named foreign minister while Paasikivi, a former premier and long experienced in dealing with Russia, was giv-

Ryti Says Finns Will Defend All Civilized People

New Premier Sends Special Message to the United States

Helsinki, Dec. 2—(Saturday)—(AP) via radio)—Premier Ryti declared today in a special message to the United States that Finland would never "barter away the right to decide our own affairs."

The Finns, Ryti declared, were "defending all the civilized peoples of the world in their great historic mission."

His address was the first of its kind to go from this tottering capital since the Red armies of Soviet Russia marched into the Republic Thursday morning.

"You in America," Ryti said in the beginning, "have never lived under this distress for which God be thanked.

"The experiences we are undergoing now are such that they make me hope that you will never undergo them. x x x Our people recoil in horror from the scenes x x x but are not afraid, because their conscience is clear.

"We are not complaining; from one standpoint, we are proud of our position. The Finnish people have dwelt for 15 centuries in their beautiful country, cleared its soil for cultivation and created in close cooperation with all other civilized nations of the world a culture that is only now x x x giving Finland her place among the company of nations."

The Finnish people, he declared, were "appealing to justice and humanity" to "demand for themselves the right to continue in peace and complete political independence x x x to labor for the welfare of their country."

"They are aware," he continued, "that they are defending the same values which inspire all the civilized nations of the world."

Then, again emphasizing Finland's resolve to maintain political independence at any cost, he added,

"The whole world is our witness that this defense is justified x x x."

Soviet Russian Troops Dropped from Planes, Seize Artic Port from Finns

Parachute to Earth in Large Numbers and Capture Petsamo

Kirkenes, Norway, Dec. 1 (AP) — Soviet Russian troops, parachuting to earth from large airplanes, were reported today to have captured Petsamo, Finland's chief Arctic ocean port

Advices from across the Norwegian-Finnish frontier said the invading forces utilized the brief light of Arctic day to take advantage of the technique they had developed for aerial transportation of sizeable fighting units.

Parachuting of troops was designed to overcome the vast distances encountered in Red army operations. Whole companies in full equipment, with machine-guns, have been dropped in Russian maneuvers.

Attacks Finn Refugees

For the second successive day, fleets of Soviet warplanes roamed the narrow Finnish corridor to the Arctic ocean bombing towns and machine-gunning refugees attempting to flee into Norway over the frozen Pasvik (Pacific) river.

Petsamo and the whole town of Liinahamari were in flames from the repeated air raids. Salmijervi, just across the border from Kirkenes, also was bombed by Soviet planes attempting to turn back refugees seeking safety in Norway.

Some of the 600 refugees reaching Norway said the Russians had taken the ancient monastery of Petchenga, ten miles south of Petsamo.

Fierce fighting between the Finns and Russian troops landing by parachute was reported in the Petsamo area.

Roads to Norway Crowded

Despite fire from low flying airplanes, Finnish refugees continued to flee over the frontier. Roads leading to Norway were crowded with women and children. Their flight was made more difficult by the destruction of a bridge over the Pasvik river by Russian bombs.

A large nickel works at Petsamo was struck by bombs and destroyed by fire.

(The International Nickel Company at Toronto, Canada, announced they had a plant at Petsamo. At least twelve Canadians were believed to be attached to the Petsamo plant but were reported to have fled safely into Norway.

Loren Wright Dies At Home in Dayton

Dayton, O., Dec. 1. (AP)—Loren Wright, 77, president of a toy manufacturing company and a brother of Orville and Wilbur Wright, accredited with making the first sustained airplane flight, died tonight after an illness of several months.

His death leaves Orville the sole survivor of a famous generation of Wrights. Wilbur died in 1912.

HUMAN BOMBS ATTACK FINNS

Human bombs, these Russian machine-gunners are being dropped into Finnish territory from Soviet warplanes. They have had long intensive training in the parachuting technique, and are in action as mighty Russia carries out its "defensive" war with puny Finland.

Premier Molotoff Declares Roosevelt's Appeal Is "Pointless"

Moscow, Dec. 1. (AP)—President Roosevelt's appeal against air bombardment of civilians in Finland was described tonight by Premier Foreign Commissar Molotoff as "pointless" because he said Soviet planes had not done so and did not intend to.

A communique distributed by Tass, official news agency, said Molotoff delivered the Soviet reply to the president's appeal in a conference with United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt.

"Roosevelt's suggestion that air bombardment of the population of Finland's towns should not be permitted, insofar as it is addressed to the Soviet government, is caused by misunderstanding," the news agency said Molotoff told Steinhardt.

"Soviet airplanes have not bombed towns and are not going to do so, but they bombed airdromes, because our government values the interests of the Finnish population no less than any other government does.

More Conscripts Called by King Of Great Britain

Proclamation Orders Them To Report for Duty on Dec. 9

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—A new class of conscripts which may be ordered to active military service early in the new year was called today to register Dec. 9 by proclamation of King George VI.

The third conscription proclamation of the year, it applies to men aged 20 to 23. It affects about 250,000 men, extending the liability for military service to men of 22 years and also to those who have reached the age of 20 since Oct. 1.

Some 240,000 men aged 20 were called up June 3; the second conscription proclamation, Oct. 1, applied to 21-year olds and those who had become 20 between June 3 and Oct. 1.

Few New Mines Sown

British naval authorities said few new-type German mines now were being sown and they asserted the problem was being solved.

Another British steamer, the 4,558-ton Dalryan, struck a mine today and sank off the southeast coast of England. Her crew was rescued.

The sinking of the 4,260-ton Finnish steamer Mercator by a mine off the Scottish coast also was disclosed with the landing of survivors. One member of the crew was missing.

The Danish schooner Grethe, 264 tons, sank off the mouth of the Thames. She was believed to have struck a submerged wreck.

The call for more conscripts was said by the British to be due to two factors:

More Men Available

1. The unexpected progress in training earlier classes.

2. The changing of age limits of reserved occupations so more men were retained for industrial work than had been expected.

A high British military source asserted Soviet Russia's invasion of Finland was "setting the stage" for Russian-German differences over domination of the Baltic.

Any Finnish concessions to Russia, he said, would give the latter the whip-hand in an area the Germans long have relied upon for important supplies.

Roosevelt Says Government May Loan Money To Link Power Systems

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt, in a fresh outline of the administration's power policy, asserted today that if Wall Street money was unavailable the government stood ready to lend funds for linking private electric power systems as a defense measure.

Discussing the whole field of power at a press conference, the chief executive also declared there was no immediate emergency in connection with the nation's power supply.

He again defended his 1938 proposal to create from seven to nine regional planning authorities in the nation's watersheds similar in some respects to the Tennessee Valley Authority and said waterpower development was a very minor phase of these plans.

Someone, he said without identifying him, had deliberately perverted his message to Congress on that subject by saying the other day that there were to be nine power authorities. The president said he had human engineering more in mind than civil engineering.

By human engineering, he said, he meant soil erosion prevention, tree planting, highway and waterway development, and taking people in abject poverty and placing them in new industrialized areas where they could make a living.

The discussion was prompted by a reporter's question about the series of conferences to start here next Tuesday between the Federal Power Policy Committee and representatives of fifty private power systems regarding methods of meeting the nation's future power demands.

Officials already had denied that these conferences would go into the question of a national power grid under which federal steam "standby" plants would be established and private and public power booked for quick concentration of energy in event of a national emergency. But the president was asked about this anyway.

He replied that a lot of rot had been written about that. No such system was contemplated, he said, adding that standby plants would be needed only in event of war and since this country had no thought of going to war there was no need to talk about that now.

8,500-Ton Warship Is Sent to Bottom, Report From Stockholm Asserts

Kirow, Completed in 1937, Meets Fate Off Hangoe, Finnish Sailors Declare Russian Resistance Has Been Surprisingly Weak; Demonstration for Finland in Sweden

Stockholm, Dec. 1 (AP) — A Finnish radio broadcast tonight reported the 8,500-ton Russian cruiser Kirow had been sunk off Hangoe, with 500 men aboard.

Finnish sailors were quoted in the broadcast as saying Russian resistance had been surprisingly weak.

"We are accustomed to hunting seals and though the Russians are bigger they therefore are easier to hit," the sailors said.

(Jane's fighting ships, authority on the world's navies, lists the Kirow as carrying normally a complement of 624 men and capable of thirty-five knots speed.

(The Kirow armament included six seven-inch guns, four four-inch, four 37 m.m., and four machine guns, six 21-inch torpedo tubes and two or three airplanes. She was laid down in 1934 and completed in 1937.)

SWEDES CHEER FOR FINNS

Stockholm, Dec. 1 (AP) — More than 2,000 Swedes led by white-capped students crowded before the Finnish legation tonight to sing and cheer in the first demonstration of Swedish sentiment since Soviet Russia invaded Finland.

Members of the legation staff stood on a balcony to watch.

When a leader cried, "long live Finland!" the crowd cheered lustily.

The government itself maintained strict silence on the situation.

Sweden sent a new protest to London today against the British German export blockade policy, reserving the right to claim indemnity.

France Ready To Reply if Germans Bomb Her Towns

Daladier Threatens Nazis with Attack; Raps Communists

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP) — France is ready to reply in kind if Germany bombs her towns, Premier Daladier told the world today.

At the same time he warned that anti-governmental acts by French Communists on the home front would be regarded as "terrible treason" to be dealt with summarily.

The premier's 23-minute broadcast, which was carried to the United States, was an abbreviated version of the speech he made to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, reporting on the first three months of the war.

He spoke after the Senate had voted 259 to 23 to extend his power to rule France by decree for the duration of the war. Yesterday the Chamber of Deputies twice voted

Three Virginians Found Guilty in Tarring of Count

Convicted of Constituting a Mob and Committing Assault

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—The tarring and feathering of Count Igor Cassini, chit-chat columnist for a Washington newspaper, resulted in the conviction today of three socially prominent Virginians on a charge of constituting a mob and committing assault.

The verdict, returned by a fauquier county jury after an hour and a half deliberation, resulted in a fine of $300 for Ian Mongomery, 39, self-styled originator of the episode, a fine of $150 for his brother Colin Montgomery, and a fine of $50 for Alexander Calvert.

Verdict Is Rewritten

When Foreman T. J. Huffman handed the verdict to clerk T. E. Bartenstein it read guilty of "simple assault," but after the

Pennsylvania Launches Drive To Rid the State of All Lotteries

Sharon, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP)—Launching a state-wide drive against lotteries, a force of fifty-seven state motor police swiftly raided more than a score of places in the Shenango Valley today and arrested more than thirty persons.

Lieut. Andrew Hudock, who directed the raids, said they were aimed primarily at a "numbers" lottery operated by Youngstown, O., syndicate, and at the operation of punch boards, pin ball games and similar forms of gambling.

The raid followed orders by Major Lynn Adams, head of the state motor police, for a clean up of lotteries in Pennsylvania.

Clad in plain clothes, most of the police invaded establishments in Sharon and Farrell shortly after noon. At the same time, three squads in cruiser cars patrolled roads leading to Ohio in search of "numbers" writers and men employed in collecting numbers slips.

Several women were among those taken into custody and held for hearings before Alderman Hayes Brooks who imposed $500 bonds in most cases.

Lieut. Hudock said three of those arrested were captured on the highways while apparently attempting to flee into Ohio. Private C. V. Clendenning of the Greensburg barracks, reported he caught one of the operators of the numbers lottery as he attempted to dash from one of the raided establishments.

Hudock said police had confiscated pinball and slot machines, "dream books", and numbers slips in a number of the raided establishments.

Sandburg Tells FDR Finland Is One of the Best-Run Democracies

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP) — Carl Sandburg, poet and Lincoln biographer, said he told President Roosevelt today in a discussion of Russia's invasion of Finland that "nations, like individuals, are inclined to be overly self-righteous."

"Finland is one of the best-run democracies in the world," the white-haired author said, "and we are all naturally melancholy about what's happening in Finland.

"It's also a melancholy feeling we have when we look back into our own history and see a time when Congressman Abraham Lincoln and Senator Thomas Corwin of Ohio both lost their seats because they opposed an imperialistic war that we conducted against Mexico."

Sandburg said he called the president's attention, in connection with the present European situation, to Lincoln's opposing the Mexican war and to claims of other public figures at that time that this country had been invaded by Mexico.

He said he also told Mr. Roosevelt about an Illinois farmer whose neighbors accused him of being greedy about land and the farmer's reply:

"I ain't greedy about land. I only want what jines mine."

Sandburg said he had driven many times over the citrus fruit territory between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, Texas, and it was such good country that he was now "glad we took it."

Sensing the apparent conflict in his statements, the author merely added:

"The more one studies Lincoln the more one feels that justice is complex."

(The Kirow armament included six seven-inch guns, four four-inch, four 37 m.m., and four machine guns, six 21-inch torpedo tubes and two or three airplanes. She was laid down in 1934 and completed in 1937.)

SWEDES CHEER FOR FINNS

Stockholm, Dec. 1 (AP) — More than 2,000 Swedes led by white-capped students crowded before the Finnish legation tonight to sing and cheer in the first demonstration of Swedish sentiment since Soviet Russia invaded Finland.

Members of the legation staff stood on a balcony to watch.

When a leader cried, "long live Finland!" the crowd cheered lustily.

The government itself maintained strict silence on the situation.

Sweden sent a new protest to London today against the British German export blockade policy, reserving the right to claim indemnity.

Daladier Threatens Nazis with Attack; Raps Communists

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP) — France is ready to reply in kind if Germany bombs her towns, Premier Daladier told the world today.

At the same time he warned that anti-governmental acts by French Communists on the home front would be regarded as "terrible treason" to be dealt with summarily.

The premier's 23-minute broadcast, which was carried to the United States, was an abbreviated version of the speech he made to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, reporting on the first three months of the war.

He spoke after the Senate had voted 259 to 23 to extend his power to rule France by decree for the duration of the war. Yesterday the Chamber of Deputies twice voted

Three Virginians Found Guilty in Tarring of Count

Convicted of Constituting a Mob and Committing Assault

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—The tarring and feathering of Count Igor Cassini, chit-chat columnist for a Washington newspaper, resulted in the conviction today of three socially prominent Virginians on a charge of constituting a mob and committing assault.

The verdict, returned by a fauquier county jury after an hour and a half deliberation, resulted in a fine of $300 for Ian Mongomery, 39, self-styled originator of the episode, a fine of $150 for his brother Colin Montgomery, and a fine of $50 for Alexander Calvert.

Verdict Is Rewritten

Roosevelt Says Government May Loan Money To Link Power Systems

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt, in a fresh outline of the administration's power policy, asserted today that if Wall Street money was unavailable the government stood ready to lend funds for linking private electric power systems as a defense measure.

Discussing the whole field of power at a press conference, the chief executive also declared there was no immediate emergency in connection with the nation's power supply.

He again defended his 1938 proposal to create from seven to nine regional planning authorities in the nation's watersheds similar in some respects to the Tennessee Valley Authority and said waterpower development was a very minor phase of these plans.

Someone, he said without identifying him, had deliberately perverted his message to Congress on that subject by saying the other day that there were to be nine power authorities. The president said he had human engineering more in mind than civil engineering.

By human engineering, he said, he meant soil erosion prevention, tree planting, highway and waterway development, and taking people in abject poverty and placing them in new industrialized areas where they could make a living.

The discussion was prompted by a reporter's question about the series of conferences to start here next Tuesday between the Federal Power Policy Committee and representatives of fifty private power systems regarding methods of meeting the nation's future power demands.

Officials already had denied that these conferences would go into the question of a national power grid under which federal steam "standby" plants would be established and private and public power booked for quick concentration of energy in event of a national emergency. But the president was asked about this anyway.

He replied that a lot of rot had been written about that. No such system was contemplated, he said, adding that standby plants would be needed only in event of war and since this country had no thought of going to war there was no need to talk about that now.

Pennsylvania Launches Drive To Rid the State of All Lotteries

Sharon, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP)—Launching a state-wide drive against lotteries, a force of fifty-seven state motor police swiftly raided more than a score of places in the Shenango Valley today and arrested more than thirty persons.

Lieut. Andrew Hudock, who directed the raids, said they were aimed primarily at a "numbers" lottery operated by Youngstown, O., syndicate, and at the operation of punch boards, pin ball games and similar forms of gambling.

The raid followed orders by Major Lynn Adams, head of the state motor police, for a clean up of lotteries in Pennsylvania.

Clad in plain clothes, most of the police invaded establishments in Sharon and Farrell shortly after noon. At the same time, three squads in cruiser cars patrolled roads leading to Ohio in search of "numbers" writers and men employed in collecting numbers slips.

Several women were among those taken into custody and held for hearings before Alderman Hayes Brooks who imposed $500 bonds in most cases.

Lieut. Hudock said three of those arrested were captured on the highways while apparently attempting to flee into Ohio. Private C. V. Clendenning of the Greensburg barracks, reported he caught one of the operators of the numbers lottery as he attempted to dash from one of the raided establishments.

Hudock said police had confiscated pinball and slot machines, "dream books", and numbers slips in a number of the raided establishments.

Sandburg Tells FDR Finland Is One of the Best-Run Democracies

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP) — Carl Sandburg, poet and Lincoln biographer, said he told President Roosevelt today in a discussion of Russia's invasion of Finland that "nations, like individuals, are inclined to be overly self-righteous."

"Finland is one of the best-run democracies in the world," the white-haired author said, "and we are all naturally melancholy about what's happening in Finland.

"It's also a melancholy feeling we have when we look back into our own history and see a time when Congressman Abraham Lincoln and Senator Thomas Corwin of Ohio both lost their seats because they opposed an imperialistic war that we conducted against Mexico."

Sandburg said he called the president's attention, in connection with the present European situation, to Lincoln's opposing the Mexican war and to claims of other public figures at that time that this country had been invaded by Mexico.

He said he also told Mr. Roosevelt about an Illinois farmer whose neighbors accused him of being greedy about land and the farmer's reply:

"I ain't greedy about land. I only want what jines mine."

Sandburg said he had driven many times over the citrus fruit territory between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, Texas, and it was such good country that he was now "glad we took it."

Sensing the apparent conflict in his statements, the author merely added:

"The more one studies Lincoln the more one feels that justice is complex."

American Planes May Be Withheld From the Soviets

"Moral Embargo" Being Considered by High Officials

PRESIDENT CONSIDERS BREAKING RELATIONS

Discusses Plans with Hull, but Reaches No Decision

Washington, Dec. 1. (AP)—A "moral embargo" on sale of American-made warplanes to Russia was put into effect tonight, the Washington Post said.

The report of the embargo, which the paper said was "unofficial but nationwide in extent," came within a few hours after President Roosevelt had condemned Russia's attack on Finland.

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP) — Soon after President Roosevelt had condemned Russia's attack on Finland, word circulated in the capital tonight that high officials were considering a "moral embargo" on the shipment of American - made warplanes to the Soviets.

Such a step, if taken, would serve to underscore the statement of the President, who declared that the Russian bombings were a "profound shock" to the United States and added that it was "tragic" to realize that "wanton disregard for law is still on the march."

There were reports also that the President was being urged by some of his advisers to break off diplomatic relations with Russia.

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have indicated to legislative leaders who conferred with him, either personally, or by telephone, that this question had been under consideration in lengthy discussions with Secretary Hull, but that no decision had been made.

"Moral Embargo" on Japan"

The "moral embargo" has been applied to Japan and rigidly enforced. No power exists to forbid such shipments, but, in the case of the Japanese, Secretary Hull appealed directly to American aircraft manufacturers and they have refused to fill Japanese orders. Hull's action was taken because of Japanese bombings of civilian populations in China.

Russian arms purchases in the United States have been comparatively light this year, amounting to only $1,066,887 through October. Commercial sources reported, however, that Soviet agents have been inquiring, in the last fortnight, about the possibility of placing orders for military planes of all types.

The President's statement said in part:

"All peace-loving peoples in those nations that are still hoping for the continuance of relations throughout the world on a basis of law and order will unanimously condemn the new resort to military force as the arbiter of international differences."

"To the great misfortune of the world, the present trend in force makes insecure the independent existence of small nations in every contient and jeopardizes the right of mankind to self - government."

Neutrality Action in Doubt

A decision on the question of applying the neutrality law to Russia and Finland awaited the receipt of complete facts on the case. These were slow in arriving, because of communication difficulties by telephone through the Scandinavian nations. Secretary Hull said that sometimes it was possible to hear only a word, or half a sentence, in long telephone calls.

Dispatches from the American legation at Helsinki were received, however, saying that the casualty list resulting from the Russian bombing of Helsinki and other centers of population included children. Residents of the Finnish capital, it was said, were rapidly leaving, in cars, busses and by foot. Fires were burning in the city, but were being brought under control. The legation staff was busy, too, transporting Americans to emergency quarters at Badgrankulla. About 300 Americans are in Finland.

An earlier dispatch told of a "heavy air raid' at Helsinki, starting about one o'clock this afternoon.

From Finnish sources, the legation reported a Russian effort to make a landing at Hangoe. Transports "visible at sea," it was said, "met with strong resistance."

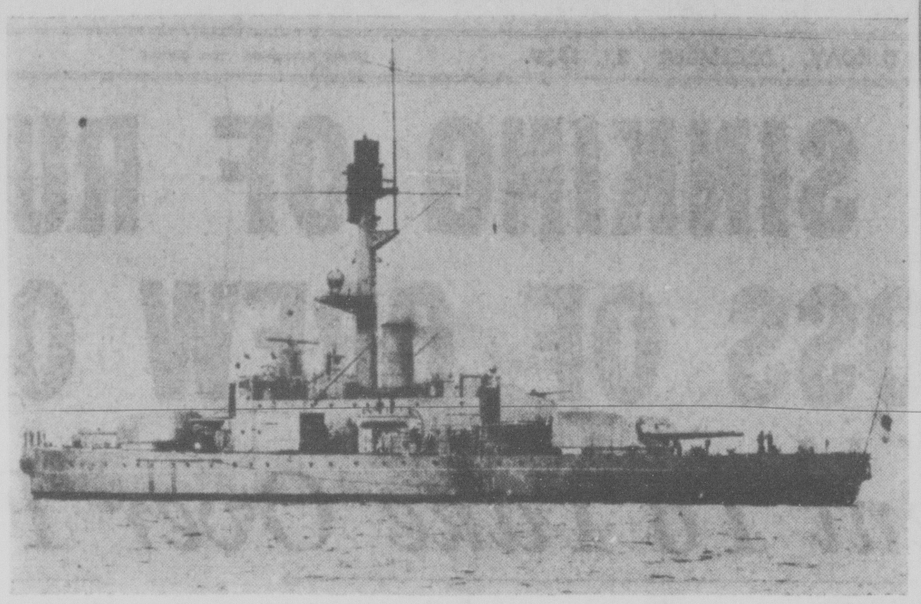
Mr. Roosevelt said he would discuss the Baltic developments with Congressional leaders by telephone. Presumably the question of the Neutrality Act was involved in these discussions.

Jean Parker Sues George MacDonald

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (AP) — Jean Parker, screen actress, filed suit for divorce today from George E. Macdonald, New York newspaper writer. She charged cruelty.

The suit revealed a property settlement had been effected. They were married March 21, 1936, and separated April 9.

PRIDE OF FINLAND'S TINY NAVY



Nearest thing that Finland has to a capital ship in her tiny navy is the Vainamoinen (above), a coastal defense vessel of 3,900 tons. She and a sister ship, five submarines, some motor torpedo boats and minor auxiliary craft make up the entire Finnish fleet. It faced an overwhelming assignment as the entire Soviet Baltic fleet was ordered into action in Russia's undeclared war on the tiny republic.

large landowners would be seized and distributed among peasants having no land as one feature of a nine-point program of drastic economic change.

The new government would have a "pact of mutual assistance" with Russia.

What Tass published was a "declaration of the people's government of Finland," which it said was "received by radio and translated from the Finnish."

(A dispatch from Helsinki said the reported formation of the insurgent government drew only sardonic laughter in the Finnish capital.)

People's Government Views

In stating its aims the "People's government" said it "has every ground to hope that its firm course of establishing friendly relations with the Soviet union will enable the government of the Union of Socialist Soviet republics to comply with this proposal."

In setting forth the government's aims the statement said:

"The People's government of Finland regards as its primary task the overthrow of the government of Finnish White Guards, the rout of its armed forces, and conclusion of a peace ensuring the independence and security of Finland by means of establishment of lasting friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

"The people's government of Finland addresses the government of the U. S. S. R., a proposal to conclude a pact of mutual assistance between Finland and the Soviet Union and to comply with the age-old national hope of the Finnish people for a reunion of the Karelian people with it in a single and independent state of Finland."

As for domestic aims, the declaration said:

"In its internal policy the people's government sets itself the following tasks:

"1. Creation of a People's army of Finland.

"2. Institution of state control over large private banks and large industrial enterprises and realization of measures assisting medium and small enterprises.

"3. Realization of measures for a complete elimination of unemployment.

"4. Reduction of the working day to eight hours, with a provision of two-weeks summer vacations for workers and a reduction of house rents for workers and employes.

"5. Confiscation of lands belonging to big landowners, without touching the lands of peasants, and transfer of the confiscated land to peasants having no land or possessing small allotments.

"6. Exemption of peasants from payment of tax arrears.

"7. State assistance in every form for the improvement of economies of poor peasants, in the first place by allotting to them additional land, pastures and when possible forests for their domestic needs, from lands confiscated from the large landowners.

"8. Democratization of state organization, administration and courts.

"9. Enhancement of state subsidies for cultural needs and reorganization of schools; to ensure the possibility of attendance in schools to the children of workers and other needy people, and also solicitude in every form for the development of public education, science, literature and the arts in a progressive spirit."

Attack Present Leaders

The Tass statement attacked the "criminal policy of the contemptible government of Cajander, Erkko and Tanner," and said the people's government "hereby calls the entire Finnish people to a determined struggle for the overthrow of the tyranny of hangmen and war provocateurs."

"The wide masses of the Finnish toiling people," said the statement, "consider it their elementary right and sacred duty to take the fate of the Fatherland into their own reliable hands.

"People rose in various parts of the country and proclaimed formation of a Democratic republic.

"The Soviet Union, which never threatened or disturbed Finland, which always respected her independence and for some twenty years tolerated vile war provocations on the part of the adventurist rulers of White Finland, has now been confronted with the necessity to put an end to these threats to its independence by forces of the Red Army."

After inviting the aid of the Red Army in its aims, the new government continued its statement as follows:

"For participation in the joint struggle, hand-in-hand with the heroic Red army of the U. S. S. R., the People's government of Finland already has formed the first Finnish army corps, which in the course of forthcoming battles will receive reinforcements by volunteers coming from revolutionary workers and peasants and must become the strong backbone of the future People's army of Finland."

As for the type of government, it asserted:

"Our state is not a state of the Soviet type because of Soviet regime cannot be established by the efforts of the government alone without the consent of the whole people in a particular peasantry.

"Inconformity with the above our government is a People's government of the Democratic Republic of Finland. It will rely for support on the broad People's front of toilers."

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Amused at Probe

Smiles Broadly at Session of Dies Investigating Committee

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Dies Committee heard words and music today while Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt looked on with a benign smile.

The first lady was back at the committee's investigation of un-American activities to hear more youths testify and appeared amused when Joseph Lash, a young witness, warbled:

"If you see an un-American lurking
far or near,
Just alkalize with Martin Dies, and
he will disappear."

This musical interlude occurred during the committee's investigation of charges of Communism in the American Youth Congress and the American Students' Union, of which Lash is national secretary.

Lash's organization had been accused by Major Hampden Wilson, committee investigator, of being a vehicle for the spread of Communism in colleges and high schools. Lash replied that so far as he could determine Wilson had talked to none of ASU's members.

"The heart" of ASU's program, he declared, could be summed up as follows: "Irrespective of what students think, they should think; they should concern themselves with social problems."

The organization's activities included, he went on, watchfulness that civil liberties are preserved, forums on peace, advocacy of measures to meet "human needs," and cultural programs such as social plays.

Lash acknowledged that there were Communists in the students' union, asserting that one of its original national officers, Celeste Strack, was one. She was in charge of "high school work," he said.

Russia Denies

see this from America, which is over eight thousand kilometers (5,000 miles) away from Finland, nevertheless facts are facts.

"In view of this Roosevelt's above statement is, as can be seen, pointless."

Mr. Roosevelt addressed his appeal jointly to Russia and Finland. It was similar to others addressed to belligerents in recent conflicts.

Finnish Success

en the post of minister without portfolio.

Cajander and former Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, who were assailed by Russia as inimical to the Soviets, were dropped.

(An indication that the Ryti government also was considered hostile by Russia was seen when Tass, official Soviet Russian news agency, said the "hated" Cajander government had been replaced by "Tanner's government x x x but Tanner is an enemy of our people just like Cajander."

Hint Continued Invasion

(Tass reported in Moscow that a "people's government of the Democratic republic of Finland" had been formed in Terijoki, a Finnish town near where the Russians first crossed the border yesterday. Its criticism of Tanner indicated the invasion of Finland would continue until Helsinki fell and a new government was set up.)

The Finnish capital went through the heaviest aerial attack of the two-day-old invasion this afternoon. Flames spread through the capital.

Helsinki's police chief said the thirty women and children were killed in the working class district during the raid.

A railway warehouse was demolished but rail traffic was not affected.

There was no bombardment of Helsinki by Soviet warships, but the air and naval bombardment of Hangoe was described as extreme and it was expected Soviet forces might attempt a landing to reduce the stubborn fortress there.

What was described as a "tremendous" Soviet attack along the southeastern border was reported repulsed by Finnish troops, with hundreds of Russians taken prisoner and a heavy loss of life on the Soviet side.

Sixteen Russian tanks were wrecked by mines or gunfire in this engagement, military authorities said.

(However, a Finnish reverse was reported in the far north.

(Soviet troops dropped to earth in parachutes from larger airplanes were said to have captured Petsamo, the republic's chief Arctic Ocean port. Petsamo and the town of Liinahamari were reported in flames from repeated air raids.)

Helsinki was not the only object of Soviet airmen. Their low-flying planes bombed principal ports on Finland's south coast, particularly Viborg and Kotka, about sixty-five miles east of Helsinki, and also struck at Abo (Turku), on the west coast and 250 miles from the Russian frontier.

Ten bombers were said to have been shot down at Viborg.

It was reported, without confirmation, that civiliansi n Abo were machine-gunned as they were in Helsinki.

There were no estimates of the casualties in Finland.

In Helsinki, Finnish anti-aircraft guns were said to have shot down several raiding planes.

During the afternoon, Russian fliers dropped handbills containing a Finnish translation of a speech by Russia's Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff saying he could not deal with the Cajander government.

Neutrals in Helsinki fled to outlying sections or sought to leave the country as the invasion continued.

Approximately 200 Americans, Britons and other foreigners took refuge at Grankulla, a small town about ten miles west of Helsinki, where H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, U. S. minister to Finland, established emergency headquarters.

Latest reports in Washington said about 300 Americans were in Finland.

In reshuffling the cabinet Ryti held over six ministers from the Cajander cabinet. Besides Tanner, former finance minister, now foreign minister, they were:

Juho Niukkanen, retained as minister of defense; Dr. J. O. Soedderhjelm, retained as minister of justice; Ernst Von Born, new interior department head and former minister without portfolio; Uno Hannula and Pekka Heikkinen, retained as minister of education and agriculture, respectively.

M. Pekkala was named to the finance post, succeeding Tanner; B. Kotelainen was given the commerce position; K. Fagerholm heads the social welfare ministry, and R. Von Fleandt was made minister of public works.

"Poor" Widow Is Found To Have Left $540,300

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The secret wealth of a frugal widow who avowedly spent her declining days on the fringe of poverty added up today to the amazing total of $540,300.

The central figure in the strange case was Mrs. Jeanette Lincoln. For some time before her death on Nov. 15 at the age of 58 she roomed and boarded at the home of distant relatives. She gave them $5 a week. They believed she was poor.

A week ago a safety deposit box was found. It contained $279,000 in $1,000 and $500 bills. In addition, a $5,000 checking account and a $3,300 savings account in her name were located.

But the full extent of her riches did not become known until today, when a deputy clerk, round-eyed and breathless, dashed into the probate court and cried:

"I've just seen more money than I ever saw before in my life."

Mrs. Lincoln's attorney, James R. Glass, had found another deposit vault. It was crammed with $103,000 in cash and $150,000 in negotiable securities.

In it also were two wills. Both were drawn Feb. 9, 1909. One, executed by Mrs. Lincoln's husband, Willis, a former real estate broker who died in August, 1938, left everything to his widow. Mrs. Lincoln's testament bequeathed her fortune to her husband.

Because he preceded her in death, the money, stocks and bonds will go to her closest heirs—William Krullaars, a Chicago artist, a brother, and Mrs. Reika Stedman of Laguna Beach, Calif., a sister.

Police Officers Meet Next Week

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Co-ordination between judicial and law enforcement agencies, the traffic safety campaign and other related subjects will be discussed at the annual meeting of the Maryland Police Association here next Wednesday.

The association, composed of city, county and state law enforcement officers, will hear reports and addresses and elect officers at the morning session, discuss law enforcement problems in the afternoon and hold the annual banquet and dance that night.

Speakers at the opening session will be Governor O'Conor, Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Marcus H. Miles, chief of police at Sparrows Point and president of the association.

Speakers at the afternoon session and their subjects will be:

Magistrate Elmer J. Hammer, "Court Procedure Relating to Police Officers."

Judge T. Scott Offutt of the Court of Appeals, "A Topic of Interest to Peace Enforcement Officers."

H. H. Clegg, assistant director of the F. B. I., "Professionalized Law Enforcement."

Colonel Beverly Ober, superintendent of state police, "One Aim of the State Police in Co-Operation with the Governor's Safety Committee."

Speaker at the banquet will be Associate Judge J. Abner Sayler of the Supreme bench of Baltimore City. His topic will be "Presentation of Evidence." Harry Evans Cassidy, inspector for the Chesapeake and Ohio Lines, will be toastmaster.

Autoists, Pedestrians Urged To Use Care

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—Pedestrians and motorists were urged today to exert every effort "to offset as much as possible the added traffic hazards" that appear with winter.

Governor O'Conor, speaking for his Traffic Safety Committee, cautioned motorists that "the laws of nature are stronger than the well-known law of averages when it comes to winter traffic accidents."

The governor pointed out that although December had one of the lowest traffic volumes of any month, its death toll "exceeds some of the warm weather months by as much as twenty-five per cent."

The Safety Committee explained that driving conditions are worse in December, when darkness comes earlier and icy pavements increase the danger of skidding.

"Since drivers are handicapped in vision on dark or stormy winter days and evenings, the pedestrian should be cooperative by allowing more distance between himself and passing or approaching cars," the committee added.

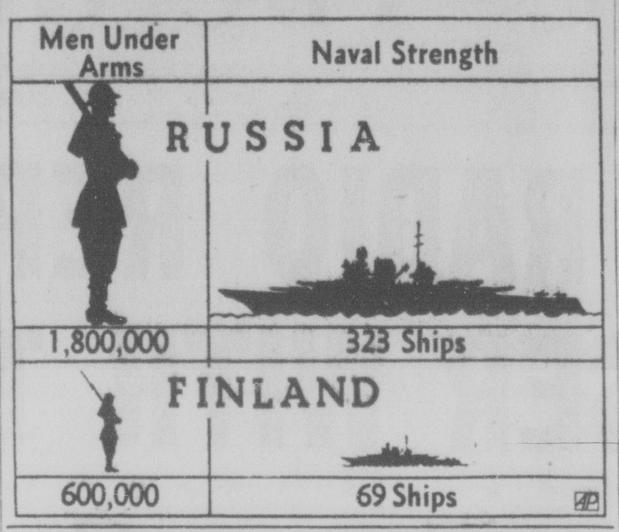
Dr. Charles Palmer Dies at Age of 81

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP) — Dr. Charles Skeele Palmer, 81, who developed a gasoline "cracking" process in 1900 and sold his patents to the Standard Oil Company in 1907, died yesterday.

Under his process, oil was broken down into gasoline, fuel oil and gas.

He was a former member of the University of Colorado faculty, a fellow at Mellon Institute, and chemist for textile and copper industries.

HERE'S HOW FORCES COMPARE



INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The impact of the Russian invasion of Finland on already tense situations in the Balkans, the Mediterranean and Scandinavia share attention with new tales of horror from the scene of the Soviet attack on her little neighbor.

Happenings more significant for Europe, and for the world, than the course Finland chooses in her dark hour may be taking shape backstage in capitals physically remote from the new war. They could broaden the endurance battle between Germany and the Franco-British Allies into an all-European struggle, if not another World War almost overnight.

Finnish Course Uncertain

Whether Finland is forced to quick capitulation by Russian might and Russian threats of more terrible attack, or elects to go down fighting against all odds, the European war stage has now been reset by Russia for developments of still incalculable effect. The very caution of government officials in Rome, in the Scandinavian capitals and in the troubled Balkans in commenting on the Russo-Finnish conflict itself reflects the extreme tension Russia's move has created.

That public opinion nearly everywhere in neutral Europe has been stirred to deep resentment against Russia is obvious from press reaction. It finds its sharpest expression in Italy, already somewhat estranged from her former axis partner, Germany, by the Nazi-Soviet fellowship. Italian comment holds that the Franco-British Allies cannot continue to ignore Russia's share in precipitating the war in Europe through her cooperation with Germany in dismemberment of Poland. Rome editors argue that by every moral precept stated by Premier Daladier or Prime Minister Chamberlain restoration of Finland must now be included in the Allied war aims.

Italy May Join Allies

There is a definite hint there that Italy is in a mood to make a final break with Berlin, and even to join the Allies if they turn on Russia because of her attack on Finland. There is no question that Italian diplomats in Balkan capitals which are haunted by fears that the Red army and air power will be hurled in their direction, are working at fever pitch to build up an Italian-Balkan entente of resistance, perhaps backed by military commitments to take joint action if Russia moves.

Allied military aid for Finland is ruled out of the question in London and Paris. That does not foreclose the possibility that the Allies might seek diplomatic realignments or offer Italy inducements to abandon her neutral role and throw her weight into the struggle against the Russo-German fellowship. Nor does it necessarily mean that the French and British would refuse armed aid to such Scandinavian neutrals as Sweden and Norway if the Russian attack spread to them.

Stalin's Course Uncertain

Whatever the final upshot for Finland, the Russian drive to compel acceptance of her territorial demands by force of arms has stripped away doubt for Italy, for jeopardized Balkan statts, caught in the pincers of the German-British-French war, and for Scandinavia as to how far Moscow is prepared to go. Up to the moment of actual Russian attack, the belief was widely held on both sides of the Atlantic that Stalin would not risk war involvement; but use the war in Europe for diplomatic leverage to gain his ends in the Baltic, the Balkans and in the ice-free sea lanes of the Arctic.

Russia is striking in Finland not only to inspire terror there, but in the Balkans and Scandinavia as well. Back of her decision must lie the fact that virtually all the small European states, as well as Italy, have indicated by their recent policies that they expect the French and British to defeat Germany ultimately.

That expectation was first reflected in Italian coolness toward her German axis partner from the hour the Russo-German deal was announced to a stunned world. It was further quickly indicated when Turkey scorned Moscow's proffers or threats and aligned herself with France and Britain in the three-cornered mutual assistance pact that bars the Dardenelles to an aggressive Russia.

The Russian attack on Finland only serves to strengthen belief in many quarters that it comes of Russia's fear that th struggle between Germany and the allies may end before she can make good her Baltic aspirations by diplomatic means alone.

Republicans Will Bring Prosperity, Bridges Declares

Portland, Ore., Dec. 1 (AP)—Americans, after "seven long years" of the New Deal, still believe in "a free government and a free economy," Sen. H. Styles Bridges (R-NH) declared tonight.

The candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, in a speech prepared for delivery at a Republican banquet, outlined a three-point program:

"To bring about x x x recovery, we are going to see to it x x x that the government spends not more but less. x x x We will cut down on the countless boards and commissions and agencies now harassing and restricting legitimate business. x x x We will see to it that such necessary boards and commissions as the National Labor Relations Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission are administered not to dominate business but to encourage it."

Bridges declared Republicans would carry the platform to "victory" and the "restoration of sane government in America."

The senator said social security would be put on "a pay-as-you-go" basis, Republicans would strive to raise wages and lower commodity prices to consumers through "creation of new wealth," and "x x x put a ceiling over hours and a floor under wages without adding to governmental bureaucracy and without placing vast discretionary powers in the hands of one man."

A return to protective tariff was advocated by Bridges, who asserted reciprocal trade treaties had "invited the inflow of cheap foreign-made goods x x x (and) by restricting production at home, x x x invited increased production in foreign nations."

France Ready

vondifence in Daladier's government and approved extension of his decree powers.

Speaking a day following the Soviet Russian invasion of Finland, Daladier referred to these operations when he said:

"You have learned that Germany stands in a common front with a country whose system she formerly decried as an abomination. She has concluded a treaty with Communist Russia and now we are witnessing the results of this pact."

This was the reason, he continued, that France was forced to suppress the Communist party in France when the European war started.

It was understood that Daladier's warning of air retaliation was the result of recent broadcasts by the German radio station at stuttgart containing threats to bomb le Havre and other French cities.

France "will not suffer alone" if the "enemy fuehrer" starts that kind of "barbaric warfare," he declared.

The war will go on, he said, until "our security is guaranteed and when we can treat fairly with responsible governments."

Searching for Berries, Drowns in Swamp

Willards, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—A quest for red berries to put on homemade holly wreaths led Woodrow Rayne, 27, to his death in the Pocomoke river swamps.

His body was found by a searching party today, twenty-four hours after he had entered the swamps and failed to return to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rayne.

The young man was lying face down at the river's edge, with his head in the water. Near by was a half-filled basket of red berries.

A verdict of accidental death by drowning was returned by C. T. Fisher, acting medical examiner for Wicomico county. Rayne was believed to have suffered an attack of dizziness and fallen into the water.

Dewey Says He'll Be Glad To Run in Presidential Race

Boom for New York Prosecutor Given Impetus by Leaders

ASSERTS REPUBLICANS WILL REAWAKEN HOPE

Believes Party Will Restore Stable Business to Nation

By SCOTT HERSHEY

New York, Dec. 1. (AP)—A presidential boom for Thomas E. Dewey was set off today at a ceremony in which the New York district attorney formally entered the lists for the Republican nomination.

Replying to a declaration by a group of state party leaders that they were convinced Dewey could carry not only the "pivotal" state of New York "but also the country at large next year against any opponent," Dewey declared:

"I will be glad to make the fight.

"I have confidence in the Republican party, which has always stood for good government and stable business," he said. "Today its responsibility is to reweaken hope and courage in a nation which is driven almost to despair by incompetent government and unstable business."

Has "Faith in Nation"

Dewey added that he had "faith in the nation and in its future and in every element of its people."

"Relieved of a hostile and sniping government," Dewey said, "I am convinced that they can again learn to pull together for a happy and united nation."

Dewey was interviewed at the opening of "Dewey for President" headquarters in which were gathered Republican leaders from throughout the state.

The manifesto was read to Dewey by J. Russel Sprague, Republican chairman of Nassau county, who will direct the pre-convention campaign. It extended "to all citizens a cordial invitation to join with us" to bring about Dewey's nomination.

Praised for Ability

"Convinced that he possesses above all other leaders in the country today the ability, temperament, training and ideals which the next president of the United States must have, the statement recited, "we have determined to cooperate in the movement to elect Thomas E. Dewey president in 1940."

Dewey disclosed that he would enter presidential primary elections in some states, which he did not name, but emphasized he would not seek delegations in states where there are other "active and genuine" candidates, including his native state of Michigan.

"For example," he said, "I certainly will not go into Michigan, for I believe that Senator Vandenberg is entitled to the delegates from his state."

Dewey's first public appearance as a candidate will be before the Minnesota Central Republican Committee in Minneapolis, Dec. 6. Returning from Minneapolis, Dewey will arrive in Washington Dec. 9 for conferences with some Republican senators and representatives before attending the annual newspapermen's gridiron dinner that night.

judge had questioned the jury as to whether the verdict mean guilty of constituting a mob and committing an assault it was rewritten and signed by the foreman.

Under the indictment the jury had the discretion of either convicting the trio of a felony carrying a penalty of one to ten years imprisonment or of a misdemeanor carrying a penalty permitting a fine up to $500, or of acquitting them.

Commonwealth's Attorney Clarence W. Carter charged in his closing argument that the defense counsel was asking the jury "to express your approval of mob violence" by acquitting the defendants. The prosecutor did not recommend any specific punishment.

State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, a member of the defense staff, declared that "these young men rendered a public service to this community."

Disrobed and Tarred

Cassini, 24-year-old grandson of a former Russian ambassador to the United States, was forced into an automobile at the Warrenton Country club on the early morning of last June 25, driven into the country, and tarred and feathered after being disrobed.

Ian Montgomery, who attempted in testimony to take full desponsibility for the affair, said Cassini had written disparaging items about the Montgomery family and he wanted to learn the source of the count's information. He said he wished to "scare" Cassini so that he would remain out of the community.

Cassini testified he was beaten and threatened with emasculation but the defendants denied they did him any bodily injury.

American Planes May Be Withheld From the Soviets

Discusses Plans with Hull, but Reaches No Decision

Washington, Dec. 1. (AP)—A "moral embargo" on sale of American-made warplanes to Russia was put into effect tonight, the Washington Post said.

The report of the embargo, which the paper said was "unofficial but nationwide in extent," came within a few hours after President Roosevelt had condemned Russia's attack on Finland.

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP) — Soon after President Roosevelt had condemned Russia's attack on Finland, word circulated in the capital tonight that high officials were considering a "moral embargo" on the shipment of American - made warplanes to the Soviets.

Such a step, if taken, would serve to underscore the statement of the President, who declared that the Russian bombings were a "profound shock" to the United States and added that it was "tragic" to realize that "wanton disregard for law is still on the march."

There were reports also that the President was being urged by some of his advisers to break off diplomatic relations with Russia.

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have indicated to legislative leaders who conferred with him, either personally, or by telephone, that this question had been under consideration in lengthy discussions with Secretary Hull, but that no decision had been made.

"Moral Embargo" on Japan"

The "moral embargo" has been applied to Japan and rigidly enforced. No power exists to forbid such shipments, but, in the case of the Japanese, Secretary Hull appealed directly to American aircraft manufacturers and they have refused to fill Japanese orders. Hull's action was taken because of Japanese bombings of civilian populations in China.

Russian arms purchases in the United States have been comparatively light this year, amounting to only $1,066,887 through October. Commercial sources reported, however, that Soviet agents have been inquiring, in the last fortnight, about the possibility of placing orders for military planes of all types.

The President's statement said in part:

"All peace-loving peoples in those nations that are still hoping for the continuance of relations throughout the world on a basis of law and order will unanimously condemn the new resort to military force as the arbiter of international differences."

"To the great misfortune of the world, the present trend in force makes insecure the independent existence of small nations in every contient and jeopardizes the right of mankind to self - government."

Neutrality Action in Doubt

A decision on the question of applying the neutrality law to Russia and Finland awaited the receipt of complete facts on the case. These were slow in arriving, because of communication difficulties by telephone through the Scandinavian nations. Secretary Hull said that sometimes it was possible to hear only a word, or half a sentence, in long telephone calls.

Dispatches from the American legation at Helsinki were received, however, saying that the casualty list resulting from the Russian bombing of Helsinki and other centers of population included children. Residents of the Finnish capital, it was said, were rapidly leaving, in cars, busses and by foot. Fires were burning in the city, but were being brought under control. The legation staff was busy, too, transporting Americans to emergency quarters at Badgrankulla. About 300 Americans are in Finland.

An earlier dispatch told of a "heavy air raid' at Helsinki, starting about one o'clock this afternoon.

From Finnish sources, the legation reported a Russian effort to make a landing at Hangoe. Transports "visible at sea," it was said, "met with strong resistance."

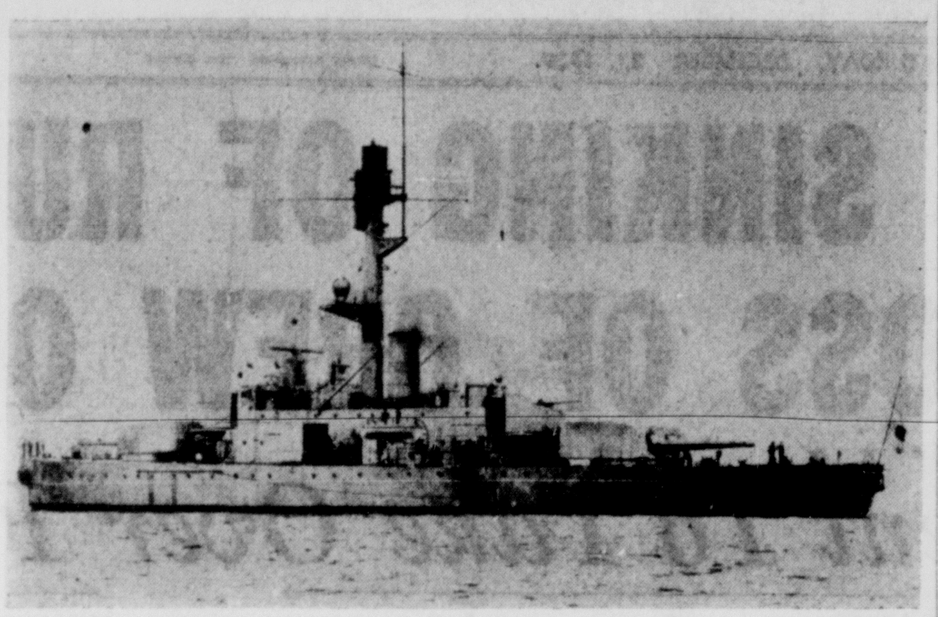
Mr. Roosevelt said he would discuss the Baltic developments with Congressional leaders by telephone. Presumably the question of the Neutrality Act was involved in these discussions.

Jean Parker Sues George MacDonald

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (AP) — Jean Parker, screen actress, filed suit for divorce today from George E. Macdonald, New York newspaper writer. She charged cruelty.

The suit revealed a property settlement had been effected. They were married March 21, 1936, and separated April 9.

PRIDE OF FINLAND'S TINY NAVY



Nearest thing that Finland has to a capital ship in her tiny navy is the Vainamoinen (above), a coastal defense vessel of 3,900 tons. She and a sister ship, five submarines, some motor torpedo boats and minor auxiliary craft make up the entire Finnish fleet. It faced an overwhelming assignment as the entire Soviet Baltic fleet was ordered into action in Russia's undeclared war on the tiny republic.

Soviet State

large landowners would be seized and distributed among peasants having no land as one feature of a nine-point program of drastic economic change.

The new government would have a "pact of mutual assistance" with Russia.

What Tass published was a "declaration of the people's government of Finland," which it said was "received by radio and translated from the Finnish."

(A dispatch from Helsinki said the reported formation of the insurgent government drew only sardonic laughter in the Finnish capital.)

The statement attacked the new Finnish government formed in Helsinki today with terms just as bitter as those used against the resigned government of Premier Aimo K. Cajandtr.

People's Government Views

In stating its aims the "People's government" said it "has every ground to hope that its firm course of establishing friendly relations with the Soviet union will enable the government of the Union of Socialist Soviet republics to comply with this proposal."

In setting forth the government's aims the statement said:

"The People's government of Finland regards as its primary task the overthrow of the government of Finnish White Guards, the rout of its armed forces, and conclusion of a peace ensuring the independence and security of Finland by means of establishment of lasting friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

"The people's government of Finland addresses the government of the U. S. S. R., a proposal to conclude a pact of mutual assistance between Finland and the Soviet Union and to comply with the age-old national hope of the Finnish people for a reunion of the Karelian people with it in a single and independent state of Finland."

As for domestic aims, the declaration said:

"In its internal policy the people's government sets itself the following tasks:

"1. Creation of a People's army of Finland.

"2. Institution of state control over large private banks and large industrial enterprises and realization of measures assisting medium and small enterprises.

"3. Realization of measures for a complete elimination of unemployment.

"4. Reduction of the working day to eight hours, with a provision of two-weeks summer vacations for workers and a reduction of house rents for workers and employes.

"5. Confiscation of lands belonging to big landowners, without touching the lands of peasants, and transfer of the confiscated land to peasants having no land or possessing small allotments.

"6. Exemption of peasants from payment of tax arrears.

"7. State assistance in every form for the improvement of economies of poor peasants, in the first place by allotting to them additional land, pastures and when possible forests for their domestic needs, from lands confiscated from the large landowners.

"8. Democratization of state organization, administration and courts.

"9. Enhancement of state subsidies for cultural needs and reorganization of schools; to ensure the possibility of attendance in schools to the children of workers and other needy people, and also solicitude in every form for the development of public education, science, literature and the arts in a progressive spirit."

Attack Present Leaders

The Tass statement attacked the "criminal policy of the contemptible government of Cajander, Erkko and Tanner," and said the people's government "hereby calls the entire Finnish people to a determined struggle for the overthrow of the tyranny of hangmen and war provocateurs."

"The wide masses of the Finnish toiling people," said the statement, "consider it their elementary right and sacred duty to take the fate of the Fatherland into their own reliable hands.

"People rose in various parts of the country and proclaimed formation of a Democratic republic.

"The Soviet Union, which never threatened or disturbed Finland, which always respected her independence and for some twenty years tolerated vile war provocations on the part of the adventurist rulers of White Finland, has now been confronted with the necessity to put an end to these threats to its independence by forces of the Red Army."

After inviting the aid of the Red Army in its aims, the new government continued its statement as follows:

"For participation in the joint struggle, hand-in-hand with the heroic Red army of the U. S. S. R., the People's government of Finland already has formed the first Finnish army corps, which in the course of forthcoming battles will receive reinforcements by volunteers coming from revolutionary workers and peasants and must become the strong backbone of the future People's army of Finland."

As for the type of government, it asserted:

"Our state is not a state of the Soviet type because of Soviet regime cannot be established by the efforts of the government alone without the consent of the whole people in a particular peasantry.

"Inconformity with the above our government is a People's government of the Democratic Republic of Finland. It will rely for support on the broad People's front of toilers."

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Amused at Probe

Smiles Broadly at Session of Dies Investigating Committee

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Dies Committee heard words and music today while Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt looked on with a benign smile.

The first lady was back at the committee's investigation of un-American activities to hear more youths testify and appeared amused when Joseph Lash, a young witness, warbled:

"If you see an un-American lurking
far or near,
Just alkalize with Martin Dies, and
he will disappear."

This musical interlude occurred during the committee's investigation of charges of Communism in the American Youth Congress and the American Students' Union, of which Lash is national secretary.

Lash's organization had been accused by Major Hampden Wilson, committee investigator, of being a vehicle for the spread of Communism in colleges and high schools. Lash replied that so far as he could determine Wilson had talked to none of ASU's members.

"The heart" of ASU's program, he declared, could be summed up as follows: "Irrespective of what students think, they should think; they should concern themselves with social problems."

The organization's activities included, he went on, watchfulness that civil liberties are preserved, forums on peace, advocacy of measures to meet "human needs," and cultural programs such as social plays.

Lash acknowledged that there were Communists in the students' union, asserting that one of its original national officers, Celeste Strack, was one. She was in charge of "high school work," he said.

see this from America, which is over eight thousand kilometers (5,000 miles) away from Finland, nevertheless facts are facts.

"In view of this Roosevelt's above statement is, as can be seen, pointless."

Mr. Roosevelt addressed his appeal jointly to Russia and Finland. It was similar to others addressed to belligerents in recent conflicts.

en the post of minister without portfolio.

Cajander and former Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, who were assailed by Russia as inimical to the Soviets, were dropped.

(An indication that the Ryti government also was considered hostile by Russia was seen when Tass, official Soviet Russian news agency, said the "hated" Cajander government had been replaced by "Tanner's government x x x but Tanner is an enemy of our people just like Cajander."

Hint Continued Invasion

(Tass reported in Moscow that a "people's government of the Democratic republic of Finland" had been formed in Terijoki, a Finnish town near where the Russians first crossed the border yesterday. Its criticism of Tanner indicated the invasion of Finland would continue until Helsinki fell and a new government was set up.)

The Finnish capital went through the heaviest aerial attack of the two-day-old invasion this afternoon. Flames spread through the capital.

Helsinki's police chief said the thirty women and children were killed in the working class district during the raid.

A railway warehouse was demolished but rail traffic was not affected.

There was no bombardment of Helsinki by Soviet warships, but the air and naval bombardment of Hangoe was described as extreme and it was expected Soviet forces might attempt a landing to reduce the stubborn fortress there.

What was described as a "tremendous" Soviet attack along the southeastern border was reported repulsed by Finnish troops, with hundreds of Russians taken prisoner and a heavy loss of life on the Soviet side.

Sixteen Russian tanks were wrecked by mines or gunfire in this engagement, military authorities said.

(However, a Finnish reverse was reported in the far north.

(Soviet troops dropped to earth in parachutes from larger airplanes were said to have captured Petsamo, the republic's chief Arctic Ocean port. Petsamo and the town of Llinahamari were reported in flames from repeated air raids.)

Helsinki was not the only object of Soviet airmen. Their low-flying planes bombed principal ports on Finland's south coast, particularly Viborg and Kotka, about sixty-five miles east of Helsinki, and also struck at Abo (Turku), on the west coast and 250 miles from the Russian frontier.

Ten bombers were said to have been shot down at Viborg.

It was reported, without confirmation, that civiliansi n Abo were machine-gunned as they were in Helsinki.

There were no estimates of the casualties in Finland.

In Helsinki, Finnish anti-aircraft guns were said to have shot down several raiding planes.

During the afternoon, Russian fliers dropped handbills containing a Finnish translation of a speech by Russia's Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff saying he could not deal with the Cajander government.

Neutrals in Helsinki fled to outlying sections or sought to leave the country as the invasion continued.

Approximately 200 Americans, Britons and other foreigners took refuge at Grankulla, a small town about ten miles west of Helsinki, where H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, U. S. minister to Finland, established emergency headquarters.

Latest reports in Washington said about 300 Americans were in Finland.

In reshuffling the cabinet Ryti held over six ministers from the Cajander cabinet. Besides Tanner, former finance minister, now foreign minister, they were:

Juho Niukkanen, retained as minister of defense; Dr. J. O. Soedderhjelm, retained as minister of justice; Ernst Von Born, new interior department head and former minister without portfolio; Uno Hannula and Pekka Heikkinen, retained as minister of education and agriculture, respectively.

M. Pekkala was named to the finance post, succeeding Tanner; B. Kotelainen was given the commerce position; K. Fagerholm heads the social welfare ministry, and R. Von Fieandt was made minister of public works.

"Poor" Widow Is Found To Have Left $540,300

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The secret wealth of a frugal widow who avowedly spent her declining days on the fringe of poverty added up today to the amazing total of $540,300.

The central figure in the strange case was Mrs. Jeanette Lincoln. For some time before her death on Nov. 15 at the age of 58 she roomed and boarded at the home of distant relatives. She gave them $5 a week. They believed she was poor.

A week ago a safety deposit box was found. It contained $279,000 in $1,000 and $500 bills. In addition, a $5,000 checking account and a $3,300 savings account in her name were located.

But the full extent of her riches did not become known until today, when a deputy clerk, round-eyed and breathless, dashed into the probate court and cried:

"I've just seen more money than I ever saw before in my life."

Mrs. Lincoln's attorney, James R. Glass, had found another deposit vault. It was crammed with $103,000 in cash and $150,000 in negotiable securities.

In it also were two wills. Both were drawn Feb. 9, 1909. One, executed by Mrs. Lincoln's husband, Willis, a former real estate broker who died in August, 1938, left everything to his widow. Mrs. Lincoln's testament bequeathed her fortune to her husband.

Because he preceded her in death, the money, stocks and bonds will go to her closest heirs—William Krullaars, a Chicago artist, a brother, and Mrs. Reika Stedman of Laguna Beach, Calif., a sister.

Police Officers Meet Next Week

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Co-ordination between judicial and law enforcement agencies, the traffic safety campaign and other related subjects will be discussed at the annual meeting of the Maryland Police Association here next Wednesday.

The association, composed of city, county and state law enforcement officers, will hear reports and addresses and elect officers at the morning session, discuss law enforcement problems in the afternoon and hold the annual banquet and dance that night.

Speakers at the opening session will be Governor O'Conor, Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Marcus H. Miles, chief of police at Sparrows Point and president of the association.

Speakers at the afternoon session and their subjects will be:

Magistrate Elmer J. Hammer, "Court Procedure Relating to Police Officers."

Judge T. Scott Offutt of the Court of Appeals, "A Topic of Interest to Peace Enforcement Officers."

H. H. Clegg, assistant director of the F. B. I., "Professionalized Law Enforcement."

Colonel Beverly Ober, superintendent of state police, "One Aim of the State Police in Co-Operation with the Governor's Safety Committee."

Speaker at the banquet will be Associate Judge J. Abner Sayler of the Supreme bench of Baltimore City. His topic will be "Presentation of Evidence." Harry Evans Cassidy, inspector for the Chesapeake and Ohio Lines, will be toastmaster.

Autoists, Pedestrians Urged To Use Care

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—Pedestrians and motorists were urged today to exert every effort "to offset as much as possible the added traffic hazards" that appear with winter.

Governor O'Conor, speaking for his Traffic Safety Committee, cautioned motorists that "the laws of nature are stronger than the well-known law of averages when it comes to winter traffic accidents."

The governor pointed out that although December had one of the lowest traffic volumes of any month, its death toll "exceeds some of the warm weather months by as much as twenty-five per cent."

The Safety Committee explained that driving conditions are worse in December, when darkness comes earlier and icy pavements increase the danger of skidding.

"Since drivers are handicapped in vision on dark or stormy winter days and evenings, the pedestrian should be cooperative by allowing more distance between himself and passing or approaching cars," the committee added.

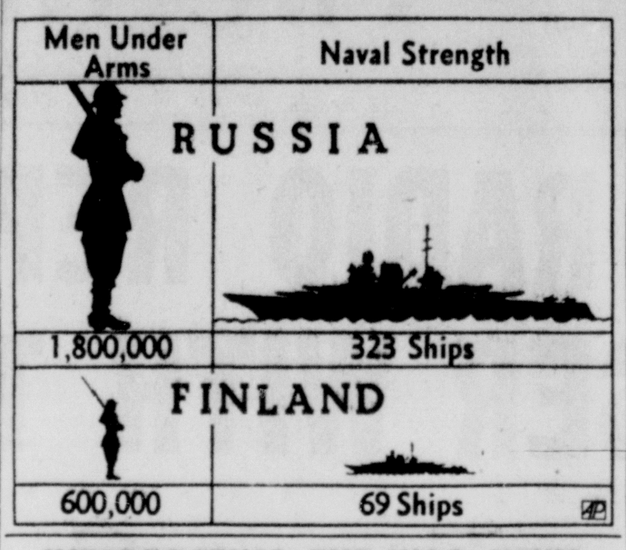
Dr. Charles Palmer Dies at Age of 81

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP) — Dr. Charles Skeele Palmer, 81, who developed a gasoline "cracking" process in 1900 and sold his patents to the Standard Oil Company in 1907, died yesterday.

Under his process, oil was broken down into gasoline, fuel oil and gas.

He was a former member of the University of Colorado faculty, a fellow at Mellon Institute, and chemist for textile and copper industries.

HERE'S HOW FORCES COMPARE



INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The impact of the Russian invasion of Finland on already tense situations in the Balkans, the Mediterranean and Scandinavia share attention with new tales of horror from the scene of the Soviet attack on her little neighbor.

Happenings more significant for Europe, and for the world, than the course Finland chooses in her dark hour may be taking shape backstage in capitals physically remote from the new war. They could broaden the endurance battle between Germany and the Franco-British Allies into an all-European struggle, if not another World War almost overnight.

Finnish Course Uncertain

Whether Finland is forced to quick capitulation by Russian might and Russian threats of more terrible attack, or elects to go down fighting against all odds, the European war stage has now been reset by Russia for developments of still incalculable effect. The very caution of government officials in Rome, in the Scandinavian capitals and in the troubled Balkans in commenting on the Russo-Finnish conflict itself reflects the extreme tension Russia's move has created.

That public opinion nearly everywhere in neutral Europe has been stirred to deep resentment against Russia is obvious from press reaction. It finds its sharpest expression in Italy, already somewhat estranged from her former axis partner, Germany, by the Nazi-Soviet fellowship. Italian comment holds that the Franco-British Allies cannot continue to ignore Russia's share in precipitating the war in Europe through her cooperation with Germany in dismemberment of Poland. Rome editors argue that by every moral precept stated by Premier Daladier or Prime Minister Chamberlain restoration of Finland must now be included in the Allied war aims.

Italy May Join Allies

There is a definite hint there that Italy is in a mood to make a final break with Berlin, and even to join the Allies if they turn on Russia because of her attack on Finland. There is no question that Italian diplomats in Balkan capitals which are haunted by fears that the Red army and air power will be hurled in their direction, are working at fever pitch to build up an Italian-Balkan entente of resistance, perhaps backed by military commitments to take joint action if Russia moves.

Allied military aid for Finland is ruled out of the question in London and Paris. That does not foreclose the possibility that the Allies might seek diplomatic realignments or offer Italy inducements to abandon her neutral role and throw her weight into the struggle against the Russo-German fellowship. Nor does it necessarily mean that the French and British would refuse armed aid to such Scandinavian neutrals as Sweden and Norway if the Russian attack spread to them.

Stalin's Course Uncertain

Whatever the final upshot for Finland, the Russian drive to compel acceptance of her territorial demands by force of arms has stripped away doubt for Italy, for jeopardized Balkan statts, caught in the pincers of the German-British-French war, and for Scandinavia as to how far Moscow is prepared to go. Up to the moment of actual Russian attack, the belief was widely held on both sides of the Atlantic that Stalin would not risk war involvement; but use the war in Europe for diplomatic leverage to gain his ends in the Baltic, the Balkans and in the ice-free sea lanes of the Arctic.

Russia is striking in Finland not only to inspire terror there, but in the Balkans and Scandinavia as well. Back of her decision must lie the fact that virtually all the small European states, as well as Italy, have indicated by their recent policies that they expect the French and British to defeat Germany ultimately.

That expectation was first reflected in Italian coolness toward her German axis partner from the hour the Russo-German deal was announced to a stunned world. It was further quickly indicated when Turkey scorned Moscow's proffers or threats and aligned herself with France and Britain in the three-cornered mutual assistance pact that bars the Dardenelles to an aggressive Russia.

The Russian attack on Finland only serves to strengthen belief in many quarters that it comes of Russia's fear that th struggle between Germany and the allies may end before she can make good her Baltic aspirations by diplomatic means alone.

Republicans Will Bring Prosperity, Bridges Declares

Portland, Ore., Dec. 1 (AP)—Americans, after "seven long years" of the New Deal, still believe in "a free government and a free economy," Sen. H. Styles Bridges (R-NH) declared tonight.

The candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, in a speech prepared for delivery at a Republican banquet, outlined a three-point program:

"To bring about x x x recovery, we are going to see to it x x x that the government spends not more but less. x x x We will cut down on the countless boards and commissions and agencies now harassing and restricting legitimate business. x x x We will see to it that such necessary boards and commissions as the National Labor Relations Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission are administered not to dominate business but to encourage it."

Bridges declared Republicans would carry the platform to "victory" and the "restoration of sane government in America."

The senator said social - security would be put on "a pay-as-you-go" basis, Republicans would strive to raise wages and lower commodity prices to consumers through "creation of new wealth," and "x x x put a ceiling over hours and a floor under wages without adding to governmental bureaucracy and without placing vast discretionary powers in the hands of one man."

A return to protective tariff was advocated by Bridges, who asserted reciprocal trade treaties had "invited the inflow of cheap foreign-made goods x x x (and) by restricting production at home, x x x invited increased production in foreign nations."

France Ready

vondifence in Daladier's government and approved extension of his decree powers.

Speaking a day following the Soviet Russian invasion of Finland, Daladier referred to these operations when he said:

"You have learned that Germany stands in a common front with a country whose system she formerly decried as an abomination. She has concluded a treaty with Communist Russia and now we are witnessing the results of this pact."

This was the reason, he continued, that France was forced to suppress the Communist party in France when the European war started.

It was understood that Daladier's warning of air retaliation was the result of recent broadcasts by the German radio station at stuttgart containing threats to bomb le Havre and other French cities.

France "will not suffer alone" if the "enemy fuehrer" starts that kind of "barbaric warfare," he declared.

The war will go on, he said, until "our security is guaranteed and when we can treat fairly with responsible governments."

Searching for Berries, Drowns in Swamp

Willards, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—A quest for red berries to put on homemade holly wreaths led Woodrow Rayne, 27, to his death in the Pocomoke river swamps.

His body was found by a searching party today, twenty-four hours after he had entered the swamps and failed to return to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rayne.

The young man was lying face down at the river's edge, with his head in the water. Near by was a half-filled basket of red berries.

A verdict of accidental death by drowning was returned by C. T. Fisher, acting medical examiner for Wicomico county. Rayne was believed to have suffered an attack of dizziness and fallen into the water.

Dewey Says He'll Be Glad To Run in Presidential Race

Believes Party Will Restore Stable Business to Nation

By SCOTT HERSHEY

New York, Dec. 1. (AP)—A presidential boom for Thomas E. Dewey was set off today at a ceremony in which the New York district attorney formally entered the lists for the Republican nomination.

Replying to a declaration by a group of state party leaders that they were convinced Dewey could carry not only the "pivotal" state of New York "but also the country at large next year against any opponent," Dewey declared:

"I will be glad to make the fight.

"I have confidence in the Republican party, which has always stood for good government and stable business," he said. "Today its responsibility is to reweaken hope and courage in a nation which is driven almost to despair by incompetent government and unstable business."

Has "Faith in Nation"

Dewey added that he had "faith in the nation and in its future and in every element of its people."

"Relieved of a hostile and sniping government," Dewey said, "I am convinced that they can again learn to pull together for a happy and united nation."

Dewey was interviewed at the opening of "Dewey for President" headquarters in which were gathered Republican leaders from throughout the state.

The manifesto was read to Dewey by J. Russel Sprague, Republican chairman of Nassau county, who will direct the pre-convention campaign. It extended "to all citizens a cordial invitation to join with us" to bring about Dewey's nomination.

Praised for Ability

"Convinced that he possesses above all other leaders in the country today the ability, temperament, training and ideals which the next president of the United States must have, the statement recited, "we have determined to cooperate in the movement to elect Thomas E. Dewey president in 1940."

Dewey disclosed that he would enter presidential primary elections in some states, which he did not name, but emphasized he would not seek delegations in states where there are other "active and genuine" candidates, including his native state of Michigan.

"For example," he said, "I certainly will not go into Michigan, for I believe that Senator Vandenberg is entitled to the delegates from his state."

Dewey's first public appearance as a candidate will be before the Minnesota Central Republican Committee in Minneapolis, Dec. 6. Returning from Minneapolis, Dewey will arrive in Washington Dec. 9 for conferences with some Republican senators and representatives before attending the annual newspapermen's gridiron dinner that night.

Under the indictment the jury had the discretion of either convicting the trio of a felony carrying a penalty of one to ten years imprisonment or of a misdemeanor carrying a penalty permitting a fine up to $500, or of acquitting them.

Commonwealth's Attorney Clarence W. Carter charged in his closing argument that the defense counsel was asking the jury "to express your approval of mob violence" by acquitting the defendants. The prosecutor did not recommend any specific punishment.

State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, a member of the defense staff, declared that "these young men rendered a public service to this community."

Pennsylvania's Alien Registration Law Void

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1. (AP)—Three federal court judges declared Pennsylvania's alien registration law a violation of the nation's constitution today because it "impairs the right of the non - exempt alien to reside within the commonwealth."

The act, passed this year, was to have become effective tomorrow.

U. S. Circuit Court Judges John Biggs, Jr., and Charles Alvin Jones and District Judge Albert L. Watson ruled the act "encroaches upon a field (citizenship) reserved to federal action.

The United States national park service hung up a new record in conservation in protecting public forest areas from fire during the 1939 season, it is reported.

Grand Opera Will Return to Radio This Afternoon

Wagnerian Production by the Metropolitan Will Be Heard

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, Dec. 1—Football, opera and Arturo Toscanini's finale until March high spot this Saturday on the radio.

The football—only game for the networks—is the annual clash of the Army and Navy at Philadelphia at 1:15 p. m. Bill Stern and Jim Britt describe it for WEAF-NBC. Ted Husing and Red Barber and Dave Driscoll for MBS. Besides the regular channels, the game also will be put on the short waves, including a recorded rebroadcast in condensed version on Sunday.

Opera comes back to the radio from New York's Metropolitan when WJZ-NBC at 1:25 starts another season of pickups on Saturdays from the stage of the music dramas. The opener on the air is Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Toscanini Finale

Arturo Toscanini on WJZ-NBC at 10 concludes his six-program cycle of Beethoven concerts and at the same time winds up his appearances as conducter with the NBC symphony until March. In the meanwhile guest conductors will take over. This broadcast is to come from Carnegie Hall, New York, with Toscanini conducting a benefit concert.

Discussions — People's platform: WABC-CBS 7, Princess Alexandra Kropotkin and others on "The United States and Efforts to End the War;" talk: WABC-CBS 10:45, Rep. Carl Hinshow, California Republican.

Sunday Offerings

Returning from its trip to Chicago, the New York Philharmonic orchestra is to present its weekly broadcast via the WABC-CBS network at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon from Utica, N. Y. John Barbirolli conducts, with the Deems Taylor commentary being picked up from New York.

Then here are some of the other musical features for the day: WEAF-NBC 11:30 a. m. Music and American Youth; Dorsey, Los Angeles, high school orchestra and girls glee club; WJZ-NBC 12 noon, Radio City concert, premiere of Erich Zeisel's "Little Symphony;" WEAF-NBC 2 p. m. NBC String symphony, Beethoven composition; WJZ-NBC 5:30, Opera auditions, Annamary Dickey of Decatur, Ill., one of last year's winners as the guest speaker; WJZ-NBC 6 New Friends of Music concert; WABC-CBS 9, Sunday evening hour, Helen Jepson, soprano; WEAF-NBC 10:30 Primrose string quartet.

Other Features

WJZ-NBC 2 Great Play "Volpone;" WABC-CBS about 4:30 Pursuit to Happiness, Jane Froman Maxine Sullivan, Louis Armstrong and others; WABC-CBS 6 Ginger Rogers in Conrad Nagel theater; WABC-CBS 7:30 Screen Guild with John Mack Brown, Gertrude Lawrence and Herbert Marshall; WEAF-NBC 7:30 Ted Fiorito's orchestra in the Bandwagon.

Pennsylvania's Alien Registration Law Void

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1. (AP)—Three federal court judges declared Pennsylvania's alien registration law a violation of the nation's constitution today because it "impairs the right of the non - exempt alien to reside within the commonwealth."

The act, passed this year, was to have become effective tomorrow.

U. S. Circuit Court Judges John Biggs, Jr., and Charles Alvin Jones and District Judge Albert L. Watson ruled the act "encroaches upon a field (citizenship) reserved to federal action.

The United States national park service hung up a new record in conservation in protecting public forest areas from fire during the 1939 season, it is reported.

Made Plainer

AS heretofore remarked by this newspaper, the massacring of thousands of Finns by Stalin makes it more plain what Britain and France are fighting against in this war. They are fighting as cunning, ruthless and murderous a pair of criminals as ever menaced the world—Hitler and Stalin.

Stalin had as much excuse for unleashing his hordes of barbarians against Finland as he would have had for attacking Bermuda. Finland was minding its own business and paying its debts. Perhaps the fact that Finland was making regular payments on its debt to the United States is what irked the counterfeiter in the Kremlin.

Although Finland has no defensive alliances with other nations, the attack upon that unhappy land may prove the spark that will set Eastern Europe and the Balkans ablaze, with ultimate consequences which no one can predict.

There was nothing original or surprising in the tactics employed by Stalin to bring about the desired crisis with respect to Finland. The method was that made familiar by Hitler in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and in Poland. It was supplemented with a touch of characteristic Soviet cruelty. All of the nerve-wracking preliminaries, the warnings and threats and the military and naval activity, were recognized by the civilized world as a prelude to another of those ruthless operations through which small nations cease to exist.

World peace and decent living cannot survive so long as this savage force is uncontrolled.

The More Abundant Life

AGAIN the prudent, thrifty savings bank depositor is going to have to take another sock on the chin.

Already the inability of the savings banks to earn an adequate return on their investments because of the New Deal's cheap money policy has forced them to reduce interest rates on savings accounts. This has caused a loss of untold millions to the 45,000,000 odd depositors.

But the end is not yet in sight. Even greater losses are to come.

A special dispatch from Chicago to the New York Times states that another contemplated reduction in savings bank interest rates will cost depositors in Chicago alone a total of $1,489,120.

The implications of the New York Times item are so clear as to need no comment.

"Interest rates on bank savings accounts," it states, "are expected to be reduced again. Bank members of the Chicago Clearing House Association are expected to cut their rates from one and one-half to one and one-quarter per cent, effective January 1.

"A statement issued by the association disclosed that the executive heads of the five leading downtown banks had agreed to recommend adoption of the reduced rate proposed by directors of their banks. In addition, they recommended that other banks which are members of or affiliated with the association follow this reduction.

"Savings accounts of state and national banks in Chicago totaled $595,651,000 on October 2, the date of the last bank call. Based on this figure, the banks would pay their depositors $1,489,120 less annually under the new rate.

"However, many banks already have reduced their interest rates below the suggested level."

This is the way the New Deal keeps its promise to give the American people a "more abundant life."

Snuffles and Sneezes

THE ASSOCIATION OF ALLERGISTS FOR MYCOLOGICAL INVESTIGATION is a cumbersome title, but it means an organization which is bent on discovering and fighting allergic potentialities. In other words: What causes hay fever and what can we do about it?

Tiny microcosms which make soil fertile are leading potential agents in causing hay fever, the association says. This may mean nothing to hay fever sufferers, but it indicates to them that the health forces are at work, busy on the job of trying to find out what is hay fever, and what to do about it.

In a report to the Southern Medical Association, the A. of A. for M. I. declares that when dust storms sweep over large areas of the western United States and Canada they carry with them millions of microscopic mould particles similar to those which are found in yeast, and which cause the snuffles and sneezes characteristic of hay fever.

The association, through a network of observation stations, has piled up a mass of data on this important subject, and it offers the conclusion that mould particles may prove to be as important as the pollen of various flowers and weeds in causing hay fever.

Cold Figures Warming

OUT OF the cold figures of construction estimators comes a warming note concerning the prospects of business and industry, employment and the enterprises of capital and labor. New factories rising in response to need and in the wake of improving business conditions, promise to keep more and more men busy well into 1940, according to the latest published reports of a survey.

Industrial construction contracts awarded in October alone totaled nearly $50,000,000, approximately sixty per cent more than in any other month this year. The wave of plant expansion has lifted industrial building for the first ten months to $220,000,000, compared to $152,000,000 in the entire year of 1938.

Furthermore, public utility contracts awarded in October totaled almost $30,000,000, bringing the aggregate awards for the first ten months to $75,000,000, indicating that awards in this field for the full year 1939 are virtually certain to exceed those of any other year since 1930. Trade circles are quoted as expressing the belief that contracts let during November and December will make this the biggest year since 1929.

Construction men have expressed the fear that a slackening of public expenditures would deal a serious blow to the construction business, but it appears that private enterprise is well able to take up any slack. The newly acquired vigor of private construction activities has shown no signs of abating. Current report of private awards indicates that they have exceeded their respective values for last year.

For private capital to regain its place as the principal support of the construction industry, building experts contend, there must be an acceleration of pace in the field of commercial building. That may come, but it needs practical encouragement.

Dangerous Practice

AMONG the many dangerous driving practices in which motorists indulge, none is more hazardous and more productive of mishaps than that of cutting out of the proper lane, according to the Safety department of the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland.

Such driving, it is pointed out by the club's safety experts, often results not only in an accident to the offending driver but is likely to affect as many as a half dozen other motorists. Some of the worst highway accidents, involving many persons and cars, may be traced to a single motorist who failed to keep in his proper lane.

The lanes are marked for a purpose, and motorists should keep that purpose in mind at all times on the road. Impatience is the cause of most of the lane cutting, but time saved by it in the face of any possible hazard is a game not worth the candle.

Brutal and Treacherous

SENATOR VANDENBERG, of Michigan, says that what has happened in Poland and Finland "leaves us with no rational alternative except to drive every trace of Communism and Nazilism out of the United States."

Why? The senator gives the answer. "Communism has demonstrated its treachery, its brutality and its barbarism in Finland precisely as Nazilism demonstrated these bestial qualities in Poland," he says, adding that "we cannot police Europe but that we can and must police America."

In view of the latest demonstration of Communistic practices, which are as heinous and as repulsive as the senator says, we certainly do not want to harbor anything favoring them in this country and it is now more obvious than ever that we should do all we can to squelch it whenever and wherever we can.

Aviation expert predicts that the airplane of the future will be egg-shaped. Let's hope not too many of them are scrambled.

Perhaps the real reason Hitler hesitates about swallowing Holland is that the chaser will consist of sea water.

Horses are staging a comeback—according to a news item. Not the ones we bet on.

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser's favorite wandering naturalist of the year is Ivan Sanderson, a young Englishman who loves the tropics, loves animals in their own jungles and knows how to draw pictures and write about the little animals he finds. His first book was "Animal Treasure", fruit of an expedition to the British Cameroons. His current book is "Caribbean Treasure" (Viking)—the result of his wanderings with a young wife in Haiti, Trinidad and Surinam, which is a wild chunk of country just north of the Amazon.

Marshall Maslin

What the Browser particularly likes about Sanderson is that he is NOT trying to escape from anything. He is a scientist with a humorous eye who pursues with passion and fury his own special interest in this world. And he hates all those silly folk who hold to "the very common belief that the jungle is something evil and terrible" and who march through the tropical forests in puttees, pith helmets with their women folk dressed in riding boots and breeches. He insists that the proper outfit for the jungles is just about what one would wear in the United States—and don't be so fussy about snakes.

Sanderson is the kind of naturalist who, even when he is lost, will climb thirty feet into a leafy tropical tree and spend two night hours watching gentle three-toed sloth feeding on Cecropia blossoms.

A well-adjusted gentleman who knows his business and never slops over in sentimental philosophizing about the state of the world, Ivan Sanderson should stay on his job and not persuade himself that his country needs him behind a machine gun in France. And his government should have sense enough to leave him in his jungles.

The Browser has just read the biograph which will probably win the Pulitzer prize for 1939. It's Henry Seidel Canby's "Thoreau" which is the biography of a man who believed in doing what he wanted to do (Houghton Mifflin).

Henry David Thoreau, who lived in Concord from 1817 to 1862—and moved in the circle of Emerson, Alcott, Lowell and Longfellow—was without influence in his time. And many have thought of the author of "Walden" and "Civil Disobedience" as a lesser man who picked up windfalls in Emerson's intellectual orchard. . . His reputation receded almost into obscurity in the last quarter of the nineteenth century, and it's only in this century that the real greatness of the man has been recognized. As Dr. Canby says: "In a century of growing collectivism where the balance between the rights of the individual and the needs of the state was to swing precariously toward the loss of personal freedom, his is the most manly, most commonsense voice. . . It was to preserve what for him were essential values in living that he took his stand for civil disobedience and for a life based on principle." . . His importance lies entirely in what he wrote, not in what he did, and yet he could never have written his best work if he had not lived a life of such contradiction to current modes that most of his neighbors counted it no life at all".

Thoreau was truly an ascetic with a passion for living—and Dr. Canby's illumination of this side of Thoreau's life makes his book especially valuable. The man was no sexless transcendentalist; he loved a number of women and might have married one of them had he been less prickly and demanding. His life was no perfect sphere but at least his life was not flat—and this is the best boagraphy of the year. . . Thinks Marsh Maslin. THE BROWSER

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Although he is a native of Canada, a naturalized American, and the holder of many foreign decorations, Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Association, has been a vigorous champion of American singers and American music. When he took directorship of the famous opera house, in May, 1935, he announced a policy of fostering our own music, and of leading the Metropolitan, so far as possible, into the field of native personnel in singers and composers.

Edwin C. Hill

Somehow or other it just doesn't seem to work out. Although there have been interesting American newcomers at the Metropolitan, and although Mr. Johnson has been alert for such discoveries, we are still under the thrall of old Europe when it comes to grand opera. European singers keep on coming and each year the Metropolitan goes on heavily for European scores. Mr. Johnson's unchallenged judgment and his clear inclination to give the home boys and girls a chance might indicate that we just can't make the grade. But, outside of opera, we are flushing plenty of talent. It may be that opera isn't out metier, although we are still too young as a nation to let that dictum ride. Another century or two might make a vast difference.

Short-Arm Jabs

Perhaps it would be best to leave all such puzzles, problems and headaches to Mr. Johnson—at least so far as opera is concerned. But there is something over on our side of the tracks in Gene Buck's short-arm jabs at the musical cognoscenti who cry down American music and whoop it up for the imported product.

Mr. Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was the author of thirty of the Flo Ziegfeld shows, including twenty editions of the Follies. He circulates around town a lot, knows everybody, and has a sharp ear for a tune as well as an ear to the ground, when it comes to popular drifts, inclinations and talents. He finds this country boiling with good native music, a vast audience yearning to hear it, and something like a golden age of music ahead if our musical mentors and masters will just get off our neck.

"We brag about our money, bridges, politicians and statesmen," said Mr. Buck, addressing the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, "but we are reluctant to talk about American music, something we ought to be proud of."

In this vein, Mr. Buck swung from the heel, which he has a way of doing, on the "new rich people, in the hands of subtle gentlemen, who tell them what to play." His criticism was narrowed against symphonic orchestras and famous conductors who, here or abroad, refuse to play American works. He assailed the "snobbishness' 'of the programmakers.

Long-Felt Want

While nice people should, and no doubt always will, behave decorously at a symphonic concert or an art exhibition, I can't help feeling that Mr. Buck meets a long-felt want when he speaks vigorously and colloquially about our great musical heritage and our national musical aspirations.

This column has suggested before that it might be a good idea to have an art gallery with saw dust on the floor, an old-fashioned free-lunch, with encouragement to loud and contentious talk. That might breed real vitality and popular interest.

Music, like art, and like the New York World's Fair, has suffered from the precieux at the top, who made you feel like a deuce of clubs if you didn't like what you ought to like—and that, usually, was something from abroad.

The Greatest Upsurge

When Cellini unveiled his Perseus in Florence, they had to turn in a riot call every few minutes, with the whole town in an uproar, and citizens belting each other with a yard of bologna or a cobble stone or anything they lay their hands on to get over their critique. The point was that the whole town was in on it and nobody was telling them what they ought to like. And this renaissance was the greatest upsurge of the human spirit in all history.

The way musical interest is widening and deepening in this country, especially among young people, we are ready for a similar grand splash—and that goes for the plastic arts, too, according to some of my friends who keep score on such matters. So when Mr. Buck, in his characteristic straight-arm fashion, jolts the musical Brahmns, we're for him, and we're cheering for his side.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Budget Balancing Promises Give No Reassurance Owing to Past Failures

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

With the regularity of the falling of the leaves in autumn, President Roosevelt about this time each year proclaims his desire to effect great economies in the cost of government, throws out a suggestion that taxes may be increased and dwells on the virtue of balancing the Federal Budget as promptly as possible.

For several weeks such statements appear on the front pages. There is much speculation to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt is turning to the "right" and that the wanton, reckless spenders have been kicked out. There is much conferring with fiscal officers and budget directors, with every move being reported as aimed at achieving good economies.

After a month or six weeks of this pleasant little game, Mr. Roosevelt tires of his economy efforts, approves a budget which asks for much more money than in the current year and then sends a message to Congress which says that his budget will be balanced next year. Meanwhile another two or three billion are added to the national debt.

This Year Follows Pattern

Events this year are following this pattern. Mr. Roosevelt has put out word that he proposes to make a determined effort to reduce what he is pleased to term the "ordinary" expenses of the federal government, although he warns that national defense expenditures necessarily must be increased.

Mr. Roosevelt likewise threw out the suggestion that perhaps taxes should be raised to meet the national defense increase—BUT, and it is an important BUT, he will leave that to the people to decide. Of course that was a mere gesture, for, as the Scripps-Howard newspapers said, it was like asking a man whether he wanted small-pox or double pneumonia.

Few observers around Washington believe that Mr. Roosevelt this year will achieve economics in federal spending any more than he has in his last six budgets. Even New Dealers laugh now when Mr. Roosevelt commences his annual chant about economy.

Let's Have Courage

Their memories go back to all the wonderful statements he has made on the subject. They remember his appeal in July 1932: "Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits." They remember his arousing words at Pittsburgh that year when he said: "I regard reduction in federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign."

Mournfully, some of them remember his words to Congress in March 1933 that "too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy." Mr. Roosevelt surely was correct in that statement, as he has now demonstrated.

They also recall his frequent budget meassage statements predicting a balanced budget next year which never comes. In 1934 he told Congress the budget estimates he submitted "show a small surplus of $13,866,779." Instead of a surplus the year ended with a deficit of $3,500,000,000.

Another Assurance Given.

In his 1935 budget message, Mr. Roosevelt was most hopeful. He said he was submitting a budget which balanced "except for expenditures to work to the unemployed" and added that "if this budget receives the approval of Congress, the country will henceforth have the assurance that, with the single exception of this item, every current expenditure of whatever nature will be fully covered by our estimates of current receipts." The deficit for that fiscal year was $4,700,000,000.

In 1936 Mr. Roosevelt explaining his budget said "the item for relief remains," immediately adding: "Without that item the budget is in balance." The deficit for that year was $2,800,000,000.

In 1937 Mr. Roosevelt told Congress that "although we must continue to spend substantial sums to provide work for those whom industry has not yet absorbed, the 1938 budget is in balance; and, except for debt reduction of $401,515,000, it will remain in balance even if later on there are included additional expenditures of as much as $1,537,123,000 for recovery and relief."

"We expect, moreover, if improvement in economic conditions continues at the present rate," he continued, "to be able to attain in 1939 a complete balanced budget with full provisions for meeting the statutory requirements for debt reduction."

Three More Deficits

The deficit for that fiscal year was $1,500,000,000. But for the 1939 fiscal year it was $3,600,000,000 and for the current fiscal year the latest estimate places it at $3,300,000,000.

In other words, throughout this period when Mr. Roosevelt constantly was predicting — or even claiming—a balanced budget, he actually piled up deficits totaling some twenty billions of dollars. Some people call this four-flushing, but that is a gentle name for it.

Certainly it demonstrates that while we may expect a great deal of talk, trickery and juggling of arithmetic — already we are now promised double bookkeeping to get us out of our troubles—little can be expected in the way of real economy or sanity in fiscal policies as long as Mr. Roosevelt sits in the White House.

Muddying the Waters

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Secretary Hopkins has entered the lists against interstate trade barriers. He has appointed a committee to work with the Council of State Governments in tackling such problems as differing taxes, licenses, plant and livestock quarantines, regulations on motor trucks, gasoline taxes, etc. It has been suggested that as a first step, the O'Mahoney Monopoly committee might conduct an investigation.

We are not at all sure that this federal intervention should be welcomed. Under leadership of the Council of State Governments, much headway has been made during the past several years in breaking down the trade barriers referred to. Attention has been centered on those deliberate restrictions and the retaliatory measures following them. A number of states have imposed special taxes or other restrictions on out-of-state products for the purpose of fostering use of home products. The affected states have retaliated, the accumulating effect being to multiply these bars to the free interstate movement of commerce.

As we say, much headway has been made in checking this wholly unsound trend. A number of legislatures have repealed old restrictions. Others have refused to enact proposed barriers. All of this has been done on a cooperative state basis. The federal government has not entered the picture at all. Our fear is that if the government is to join the movement now, the result will be federal legislation. And while uniformity is desirable, we should move very slowly in further extending the authority of the central government at the expense of state sovereignty, especially when the fault sought to be cured is well on the way to correction without federal participation.

War Styles

From the New York Herald Tribune

The latest thing in ladies' handbags has a definite "mood militaire," as the technical experts like to say. One shop admits that these odd-looking affairs are copied after the gas-mask containers now so prevalent in civilian Europe, but adds, with a note of thankfulness, that they are "inspired by the gas masks we're fortunate enough to think of as an accessory instead of a necessity."

We are glad that there is some recognition there of our good fortune in not being at war, although wearing an imitation gas-mask case even as a handbag may come rather close to tempting fate. It is all right for the English and French to get gay with their gas-mask case, since they have to have them anyway. But those who go in for the fad in this country may be going out of their way to look for trouble, if they are at all superstitious.

In London and Paris most people try to regard the war optimistically. The Germans, as a rule, are stolid and glum in their determination. But the French and English, traddditionally gay, try to make the best of a bad job. Hence they incorporate the war into their styles and their styles into the war.

They try, as much as possible, to make a game of the war, and we admire them for their pluck. But we should think that most Americans would be so glad to be far from the conflict that they would wish to avoid these gay, but still grim, reminders of it.

Magna Charta Viewed As a Gift

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Chicago, Dec. 1—When the British offered to deposit an original of the great charter of human liberties—the Magna Charta—with our government for safekeeping through the war, there was nothing that could have been done but to accept it. It is a part of our heritage too. It was a violation of it in America that caused our revolution. Resting beside the Declaration of Independence, the two documents contain the promise and a statement of the breach of promise that made the United States.

Hugh Johnson

We ought to be glad to have it, if only for a little while. The British have three other originals sealed by King John on an "or else" basis. He also approved eight others which are probably kicking around in somebody's attics, or got thrown out by mistake sometime.

Why Not a Gift?

In view of this fact, would it seem to be too much like mooching to suggest that, instead of just letting us hold this one, they give it to us outright? That would be a lot better press agenting for the hand-across-the-sea and blood-is-thicker-than-water sentiment which is so necessary to our British cousins just now.

Of course, we are not being asked to shelter this precious relic on any such unworthy thought. This high custody is being requested to avoid the risk of its destruction in the unforseeable hazards of war—or its possible seizure by Mr. Hitler. What he would want it for isn't quite so clear. John Lackland wasn't half the louse that he is, yet the whole document is an indictment of every Nazi idea.

The Other Three

Neither is it quite so clear why this original should be left here to avoid the war, while the other three are left in England to be ruthlessly exposed to whatever fate may impend.

You can get a lot of thought and puzzles out of this incident if you let your imagination roam. Does the Allied high command really expect such an assault on the British Isles or shipping that this precious piece of parchment has to be left overseas? Is the British Government so sure we will accept whatever they want to do to injure our foreign trade that, in any conceivable outcome, they would wish to leave it here? You can't ever foresee the directions that a war of world dimensions may take.

Other Symbols, Maybe

Also this is only part of the half-sacred regalia of the British Empire, how about shipping over the scepter, the orb, the crown jewels and the Stone of Scone? Joe Kennedy could bring them on his present trip home.

All this speculation on the safety of the Magna Charta sounds farfetched and silly, but I didn't suggest this line of thought. Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, at least hinted it.

It isn't nice to be talking this way, but could the timing of this magnificent gesture have anything to do with the recent British announcement that she will seize goods in enutral ownership or bailment wherever she finds them if she determines that they "originated" in Germany?

A New One

That is a new one in the field of international law. On former standards it would be classed not only as a gross violation of neutral rights, but even as a kind of piracy. No one nation can make the law of the high seas, as we ourselves learned at England's hand during our Civil war, when we tried to do as we pleased in the suppression of Confederate commerce.

This business of protecting our international trade is no mere dry academic question. Counting what we will lose with Germany, probably with all of northern Europe and possibly with Japan, it could be a good third of all our foreign commerce.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Made Plainer

AS heretofore remarked by this newspaper, the massacring of thousands of Finns by Stalin makes it more plain what Britain and France are fighting against in this war. They are fighting as cunning, ruthless and murderous a pair of criminals as ever menaced the world—Hitler and Stalin.

Stalin had as much excuse for unleashing his hordes of barbarians against Finland as he would have had for attacking Bermuda. Finland was minding its own business and paying its debts. Perhaps the fact that Finland was making regular payments on its debt to the United States is what irked the counterfeiter in the Kremlin.

Although Finland has no defensive alliances with other nations, the attack upon that unhappy land may prove the spark that will set Eastern Europe and the Balkans ablaze, with ultimate consequences which no one can predict.

There was nothing original or surprising in the tactics employed by Stalin to bring about the desired crisis with respect to Finland. The method was that made familiar by Hitler in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and in Poland. It was supplemented with a touch of characteristic Soviet cruelty. All of the nerve-wracking preliminaries, the warnings and threats and the military and naval activity, were recognized by the civilized world as a prelude to another of those ruthless operations through which small nations cease to exist.

World peace and decent living cannot survive so long as this savage force is uncontrolled.

The More Abundant Life

AGAIN the prudent, thrifty savings bank depositor is going to have to take another sock on the chin.

Already the inability of the savings banks to earn an adequate return on their investments because of the New Deal's cheap money policy has forced them to reduce interest rates on savings accounts. This has caused a loss of untold millions to the 45,000,000 odd depositors.

But the end is not yet in sight. Even greater losses are to come.

A special dispatch from Chicago to the New York Times states that another contemplated reduction in savings bank interest rates will cost depositors in Chicago alone a total of $1,489,120.

The implications of the New York Times item are so clear as to need no comment.

"Interest rates on bank savings accounts," it states, "are expected to be reduced again. Bank members of the Chicago Clearing House Association are expected to cut their rates from one and one-half to one and one-quarter per cent, effective January 1.

"A statement issued by the association disclosed that the executive heads of the five leading downtown banks had agreed to recommend adoption of the reduced rate proposed by directors of their banks. In addition, they recommended that other banks which are members of or affiliated with the association follow this reduction.

"Savings accounts of state and national banks in Chicago totaled $595,651,000 on October 2, the date of the last bank call. Based on this figure, the banks would pay their depositors $1,489,120 less annually under the new rate.

"However, many banks already have reduced their interest rates below the suggested level."

Snuffles and Sneezes

THE ASSOCIATION OF ALLERGISTS FOR MYCOLOGICAL INVESTIGATION is a cumbersome title, but it means an organization which is bent on discovering and fighting allergic potentialities. In other words: What causes hay fever and what can we do about it?

Tiny microcosms which make soil fertile are leading potential agents in causing hay fever, the association says. This may mean nothing to hay fever sufferers, but it indicates to them that the health forces are at work, busy on the job of trying to find out what is hay fever, and what to do about it.

In a report to the Southern Medical Association, the A. of A. for M. I. declares that when dust storms sweep over large areas of the western United States and Canada they carry with them millions of microscopic mould particles similar to those which are found in yeast, and which cause the snuffles and sneezes characteristic of hay fever.

The association, through a network of observation stations, has piled up a mass of data on this important subject, and it offers the conclusion that mould particles may prove to be as important as the pollen of various flowers and weeds in causing hay fever.

Cold Figures Warming

OUT OF the cold figures of construction estimators comes a warming note concerning the prospects of business and industry, employment and the enterprises of capital and labor. New factories rising in response to need and in the wake of improving business conditions, promise to keep more and more men busy well into 1940, according to the latest published reports of a survey.

Industrial construction contracts awarded in October alone totaled nearly $50,000,000, approximately sixty per cent more than in any other month this year. The wave of plant expansion has lifted industrial building for the first ten months to $220,000,000, compared to $152,000,000 in the entire year of 1938.

Furthermore, public utility contracts awarded in October totaled almost $30,000,000, bringing the aggregate awards for the first ten months to $75,000,000, indicating that awards in this field for the full year 1939 are virtually certain to exceed those of any other year since 1930. Trade circles are quoted as expressing the belief that contracts let during November and December will make this the biggest year since 1929.

Construction men have expressed the fear that a slackening of public expenditures would deal a serious blow to the construction business, but it appears that private enterprise is well able to take up any slack. The newly acquired vigor of private construction activities has shown no signs of abating. Current report of private awards indicates that they have exceeded their respective values for last year.

For private capital to regain its place as the principal support of the construction industry, building experts contend, there must be an acceleration of pace in the field of commercial building. That may come, but it needs practical encouragement.

Dangerous Practice

AMONG the many dangerous driving practices in which motorists indulge, none is more hazardous and more productive of mishaps than that of cutting out of the proper lane, according to the Safety department of the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland.

Such driving, it is pointed out by the club's safety experts, often results not only in an accident to the offending driver but is likely to affect as many as a half dozen other motorists. Some of the worst highway accidents, involving many persons and cars, may be traced to a single motorist who failed to keep in his proper lane.

The lanes are marked for a purpose, and motorists should keep that purpose in mind at all times on the road. Impatience is the cause of most of the lane cutting, but time saved by it in the face of any possible hazard is a game not worth the candle.

Brutal and Treacherous

SENATOR VANDENBERG, of Michigan, says that what has happened in Poland and Finland "leaves us with no rational alternative except to drive every trace of Communism and Nazism out of the United States."

Why? The senator gives the answer. "Communism has demonstrated its treachery, its brutality and its barbarism in Finland precisely as Nazism demonstrated these bestial qualities in Poland," he says, adding that "we cannot police Europe but that we can and must police America."

In view of the latest demonstration of Communistic practices, which are as heinous and as repulsive as the senator says, we certainly do not want to harbor anything favoring them in this country and it is now more obvious than ever that we should do all we can to squelch it whenever and wherever we can.

Explorings of the Browser

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser's favorite wandering naturalist of the year is Ivan Sanderson, a young Englishman who loves the tropics, loves animals in their own jungles and knows how to draw pictures and write about the little animals he finds. His first book was "Animal Treasure", fruit of an expedition to the British Cameroons. His current book is "Caribbean Treasure" (Viking)—the result of his wanderings with a young wife in Haiti, Trinidad and Surinam, which is a wild chunk of country just north of the Amazon.

Marshall Maslin

What the Browser particularly likes about Sanderson is that he is NOT trying to escape from anything. He is a scientist with a humorous eye who pursues with passion and fury his own special interest in this world. And he hates all those silly folk who hold to "the very common belief that the jungle is something evil and terrible" and who march through the tropical forests in puttees, pith helmets with their women folk dressed in riding boots and breeches. He insists that the proper outfit for the jungles is just about what one would wear in the United States—and don't be so fussy about snakes.

Sanderson is the kind of naturalist who, even when he is lost, will climb thirty feet into a leafy tropical tree and spend two night hours watching gentle three-toed sloth feeding on Cecropia blossoms.

A well-adjusted gentleman who knows his business and never slops over in sentimental philosophizing about the state of the world, Ivan Sanderson should stay on his job and not persuade himself that his country needs him behind a machine gun in France. And his government should have sense enough to leave him in his jungles.

The Browser has just read the biograph which will probably win the Pulitzer prize for 1939. It's Henry Seidel Canby's "Thoreau" which is the biography of a man who believed in doing what he wanted to do (Houghton Mifflin).

Henry David Thoreau, who lived in Concord from 1817 to 1862—and moved in the circle of Emerson, Alcott, Lowell and Longfellow—was without influence in his time. And many have thought of the author of "Walden" and "Civil Disobedience" as a lesser man who picked up windfalls in Emerson's intellectual orchard. . . His reputation receded almost into obscurity in the last quarter of the nineteenth century, and it's only in this century that the real greatness of the man has been recognized. As Dr. Canby says: "In a century of growing collectivism where the balance between the rights of the individual and the needs of the state was to swing precariously toward the loss of personal freedom, his is the most manly, most commonsense voice. . . It was to preserve what for him were essential values in living that he took his stand for civil disobedience and for a life based on principle." . . His importance lies entirely in what he wrote, not in what he did, and yet he could never have written his best work if he had not lived a life of such contradiction to current modes that most of his neighbors counted it no life at all".

Thoreau was truly an ascetic with a passion for living—and Dr. Canby's illumination of this side of Thoreau's life makes his book especially valuable. The man was no sexless transcendentalist; he loved a number of women and might have married one of them had he been less prickly and demanding. His life was no perfect sphere but at least his life was not flat—and this is the best boagraphy of the year. . . Thinks Marsh Maslin. THE BROWSER

Edwin C. Hill

Although he is a native of Canada, a naturalized American, and the holder of many foreign decorations, Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Association, has been a vigorous champion of American singers and American music. When he took directorship of the famous opera house, in May, 1935, he announced a policy of fostering our own music, and of leading the Metropolitan, so far as possible, into the field of native personnel in singers and composers.

Somehow or other it just doesn't seem to work out. Although there have been interesting American newcomers at the Metropolitan, and although Mr. Johnson has been alert for such discoveries, we are still under the thrall of old Europe when it comes to grand opera. European singers keep on coming and each year the Metropolitan goes on heavily for European scores. Mr. Johnson's unchallenged judgment and his clear inclination to give the home boys and girls a chance might indicate that we just can't make the grade. But, outside of opera, we are flushing plenty of talent. It may be that opera isn't out metier, although we are still too young as a nation to let that dictum ride. Another century or two might make a vast difference.

Short-Arm Jabs

Perhaps it would be best to leave all such puzzles, problems and headaches to Mr. Johnson—at least so far as opera is concerned. But there is something over on our side of the tracks in Gene Buck's short-arm jabs at the musical cognoscenti who cry down American music and whoop it up for the imported product.

Mr. Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, was the author of thirty of the Flo Ziegfeld shows, including twenty editions of the Follies. He circulates around town a lot, knows everybody, and has a sharp ear for a tune as well as an ear to the ground, when it comes to popular drifts, inclinations and talents. He finds this country boiling with good native music, a vast audience yearning to hear it, and something like a golden age of music ahead if our musical mentors and masters will just get off our neck.

"We brag about our money, bridges, politicians and statesmen," said Mr. Buck, addressing the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, "but we are reluctant to talk about American music, something we ought to be proud of."

In this vein, Mr. Buck swung from the heel, which he has a way of doing, on the "new rich people, in the hands of subtle gentlemen, who tell them what to play." His criticism was narrowed against symphonic orchestras and famous conductors who, here or abroad, refuse to play American works. He assailed the "snobbishness" of the programmakers.

Long-Felt Want

While nice people should, and no doubt always will, behave decorously at a symphonic concert or an art exhibition, I can't help feeling that Mr. Buck meets a long-felt want when he speaks vigorously and colloquially about our great musical heritage and our national musical aspirations.

This column has suggested before that it might be a good idea to have an art gallery with saw dust on the floor, an old-fashioned free-lunch, with encouragement to loud and contentious talk. That might breed real vitality and popular interest.

Music, like art, and like the New York World's Fair, has suffered from the precieux at the top, who made you feel like a deuce of clubs if you didn't like what you ought to like—and that, usually, was something from abroad.

The Greatest Upsurge

When Cellini unveiled his Perseus in Florence, they had to turn in a riot call every few minutes, with the whole town in an uproar, and citizens belting each other with a yard of bologna or a cobble stone or anything they lay their hands on to get over their critique. The point was that the whole town was in on it and nobody was telling them what they ought to like. And this renaissance was the greatest upsurge of the human spirit in all history.

The way musical interest is widening and deepening in this country, especially among young people, we are ready for a similar grand splash—and that goes for the plastic arts, too, according to some of my friends who keep score on such matters. So when Mr. Buck, in his characteristic straight-arm fashion, jolts the musical Brahmns, we're for him, and we're cheering for his side.—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Budget Balancing Promises Give No Reassurance Owing to Past Failures

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

With the regularity of the falling of the leaves in autumn, President Roosevelt about this time each year proclaims his desire to effect great economies in the cost of government, throws out a suggestion that taxes may be increased and dwells on the virtue of balancing the Federal Budget as promptly as possible.

For several weeks such statements appear on the front pages. There is much speculation to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt is turning to the "right" and that the wanton, reckless spenders have been kicked out. There is much conferring with fiscal officers and budget directors, with every move being reported as aimed at achieving good economies.

After a month or six weeks of this pleasant little game, Mr. Roosevelt tires of his economy efforts, approves a budget which asks for much more money than in the current year and then sends a message to Congress which says that his budget will be balanced next year. Meanwhile another two or three billion are added to the national debt.

This Year Follows Pattern

Events this year are following this pattern. Mr. Roosevelt has put out word that he proposes to make a determined effort to reduce what he is pleased to term the "ordinary" expenses of the federal government, although he warns that national defense expenditures necessarily must be increased.

Mr. Roosevelt likewise threw out the suggestion that perhaps taxes should be raised to meet the national defense increase—BUT, and it is an important BUT, he will leave that to the people to decide. Of course that was a mere gesture, for, as the Scripps-Howard newspapers said, it was like asking a man whether he wanted small-pox or double pneumonia.

Few observers around Washington believe that Mr. Roosevelt this year will achieve economics in federal spending any more than he has in his last six budgets. Even New Dealers laugh now when Mr. Roosevelt commences his annual chant about economy.

Let's Have Courage

Their memories go back to all the wonderful statements he has made on the subject. They remember his appeal in July 1932: "Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits." They remember his arousing words at Pittsburgh that year when he said: "I regard reduction in federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign."

Mournfully, some of them remember his words to Congress in March 1933 that "too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy." Mr. Roosevelt surely was correct in that statement, as he has now demonstrated.

They also recall his frequent budget meassage statements predicting a balanced budget next year which never comes. In 1934 he told Congress the budget estimates he submitted "show a small surplus of $13,866,779." Instead of a surplus the year ended with a deficit of $3,500,000,000.

Another Assurance Given.

In his 1935 budget message, Mr. Roosevelt was most hopeful. He said he was submitting a budget which balanced "except for expenditures to work to the unemployed" and added that "if this budget receives the approval of Congress, the country will henceforth have the assurance that, with the single exception of this item, every current expenditure of whatever nature will be fully covered by our estimates of current receipts." The deficit for that fiscal year was $4,700,000,000.

In 1936 Mr. Roosevelt explaining his budget said "the item for relief remains," immediately adding: "Without that item the budget is in balance." The deficit for that year was $2,800,000,000.

In 1937 Mr. Roosevelt told Congress that "although we must continue to spend substantial sums to provide work for those whom industry has not yet absorbed, the 1938 budget is in balance; and, except for debt reduction of $401,515,000, it will remain in balance even if later on there are included additional expenditures of as much as $1,537,123,000 for recovery and relief."

"We expect, moreover, if improvement in economic conditions continues at the present rate," he continued, "to be able to attain in 1939 a complete balanced budget with full provisions for meeting the statutory requirements for debt reduction."

Three More Deficits

The deficit for that fiscal year was $1,500,000,000. But for the 1939 fiscal year it was $3,600,000,000 and for the current fiscal year the latest estimate places it at $3,300,000,000.

In other words, throughout this period when Mr. Roosevelt constantly was predicting — or even claiming—a balanced budget, he actually piled up deficits totaling some twenty billions of dollars. Some people call this four-flushing, but that is a gentle name for it.

Certainly it demonstrates that while we may expect a great deal of talk, trickery and juggling of arithmetic — already we are now promised double bookkeeping to get us out of our troubles—little can be expected in the way of real economy or sanity in fiscal policies as long as Mr. Roosevelt sits in the White House.

It is all right for the English and French to get gay with their gas-mask case, since they have to have them anyway. But those who go in for the fad in this country may be going out of their way to look for trouble, if they are at all superstitious.

In London and Paris most people try to regard the war optimistically. The Germans, as a rule, are stolid and glum in their determination. But the French and English, traddditionally gay, try to make the best of a bad job. Hence they incorporate the war into their styles and their styles into the war.

They try, as much as possible, to make a game of the war, and we admire them for their pluck. But we should think that most Americans would be so glad to be far from the conflict that they would wish to avoid these gay, but still grim, reminders of it.

Magna Charta Viewed As a Gift

Hugh Johnson

Chicago, Dec. 1—When the British offered to deposit an original of the great charter of human liberties—the Magna Charta—with our government for safekeeping through the war, there was nothing that could have been done but to accept it. It is a part of our heritage too. It was a violation of it in America that caused our revolution. Resting beside the Declaration of Independence, the two documents contain the promise and a statement of the breach of promise that made the United States.

We ought to be glad to have it, if only for a little while. The British have three other originals sealed by King John on an "or else" basis. He also approved eight others which are probably kicking around in somebody's attics, or got thrown out by mistake sometime.

Why Not a Gift?

In view of this fact, would it seem to be too much like mooching to suggest that, instead of just letting us hold this one, they give it to us outright? That would be a lot better press agenting for the hand-across-the-sea and blood-is-thicker-than-water sentiment which is so necessary to our British cousins just now.

Of course, we are not being asked to shelter this precious relic on any such unworthy thought. This high custody is being requested to avoid the risk of its destruction in the unforseeable hazards of war—or its possible seizure by Mr. Hitler. What he would want it for isn't quite so clear. John Lackland wasn't half the louse that he is, yet the whole document is an indictment of every Nazi idea.

The Other Three

Neither is it quite so clear why this original should be left here to avoid the war, while the other three are left in England to be ruthlessly exposed to whatever fate may impend.

You can get a lot of thought and puzzles out of this incident if you let your imagination roam. Does the Allied high command really expect such an assault on the British Isles or shipping that this precious piece of parchment has to be left overseas? Is the British Government so sure we will accept whatever they want to do to injure our foreign trade that, in any conceivable outcome, they would wish to leave it here? You can't ever foresee the directions that a war of world dimensions may take.

Other Symbols, Maybe

Also this is only part of the half-sacred regalia of the British Empire, how about shipping over the scepter, the orb, the crown jewels and the Stone of Scone? Joe Kennedy could bring them on his present trip home.

All this speculation on the safety of the Magna Charta sounds far-fetched and silly, but I didn't suggest this line of thought. Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, at least hinted it.

It isn't nice to be talking this way, but could the timing of this magnificent gesture have anything to do with the recent British announcement that she will seize goods in enutral ownership or bailment wherever she finds them if she determines that they "originated" in Germany?

A New One

That is a new one in the field of international law. On former standards it would be classed not only as a gross violation of neutral rights, but even as a kind of piracy. No one nation can make the law of the high seas, as we ourselves learned at England's hand during our Civil war, when we tried to do as we pleased in the suppression of Confederate commerce.

This business of protecting our international trade is no mere dry academic question. Counting what we will lose with Germany, probably with all of northern Europe and possibly with Japan, it could be a good third of all our foreign commerce.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Maryland Banks Make New Loans Totaling Millions

Fifty Thousand in Half Year Along with Many Renewals

New York, Dec. 1—Countering the assertion that banks are not lending, the American Bankers Association has released for publication the results of a survey of band lending activity in Maryland showing that the commercial banks in the Old Line State made 50,000 new loans totaling $60,000,000 during the first six months of 1939 and renewed 180,000 outstanding loans aggregating $160,000,000 in the same period.

The survey also reveals that business firms in the state are using only about one quarter of the "open lines of credit" maintained for their use on the books of the banks.

Allowance for Baltimore

These figures are based on reports received from ninety-one, or fifty-one per cent of the commercial banks of the state and make allowance for the concentration of lending activity in the metropolitan area of Baltimore.

The ninety-one banks reported they made 28,629 new loans totaling $51,788,799 between January 1 and June 30, 1939, and renewed 97,490 outstanding loans totaling $111,673,485. In addition, they reported making 1,128 new mortgage loans to home owners and other real estate owners totaling $4,260,373.

The average number of new loans reported per bank was 315 and the average loan was $1,809.

Renewal Average 1,071

The average number of renewals reported per bank was 1,071 and the average renewal was for $1,145.

The average number of new mortgages reported per bank was twelve and the average mortgage was for $3,777.

In addition to making loans on individual applications, the banks of the larger cities maintain what are known as "open lines of credit" on their books, available to regular business borrowers at all times. Eleven banks reported such open lines of credit totaling $53,306,350. However, only $14,720,438 or twenty-seven per cent of this credit, was being used by business firms on June 30.

Seven Democrats in Race for Congress

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—Six months from the primary, the race for Democratic nomination for U. S. representative in the First Congressional District is already warming up.

Seven Democrats are starting quiet campaigns, or are discussed as possible candidates.

Rep. Davis J. Ward of Salisbury, incumbent, may be a candidate to succeed himself. He won the office last June 6 in a special election to succeed Rep. T. Alan Goldsborough, who became federal district judge in the District of Columbia.

State Senator Dudley G. Roe, will have an opportunity to announce his candidacy, if he wishes to do so, at a testimonial dinner in Centreville, December 12 by Queen Anne's county Democrats.

Robinson Crusoe For Six Hours

Miami, Fla. (AP)—Paul Chentoff was a castaway for six hours only two miles from 150,000 people.

His 24-foot cruiser ran out of fuel in Biscayne Bay. He tied up to an isolated piling and ran up a distress flag. Nobody noticed it.

Darkness fell. At half-hourly intervcals he set off signal flares. His very last flare brought assistance.

Miami lay only a mile to the west and Miami Beach a mile to the east of the spot where he was marooned.

The public health service says about 10,000,000 Americans are permanently incapacitated by illness or injury.

DICK TRACY—Calling on Father

Appendicitis Not Chronic Disease, Doctor Declares

Great American Surgeon Regards It As a Myth

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In a hospital the other day I saw a woman who represented what I think is the greatest problem of medical practice today.

She was 50 years old. She was plump and apparently cheerful and intelligent. Her skin was in a pink glow of health. Her heart was sound and steady. Her eyes were bright. Her hearing was good. Her limbs were strong. She moved rapidly, gracefully, without pain or evidence of arthritis. Yet, here was her record:

In the last thirty years she had undergone four operations—three totally unnecessary and one to repair an accident of one of the operations.

One of the operations was down on the record for "appendicitis." She was asked if she were very sick when she had this, and she said she certainly was. She said she was sick for four years with it and had pain in the appendix all the time. Was the appendix very red when it was taken out? No, she said, the doctor said it was white as chalk and the longest on record—eight inches.

Regards It as Myth

In other words, she was operated on for chronic appendicitis, which is a myth, according to Dr. A. E. Hertzler, one of the greatest American surgeons. Only drug store or bucket shop surgeons operate for "chronic appendicitis." The reason we think chronic appendicitis is a myth is that too many patients appear with the pain of chronic appendicitis after the appendix has been removed.

Besides her surgical experiences, this woman had been to sanitaria five times for "nervous breakdown." She had two children, which proves she had some health. She had all her teeth removed. She had been to two gastro-enterologists, and had been treated for allergy, avitaminosis, and had been shot full of more hormones than the British Navy has torpedoes.

She took a cathartic every night or morning of her life, and had bouts with bicarbonate or a tonic monthly or weekly.

But so far as anybody in the hospital could make out, she was, save for the scars of her surgical campaigns, perfectly normal and healthy.

Made Life Miserable

She had made a potentially comfortable and happy life perfectly miserable, and heaven knows how wretched she had made her husband and children—simply from a false idea that she was in delicate health.

Gifted amateurs, who have never practiced medicine a day in their lives, write glibly in the magazines about this or that being "the great medical problem." It is cancer usually, or, perhaps, infantile paralysis. But they are not real problems. There is something to do for cancer, and even if we fail, death is seldom a problem and even less often a tragedy. As Hamlet said, with his customary verbosity, it is "common." It is a tragedy we all prepare for. And real handicaps are often advantages in disguise.

No, it is these self-made invalids who are the great medical problem. What was the tremendous line of Wordsworth's? It was in the "Prelude," I think: "Unprofitably traveling toward the grave."

His statement follows:

"Russia's inhuman invasion of peace-loving, unoffending Finland surprises no student of current events, but it flagrantly violates every principle of international law, increases civilization's contempt for the bloodthirsty Stalin, and intensifies Christianity's loathing for the lawless and Godless Bolshivic regime.

"I hope that in protest against this infamy the United States will immediately sever diplomatic relations with the Soviet union and never renew them until after the Russians have banished the outlaws and cutthroats who now rule them with a rod of iron, and plan promptly to overrun all Europe and eventually the entire world.

"In my opinion if the question of severing our relations with the Reds were submitted to the Senate more than ninety of the ninety-six members would support it."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

One-Sided Engagement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I'm engaged to is rather good-looking, and all the girls like him. He's the kind who doesn't believe in dancing and shows and I sacrifice going to them because of him. You see I love him very much. When we first became engaged, he was very sweet and considerate, but now he shows his love only when the moon and stars are shining, when we're in a romantic setting.

My sister says that I shouldn't sacrifice all my good times for him; therefore, he doesn't like her. I do give in to all his moods, but it hurts me because he never will give in to anything I say. I'm not really happy in my heart, but I try to appear happy outwardly.

IN DOUBT.

When you have to do a great deal of giving in before marriage, it's more than probable you'll have to do so even more afterwards. A young man who doesn't believe in shows, dancing, or other innocent amusements strikes me as a doubtful life-partner for a girl who does like and approves of these things.

Besides, my dear, there are many long periods of time in married life when the moon and stars aren't shining, and there is no romantic setting. Comradship, good sportsmanship, and mutual love and respect are the things that keep people happy together. An engaged girl should be radiantly happy all the time and not have to pretend that she is when she really isn't.

Too Many Girl Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22 years old and have been told by my friends that I'm handsome. I've gone out with most of the girls in my crowd, but never seemed to care for anyone in particular.

And now I think I've fallen in love with a girl, at first sight. I met her a few weeks ago, and started going with her. I've already thought of buying an engagement ring on her birthday, which is coming soon. But now I hesitate, because she's kind of peeved at me and acts as if she doesn't care to see me any more.

Upon insisting to know the reason for her "mad", she told me that she heard I had been running around with every girl in the neighborhood, and that she doesn't care to go with a boy who was so much talked about by everyone. I told her I didn't intend to go with other girls anymore and that I really love her, but she wouldn't listen.

T.

If the girl persists in turning you down, I'm afraid you will have to charge it up to experience and in future be less of a sheik among the girls in your neighborhood. I believe, however, that if you persist and show the girl you really are in earnest this time, she may relent and you will be restored to her good graces. Here's hoping.

One Chin is Enough

By HELEN FOLLETT

CATCH 'EM YOUNG! is the beauty rule for double chins. One chin is all that any woman needs, and when that other one appears there's a good deal of sobbing. The plumpies get them because adipose tissue banks up, but it sometimes happens that an occasional skinny finds fulness developing just above her Adam's apple. She carries her head low, the fibers under the chin lose elasticity, a sag results.

Muscles must be hardened, tissues made firm, fat cells forced to go their way and die. This presto-change act cannot be accomplished in a hurry; so, if you are about to give battle to a superfluous, unwanted chin, be prepared to keep up the good work for at least two months.

After the nightly face washing apply a heavy cream. Hold the head on the level, pick up the flesh between thumb and first fingers, and roll firmly. Several minutes of that, then with the finger-tips meeting under the chin, sweep and smooth upward to the ears. Keep the fibers relaxed. Then, holding the chin close and tight with the palm of one hand, turn the head from side to side with a hard muscle pull. Turn the head, but not the hand. This treatment kneads and tones the flesh.

The short-nosed girl who wears glasses should select a high, arched bridge. If the eyes are round, lenses should be square or oblong. If the nose is long, you can disguise its length by wearing a bridge that is set low.

Light-colored frames are displacing the dark shell ones. They are daintier and more becoming, don't make a woman look owly-eyed.

When not using your glasses, keep them in their case. Placing glasses face downward will produce scratches that impair the lenses.

"TELL BILL GOODBYE"

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

By Marie Blizard

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.

NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.

ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willoughby house.

DR. BILL MALLORY, close friend of Ellen's.

YESTERDAY: When Fabienne learns that Bill is at the settlement house every night, she suddenly decides to resume her work there, much to Ellen's delight.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

THEY WERE a small group in the settlement house dining room where a piano had been placed for rehearsal of the carols.

Fabienne consulted a card in her hand and looked up at the children with an encouraging smile. "The four tallest girls and the four tallest boys will stand over here to the right," she said, leading them to their positions. "The boys in back of the girls. Then Luigi, you and Ingaborg, Lee and Colleen will stand in the front row. That's right!"

Twelve foreign faces beamed at her.

"Now you look just like the picture that I showed you in the Christmas Carol book!" And indeed, they would, with the simple costumes Miss Winters was making out of donations for them—long bright woolen scarfs to wrap around their throats and long coats. Put a lantern in little Luigi's hand and the picture would come to life.

"Teacher," Colleen Flaherty asked shyly, "What's the lantern for?"

"Oh, didn't I tell you about that? Well, you see the first little boys and girls who went out on Christmas Eve to spread good cheer with their carols did not have bright street lights, so they had to have a lantern to show the way from house to house over the soft snow."

"Were they cold standing in the snow?" The wistful voice of Lars, the tallest of the boys wanted to know. Fabienne's heart smote her. She knew what cold meant to this fatherless boy who lived in a miserable, unheated tenement. She said gently, "No, Lars, they weren't cold any more than we're going to be cold. Their hearts were light and happy because they were singing Christmas hymns of joy to make others happy. The way we're going to be."

But were they? These poor little mites. There'd be toys and candy and fruit for them at the settlement house, but where was that Christmas joy she was painting in their eager imaginations? Cold tenements. Wretchedness and poverty and dirt and sickness was their lot.

For her there would be the holiday of fables. The yule log and groaning board. The big tree in the library of Willoughby hall. The excitement of voices calling cheery greetings, the gaily colored ribbons and the mass of greens. The Christmas punch and the candle-lit table. The beautiful gowns and the Christmas ball.

She cleared her throat. "I can't tell you any more stories now. Dr. Mallory will be down in a minute and we want to be in our places all ready to sing when he comes in. Let's surprise him."

She took her place at the piano and struck a cord for pitch. Twelve childish voices opened the song. Bill had come in.

She smiled at him briefly and gave her attention for the next half hour to her work.

Bill dismissed the children and drew a chair up beside hers where she sat at the piano.

He said, "You're a softie."

"Smile when you say that," she said with simulated belligerency. "What gave you that idea?"

"Your face," he said, moving his eyes over it with serious eyes. "I thought it was immobile when first I saw you."

"It's the same face," she told him, wishing she could escape. If he looked at her often that way, he'd read something of her admiration—yes, that was the way she put it to herself—in her eyes.

If he looked at her often that way, he's read something of her admiration.

"No." He shook his head. "Its not the same face, or the same girl, at all. I was watching you from the gallery." They were rehearsing in the little theater. "And I saw your thoughts written all over your face when the Anderson boy asked you if they'd be cold standing in the snow."

"Well," she said staunchly, "aren't you sorry for these children? Who wouldn't be?"

"Sure I'm sorry for them. But not about Christmas. I'm sorry for the people who think of Christmas in terms of comfort and expensive presents and big dances."

As if he had surprised her thoughts, Fabienne looked at him guiltily. "What's wrong with that?" she asked.

"There's nothing wrong with it, except that it isn't the real thing about Christmas. It's like looking at a rhinestone and being satisfied with it when there's a star to be touched."

"You think these children touch stars?"

"Yes," he said simply.

"How?" She had to ask it.

"They get something you can't wrap up in tissue paper. Something the best of shops can't sell you because there is no price on it."

"An orange, a bag of candy," she said, "and a Christmas tree in a settlement house."

"Fabienne, Fabienne, what a stupid little girl you are!" It was the first time he had called her by her name. "Do you think they get excited about an orange? Most of them snitch them every day. Or a Christmas tree? Yes, they do. But it's because it's's a symbol of the whole spirit of the holiday that lifts them out of their lives. Now, I'm going to sound like a preacher."

"Go on," she said.

"It's a lift that doesn't disappear. With a lot of them it will. Because many of them are destined to finish their lives in poverty and ignorance. But some of them will always know what Christmas stands for. Do you know what it stands for, Fabienne?"

She shook her head.

"For hope, child. It's the birthday of Jesus Christ. No man can ever think of Him without thinking of hope. The little stable in Bethlehem. The star that guided the wise men. Everyone of these kids knows about that. It's something that belongs to everyone of them. Something that they sense as a greater gift than the orange or the bag of candy. That's why the Christmas spirit is something complete and beautiful. Can you be sorry for them when they have that? Or can you be sorry for the people who haven't?"

"For both," she said in a still voice. "But these children—"

"When they're men and women, they'll remember what they felt when they were children. The stable in Bethlehem and what it stands for, the feeling that thrills these young hearts when they sing the carols will always be there."

She held out her hand to him and said, "Thanks for telling me, Bill. Telling me something I should have known. Only, you see I'm not religious."

"You're a lot of things you don't even know about," he said cryptically. "Including a darn good disciplinarian. You've done a mighty good job on this project. Going to be around Christmas to hear the fruits of your labor?"

"I'm taking the nine o'clock train to Maryland. I'll hear the carols and rush to the station. I'll be in by two. And two o'clock is practically the shank of the evening in my part of the world. You staying in New York?"

"Yeah. A doctor can't run away for holidays. But don't you worry about me. Ellen's taking pity on me. Wish you were going to be here, too."

Hmmmm. She didn't! Not to see Bill and Ellen laughing over the same things, sharing the same experiences. She had never seen them together except at the settlement house, and she didn't want to.

Give her Maryland and the gaiety and music and Nicky and all the people she could share experiences with.

But she was not to spend that Christmas at Willoughby hall.

The telegram came at six o'clock, when she was winding a bright red scarf around Patsy O'Brien's neck.

She read it, swallowed the forlornness that swept over her and thrust it into her skirt pocket. No need to tell anybody that she wasn't going to Maryand because Aunt Edna's sister had died and Uncle Mark and Aunt Edna were already on their way to St. Louis.

Fabienne Seymour didn't want anybody to be sorry for her because she had no place to go on Christmas.

East bid 1-Club here and West, who knew his partner as a player addicted to short-suit Club bids, responded with 2-No Trumps. When East now bid 3-No Trumps, South stuck in the absurd call of 4-Diamonds. This only egged West on with his big hand, and he went to 6-Clubs.

North was very pleased to double this, although, as it develops, an overtrick can be made for a score of 1,140 points. South now realized he had probably caused trouble and so sacrificed at 6-Diamonds, which West doubled. The latter put up the best possible defense, leading the ace and another diamond, but the contract was set only five tricks, worth 900 points.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

One-Sided Engagement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I'm engaged to is rather good-looking, and all the girls like him. He's the kind who doesn't believe in dancing and shows and I sacrifice going to them because of him. You see I love him very much. When we first became engaged, he was very sweet and considerate, but now he shows his love only when the moon and stars are shining, when we're in a romantic setting.

My sister says that I shouldn't sacrifice all my good times for him; therefore, he doesn't like her. I do give in to all his moods, but it hurts me because he never will give in to anything I say. I'm not really happy in my heart, but I try to appear happy outwardly.

IN DOUBT.

When you have to do a great deal of giving in before marriage, it's more than probable you'll have to do so even more afterwards. A young man who doesn't believe in shows, dancing, or other innocent amusements strikes me as a doubtful life-partner for a girl who does like and approves of these things.

Besides, my dear, there are many long periods of time in married life when the moon and stars aren't shining, and there is no romantic setting. Comradship, good sportsmanship, and mutual love and respect are the things that keep people happy together. An engaged girl should be radiantly happy all the time and not have to pretend that she is when she really isn't.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22 years old and have been told by my friends that I'm handsome. I've gone out with most of the girls in my crowd, but never seemed to care for anyone in particular.

And now I think I've fallen in love with a girl, at first sight. I met her a few weeks ago, and started going with her. I've already thought of buying an engagement ring on her birthday, which is coming soon. But now I hesitate, because she's kind of peeved at me and acts as if she doesn't care to see me any more.

Upon insisting to know the reason for her "mad", she told me that she heard I had been running around with every girl in the neighborhood, and that she doesn't care to go with a boy who was so much talked about by everyone. I told her I didn't intend to go with other girls anymore and that I really love her, but she wouldn't listen.

T.

If the girl persists in turning you down, I'm afraid you will have to charge it up to experience and in future be less of a sheik among the girls in your neighborhood. I believe, however, that if you persist and show the girl you really are in earnest this time, she may relent and you will be restored to her good graces. Here's hoping.

One Chin is Enough

By HELEN FOLLETT

CATCH 'EM YOUNG! is the beauty rule for double chins. One chin is all that any woman needs, and when that other one appears there's a good deal of sobbing. The plumpies get them because adipose tissue banks up, but it sometimes happens that an occasional skinny finds fulness developing just above her Adam's apple. She carries her head low, the fibers under the chin lose elasticity, a sag results.

Muscles must be hardened, tissues made firm, fat cells forced to go their way and die. This presto-change act cannot be accomplished in a hurry; so, if you are about to give battle to a superfluous, unwanted chin, be prepared to keep up the good work for at least two months.

After the nightly face washing apply a heavy cream. Hold the head on the level, pick up the flesh between thumb and first fingers, and roll firmly. Several minutes of that, then with the finger-tips meeting under the chin, sweep and smooth upward to the ears. Keep the fibers relaxed. Then, holding the chin close and tight with the palm of one hand, turn the head from side to side with a hard muscle pull. Turn the head, but not the hand. This treatment kneads and tones the flesh.

The short-nosed girl who wears glasses should select a high, arched bridge. If the eyes are round, lenses should be square or oblong. If the nose is long, you can disguise its length by wearing a bridge that is set low.

Light-colored frames are displacing the dark shell ones. They are daintier and more becoming, don't make a woman look owly-eyed.

When not using your glasses, keep them in their case. Placing glasses face downward will produce scratches that impair the lenses.

"TELL BILL GOODBYE"

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

By Marie Blizard

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.

NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.

ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willoughby house.

DR. BILL MALLORY, close friend of Ellen's.

YESTERDAY: When Fabienne learns that Bill is at the settlement house every night, she suddenly decides to resume her work there, much to Ellen's delight.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

THEY WERE a small group in the settlement house dining room where a piano had been placed for rehearsal of the carols.

Fabienne consulted a card in her hand and looked up at the children with an encouraging smile. "The four tallest girls and the four tallest boys will stand over here to the right," she said, leading them to their positions. "The boys in back of the girls. Then Luigi, you and Ingaborg, Lee and Colleen will stand in the front row. That's right!"

Twelve foreign faces beamed at her.

"Now you look just like the picture that I showed you in the Christmas Carol book!" And indeed, they would, with the simple costumes Miss Winters was making out of donations for them—long bright woolen scarfs to wrap around their throats and long coats. Put a lantern in little Luigi's hand and the picture would come to life.

"Teacher," Colleen Flaherty asked shyly, "What's the lantern for?"

"Oh, didn't I tell you about that? Well, you see the first little boys and girls who went out on Christmas Eve to spread good cheer with their carols did not have bright street lights, so they had to have a lantern to show the way from house to house over the soft snow."

"Were they cold standing in the snow?" The wistful voice of Lars, the tallest of the boys wanted to know. Fabienne's heart smote her. She knew what cold meant to this fatherless boy who lived in a miserable, unheated tenement. She said gently, "No, Lars, they weren't cold any more than we're going to be cold. Their hearts were light and happy because they were singing Christmas hymns of joy to make others happy. The way we're going to be."

But were they? These poor little mites. There'd be toys and candy and fruit for them at the settlement house, but where was that Christmas joy she was painting in their eager imaginations? Cold tenements. Wretchedness and poverty and dirt and sickness was their lot.

For her there would be the holiday of fables. The yule log and groaning board. The big tree in the library of Willoughby hall. The excitement of voices calling cheery greetings, the gaily colored ribbons and the mass of greens. The Christmas punch and the candle-lit table. The beautiful gowns and the Christmas ball.

She cleared her throat. "I can't tell you any more stories now. Dr. Mallory will be down in a minute and we want to be in our places all ready to sing when he comes in. Let's surprise him."

She took her place at the piano and struck a cord for pitch. Twelve childish voices opened the song. Bill had come in.

She smiled at him briefly and gave her attention for the next half hour to her work.

Bill dismissed the children and drew a chair up beside hers where she sat at the piano.

He said, "You're a softie."

"Smile when you say that," she said with simulated belligerency. "What gave you that idea?"

"Your face," he said, moving his eyes over it with serious eyes. "I thought it was immobile when first I saw you."

"It's the same face," she told him, wishing she could escape. If he looked at her often that way, he'd read something of her admiration—yes, that was the way she put it to herself—in her eyes.

If he looked at her often that way, he's read something of her admiration.

"No." He shook his head. "Its not the same face, or the same girl, at all. I was watching you from the gallery." They were rehearsing in the little theater. "And I saw your thoughts written all over your face when the Anderson boy asked you if they'd be cold standing in the snow."

"Well," she said staunchly, "aren't you sorry for these children? Who wouldn't be?"

"Sure I'm sorry for them. But not about Christmas. I'm sorry for the people who think of Christmas in terms of comfort and expensive presents and big dances."

As if he had surprised her thoughts, Fabienne looked at him guiltily. "What's wrong with that?" she asked.

"There's nothing wrong with it, except that it isn't the real thing about Christmas. It's like looking at a rhinestone and being satisfied with it when there's a star to be touched."

"You think these children touch stars?"

"Yes," he said simply.

"How?" She had to ask it.

"They get something you can't wrap up in tissue paper. Something the best of shops can't sell you because there is no price on it."

"An orange, a bag of candy," she said, "and a Christmas tree in a settlement house."

"Fabienne, Fabienne, what a stupid little girl you are!" It was the first time he had called her by her name. "Do you think they get excited about an orange? Most of them snitch them every day. Or a Christmas tree? Yes, they do. But it's because it's a symbol of the whole spirit of the holiday that lifts them out of their lives. Now, I'm going to sound like a preacher."

"Go on," she said.

"It's a lift that doesn't disappear. With a lot of them it will. Because many of them are destined to finish their lives in poverty and ignorance. But some of them will always know what Christmas stands for. Do you know what it stands for, Fabienne?"

She shook her head.

"For hope, child. It's the birthday of Jesus Christ. No man can ever think of Him without thinking of hope. The little stable in Bethlehem. The star that guided the wise men. Everyone of these kids knows about that. It's something that belongs to everyone of them. Something that they sense as a greater gift than the orange or the bag of candy. That's why the Christmas spirit is something complete and beautiful. Can you be sorry for them when they have that? Or can you be sorry for the people who haven't?"

"For both," she said in a still voice. "But these children—"

"When they're men and women, they'll remember what they felt when they were children. The stable in Bethlehem and what it stands for, the feeling that thrills these young hearts when they sing the carols will always be there."

She held out her hand to him and said, "Thanks for telling me, Bill. Telling me something I should have known. Only, you see I'm not religious."

"You're a lot of things you don't even know about," he said cryptically. "Including a darn good disciplinarian. You've done a mighty good job on this project. Going to be around Christmas to hear the fruits of your labor?"

"I'm taking the nine o'clock train to Maryland. I'll hear the carols and rush to the station. I'll be in by two. And two o'clock is practically the shank of the evening in my part of the world. You staying in New York?"

"Yeah. A doctor can't run away for holidays. But don't you worry about me. Ellen's taking pity on me. Wish you were going to be here, too."

Hmmmm. She didn't! Not to see Bill and Ellen laughing over the same things, sharing the same experiences. She had never seen them together except at the settlement house, and she didn't want to.

Give her Maryland and the gaiety and music and Nicky and all the people she could share experiences with.

But she was not to spend that Christmas at Willoughby hall.

The telegram came at six o'clock, when she was winding a bright red scarf around Patsy O'Brien's neck.

She read it, swallowed the forlornness that swept over her and thrust it into her skirt pocket. No need to tell anybody that she wasn't going to Maryand because Aunt Edna's sister had died and Uncle Mark and Aunt Edna were already on their way to St. Louis.

Fabienne Seymour didn't want anybody to be sorry for her because she had no place to go on Christmas.

THE CULPRIT ESCAPES

PERPETRATORS of bridge crimes don't always get properly punished. Sometimes the culprit escapes, perhaps through confessing his crime and then getting a break of luck on top of it, so that his opponents suffer instead of he for his perfidy.

East bid 1-Club here and West, who knew his partner as a player addicted to short-suit Club bids, responded with 2-No Trumps. When East now bid 3-No Trumps, South stuck in the absurd call of 4-Diamonds. This only egged West on with his big hand, and he went to 6-Clubs.

North was very pleased to double this, although, as it develops, an overtrick can be made for a score of 1,140 points. South now realized he had probably caused trouble and so sacrificed at 6-Diamonds, which West doubled. The latter put up the best possible defense, leading the ace and another diamond, but the contract was set only five tricks, worth 900 points.

Distressing

Lynchburg, Va. (AP)—'Twas all calm and quiet at the federal building when a passerby glanced aloft and then hurriedly entered. He sought out Postmaster John H. Cave. The postmaster sent an employe scrambling through a hatch to the roof. The stars and stripes had been flying upside down—a distress signal.

Back for More

Paris (AP)—General Clement de Grancourt, retired, who formerly commanded a French infantry regiment at Belfort and later an infantry brigade in Syria, has enlisted as a private soldier in the French army for the duration of the war.

The average capacity of railroad freight cars has increased 8.11 tons, or nearly 20 per cent since 1918.

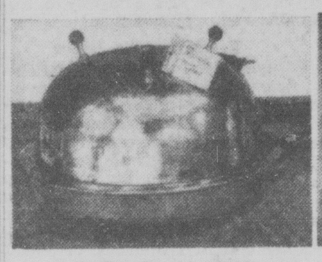
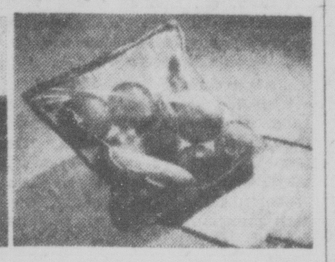
St. Nick Has a Special Pack Of Presents for the Kitchen

A double boiler of quintuple uses.



Broiler for the table



Ice-box fruit bag

Gay kitchen towels made of linen.

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

When Christmas comes to your kitchen the family may be tempted to forget the rest of the house, there are so many attractive new things.

Among the newest utensils are those in which stainless steel and copper are combined. The vessel is of steel, the bottom copper. Copper, say experts, distributes heat more evenly. One of these utensils starts out as a double boiler. But there's a lid, a saucepan and a pan with two handles that fits over the saucepan. The saucepan may be used as such or as the bottom of the double boiler. The top pan may serve innumerable purposes —from ice bucket to baking dish.

A number of the new utensils are designed to become serving dishes for the food that's cooked in them.

One of the most interesting is a chrome-finished broiler-boiler. It has a set of legs on top, another set on the bottom. On one set of legs, the unit is a broiler or a toaster; the heating unit is above. Turned over, the utensil becomes a saucepan, since the heating unit is then underneath.

There's a new pressure cooker which it is said, reduces the cooking time of Boston baked beans, for example, from seven or eight hours to fifty minutes.

There seems to be a trend toward Mexican and South American kitchens. A bright red and green motif — two peons bending over a bowl of fruits and vegetables is a best seller in many linen departments. Other kitchen towel patterns include stylized fruit, vegetable and floral designs and gay outdoor scenes.

Then there are the perennial favorites: Cover sets of water-proofed silk to protect foods. The newest is a cover to keep dust out of the toaster.

Add to these: food choppers. . . slicing machines. . . a twin-spout tea pot, one for tea, the other for hot water. . .wooden serving dishes . . . little alarm clocks to tell when to take the cake out of the oven . . .a slicer to cut up a round cake in one operation.

That's an idea of the 1939 kitchen Christmas. Don't say we didn't warn you.

Peach Griddle Cakes

Try these delicious griddle cakes in the place of the usual hot cakes. The ingredients needed include: One and a half cups milk; one cup cooked dried peaches, drained and chopped; one cup flour; one egg, beaten; two tablespoons butter, melted; three teaspoons baking powder; one teaspoon salt, and one teaspoon sugar. After sifting the dry ingredients together, add the milk, egg and peaches. Beat the batter until smooth, then bake slowly on greased hot griddle. Serve hot, with or without butter and sirup.

Ham and Sweet Potatoes

Some cooks believe the way to get the most enjoyment from a slice of ham is to smother it in sweet potatoes. Brown the slice of ham lightly on both sides. Then place it in a baking dish, spread slices of raw sweet potatoes over it and sugar to taste. Add one cup hot water to the ham drippings and pour over ham and potatoes. Cover and bake until tender, basting occasionally.

Apple Pie and Cheese

Apple pie is a man's pie and no frills need be added to make it appeal to the masculine appetite. However, for a special treat, place thin slices of cheese, or sprinkle grated cheese, over the top of the pie after it is baked. Slide it back into the oven long enough for the cheese to melt. Serve hot.

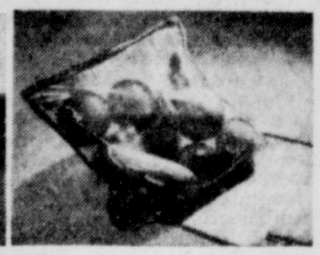
St. Nick Has a Special Pack Of Presents for the Kitchen

A double boiler of quintuple uses.

Broiler for the table



Ice-box fruit bag

Gay kitchen towels made of linen.

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

When Christmas comes to your kitchen the family may be tempted to forget the rest of the house, there are so many attractive new things.

Among the newest utensils are those in which stainless steel and copper are combined. The vessel is of steel, the bottom copper. Copper, say experts, distributes heat more evenly. One of these utensils starts out as a double boiler. But there's a lid, a saucepan and a pan with two handles that fits over the saucepan. The saucepan may be used as such or as the bottom of the double boiler. The top pan may serve innumerable purposes —from ice bucket to baking dish.

A number of the new utensils are designed to become serving dishes for the food that's cooked in them.

One of the most interesting is a chrome-finished broiler-boiler. It has a set of legs on top, another set on the bottom. On one set of legs, the unit is a broiler or a toaster; the heating unit is above. Turned over, the utensil becomes a saucepan, since the heating unit is then underneath.

There's a new pressure cooker which it is said, reduces the cooking time of Boston baked beans, for example, from seven or eight hours to fifty minutes.

There seems to be a trend toward Mexican and South American kitchens. A bright red and green motif — two peons bending over a bowl of fruits and vegetables is a best seller in many linen departments. Other kitchen towel patterns include stylized fruit, vegetable and floral designs and gay outdoor scenes.

Then there are the perennial favorites: Cover sets of water-proofed silk to protect foods. The newest is a cover to keep dust out of the toaster.

Add to these: food choppers. . . slicing machines. . . a twin-spout tea pot, one for tea, the other for hot water. . .wooden serving dishes . . . little alarm clocks to tell when to take the cake out of the oven . . .a slicer to cut up a round cake in one operation.

That's an idea of the 1939 kitchen Christmas. Don't say we didn't warn you.

Peach Griddle Cakes

Try these delicious griddle cakes in the place of the usual hot cakes. The ingredients needed include: One and a half cups milk; one cup cooked dried peaches, drained and chopped; one cup flour; one egg, beaten; two tablespoons butter, melted; three teaspoons baking powder; one teaspoon salt, and one teaspoon sugar. After sifting the dry ingredients together, add the milk, egg and peaches. Beat the batter until smooth, then bake slowly on greased hot griddle. Serve hot, with or without butter and sirup.

Ham and Sweet Potatoes

Some cooks believe the way to get the most enjoyment from a slice of ham is to smother it in sweet potatoes. Brown the slice of ham lightly on both sides. Then place it in a baking dish, spread slices of raw sweet potatoes over it and sugar to taste. Add one cup hot water to the ham drippings and pour over ham and potatoes. Cover and bake until tender, basting occasionally.

Apple Pie and Cheese

Apple pie is a man's pie and no frills need be added to make it appeal to the masculine appetite. However, for a special treat, place thin slices of cheese, or sprinkle grated cheese, over the top of the pie after it is baked. Slide it back into the oven long enough for the cheese to melt. Serve hot.

Spreading the Good News

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

12-2.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for December 3 is Matthew 10, the Golden Text being Revelations 22:17, "And let him that heareth say, Come.")

JESUS CALLED His disciples to Him and sent them on their way to preach the gospel to the Jews. "Not to the Samaritans, and not to the Gentiles," He said, but to the "lost sheep of the children of Israel."

It is interesting to learn what we can of the character of these men who had left all and followed Jesus, even to martrydom. We cannot know much about them, but some things we do know.

Andrew, one of the first to be chosen, brought his brother Simon Peter. Jesus named him Peter, "the Rock," you remember. Peter is often referred to as Jesus' best beloved disciple. He did not always do right. For instance, it was Peter who, after telling the Lord how much he loved Him, denied him thrice. But Peter always suffered terribly after he had done wrong. He was evidently a lovable and impulsive man.

Too Eager for Honor

James and John, sons of Zebedee, were sometimes too eager for honor, but they loved the Master dearly. Philip was afraid to venture; Bartholomew or Nathaniel was never deceitful; Thomas always wanted to be sure. (You know the saying, "Doubting Thomas.") Matthew honored his Lord at a feast and wrote a book about Him. Thaddaeus, or Judas, son of James, asked Jesus an important question; Simon was a zealot and was dissatisfied with Roman rule; while Judas Iscariot was not to be trusted, for he betrayed his Master for money, although it brought him only unhappiness and he destroyed himself.

These men were Jesus' chosen companions. After calling them to Him he gave them advice and sent them out to spread the good news. They are not to be worried about their personal needs, for they are to go forth without silver, gold or brass for their purses. They are to have no sorip for their journey, "neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat," Jesus told them. They are to go to any worthy person and be guests of the house. "And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it," He said. If they are not well received in a home, they are ordered to "shake the dust of it off their feet."

It will not be easy to preach the good tidings, they are warned. They will probably be arrested and brought before judges, governors and kings, and may be scourged in the synagogues. But they must not fear, for "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall to the ground without your Father.

"But the very hairs of your head are numbered.

Fear Not

"Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows." Jesus knew well that his message of peace and good would not be well received, and that there would be much bitterness and quarreling over it. "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

"For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be those of his own household."

Jesus must have said that sadly, knowing that it was true and must be told in fairness to the men He was sending out to spread the good news. And all through the centuries it has proved true that no subject has been so bitterly discussed as religion, even by people who profess to be His true followers. They have fought even over the interpretation of His words.

In conclusion, it is written in Isaiah 42:5-6, "Thus said God the Lord, He that created the heavens, and stretched them out; He that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and the spirit to them that walk therein:

"I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light to the Gentiles."

Spreading the Good News — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 10

Jesus called to Him His twelve disciples and gave them power to heal the sick and to cast out unclean spirits. He gave them their orders, as it were, and sent them to "spread the good news."

He told them to go to the "lost sheep of the children of Israel," and preach, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." "What I tell you in darkness," He said, "that speak ye in light."

They were not to take any money or extra clothing with them, said Jesus, "for the workman is worthy of his meat." They were told to go to the house of whomever would receive them.

"Fear not," Jesus told the disciples, for as God careth for the sparrows He would care for them, for "ye are of more value than many sparrows." (GOLDEN TEXT—Revelation 22:17)

The Golden Text

Jesus appoints the twelve

"And let him that heareth say, Come."—Revelation 22:17.

Spreading the Good News

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

12-2.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for December 3 is Matthew 10, the Golden Text being Revelations 22:17, "And let him that heareth say, Come.")

JESUS CALLED His disciples to Him and sent them on their way to preach the gospel to the Jews. "Not to the Samaritans, and not to the Gentiles," He said, but to the "lost sheep of the children of Israel."

It is interesting to learn what we can of the character of these men who had left all and followed Jesus, even to martrydom. We cannot know much about, them, but some things we do know.

Andrew, one of the first to be chosen, brought his brother Simon Peter. Jesus named him Peter, "the Rock," you remember. Peter is often referred to as Jesus' best beloved disciple. He did not always do right. For instance, it was Peter who, after telling the Lord how much he loved Him, denied him thrice. But Peter always suffered terribly after he had done wrong. He was evidently a lovable and impulsive man.

Too Eager for Honor

James and John, sons of Zebedee, were sometimes too eager for honor, but they loved the Master dearly. Philip was afraid to venture; Bartholomew or Nathaniel was never deceitful; Thomas always wanted to be sure. (You know the saying, "Doubting Thomas.") Matthew honored his Lord at a feast and wrote a book about Him. Thaddaeus, or Judas, son of James, asked Jesus an important question; Simon was a zealot and was dissatisfied with Roman rule; while Judas Iscariot was not to be trusted, for he betrayed his Master for money, although it brought him only unhappiness and he destroyed himself.

These men were Jesus' chosen companions. After calling them to Him he gave them advice and sent them out to spread the good news. They are not to be worried about their personal needs, for they are to go forth without silver, gold or brass for their purses. They are to have no scrip for their journey, "neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat," Jesus told them. They are to go to any worthy person and be guests of the house. "And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it," He said. If they are not well received in a home, they are ordered to "shake the dust of it off their feet."

It will not be easy to preach the good tidings, they are warned. They will probably be arrested and brought before judges, governors and kings, and may be scourged in the synagogues. But they must not fear, for "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall to the ground without your Father.

"But the very hairs of your head are numbered.

Fear Not

"Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows." Jesus knew well that his message of peace and good would not be well received, and that there would be much bitterness and quarreling over it. "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

"For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be those of his own household."

Jesus must have said that sadly, knowing that it was true and must be told in fairness to the men He was sending out to spread the good news. And all through the centuries it has proved true that no subject has been so bitterly discussed as religion, even by people who profess to be His true followers. They have fought even over the interpretation of His words.

In conclusion, it is written in Isaiah 42:5-6, "Thus said God the Lord, He that created the heavens, and stretched them out; He that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and the spirit to them that walk therein:

"I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light to the Gentiles."

Spreading the Good News — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 10

Jesus called to Him His twelve disciples and gave them power to heal the sick and to cast out unclean spirits. He gave them their orders, as it were, and sent them to "spread the good news."

He told them to go to the "lost sheep of the children of Israel," and preach, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." "What I tell you in darkness," He said, "that speak ye in light."

They were not to take any money or extra clothing with them, said Jesus, "for the workman is worthy of his meat." They were told to go to the house of whomever would receive them.

"Fear not," Jesus told the disciples, for as God careth for the sparrows He would care for them, for "ye are of more value than many sparrows."
(GOLDEN TEXT—Revelation 22:17)

Rapid Reading Is Rejected As A Bad Practice

s More of a Hindrance Than a Help, Dr. Myers Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Some persons read at an amazing rate, while most of us read rather slowly. Most reading experts seem to assume that practically every person should read more rapidly than he does. The experts point out that slow readers usually have wasteful eye movements as they read and tend to pronounce every word, even to move the lips when they read silently.

For reading fiction, at which the bulk of reading time is spent merely for narrative, speed is certainly very desirable. Speed also is desirable for skimming serious materials. But for literary style, for improvement of self-expression in speech or writing, and for reflective thinking and mastery of facts, the habit of very rapid reading may prove a hindrance rather than a help.

Not Rapid Readers

How did Abe Lincoln and Benjamin Franklin get their simple, forceful styles? They were not rapid readers. They read far fewer books than the average sixth grade child has read. But they read these books over and over, without reason for haste as they did so. Lincoln was read to in his early years. Probably Franklin also was. Franklin said he read Addison with a purpose to imitate his style. You see the results in his Autobiography.

Just Skim Through

What is happening to the average high school student who attempts to read rapidly from his basic textbooks? The trouble is that so many of them only skim these books, scarcely mastering the alphabet of careful and reflective study.

Furthermore, the average high school and college student is expected to read so many "solid books" that for want of time his reading is only skimming. He gets rough impressions, very rough, instead of mastery. Often he leaves a course in a maze of confusion.

If the average student in high school, certainly in college, were to read carefully and reflectively all the books assigned in his courses, he would have no time left for sleep or recreation. A few conscientious students to try to read all of them and pay the price.

I believe about the greatest curse in high school and college is the long, loathsome lists of "outside readings." I'm not condemning the list but the length of it. Maybe the magnitude of book assignments at high school and college is a major factor in inducing students to avoid serious reading after graduation.

Time was when all reading at school, in the grades, was oral reading, but there is a swing back to more oral reading, fortunately.

Any youth or adult who wishes to improve his effectiveness of expression can afford to read aloud for half an hour or so a day, choosing materials written in simple, forceful style. The Bible is a good source, so are the classic fairy tales. If a young child happens to be listening, so much the better.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Why do you advise reading, rather than telling, stories to the young child at home?

A. Almost anyone can read a story; few can tell it well. When you read, you usually employ better language. Besides, the book has pictures and takes on for the child a kind of personality as the source of things to think about, rather than a person.

209 Peace Units Listed in N. Y.; Many New Groups

Organizations To Keep U. S. Out of War Are Booming

By ROBERT N. STURDEVANT

New York, Dec. 1. (AP) — Peace organizations are booming in the United States.

Nobody seems to know how many there are, but in New York alone one survey, made before the new European war, listed 209 groups concerned with promoting peace on earth and good will toward men.

There are scores of others scattered throughout the nation. Many have sprung up since the new war, concerning themselves principally with keeping America out of it.

The flood of peace literature is tremendous.

Catchy slogans are at a premium and variations on the theme "Keep America Out of War" have resulted in no fewer than four groups with almost identical names.

You may buy metal plates for your auto bearing the injunction "Keep America Out of War", or you may wear any number of buttons and emblems bespeaking your neutral attitude.

Father Divine Active

Father Divine, from his Harlem heaven, has isued reams of stamps on which doves carrying olive branches apear to be soaring over printed matter containing excerpts from the father's cabled peace pleas to Hitler, Chamberlain, Daladier and others.

In Niles, Mich., United Americans Inc., have revived the chain-letter fad to spread their campaign for a constitutional amendment forbidding conscription for military service outside the Western hemisphere.

The "passive purchase" plan, as espoused by Theodore N. Kaufman, chairman of the American Federation of Peace, with headquarters at Newark, N. J., is based on the idea that money talks.

Kaufman argues, in an eleven-page booklet which may be had for the asking, that if people would get together for two weeks of "curtailed purchases" 'the effect on business in general would knock the props from under any war-profiteering.

Ask Postcard Barrage

Another novel peace scheme, employed in the fight against repeal of the arms embargo, borrowed an idea from "thirty dollars every Thursday" It was called "a postcard every Tuesday" and enlisted neutrality minded citizens to bombard their Congressmen with postcards each Tuesday bearing the simple admonition "keep us out of war."

Students at Washington University, St. Louis, sent letters home to their parents suggesting ways for America to remain neutral.

In New York a group of young men of military age, calling themselves the "eighteen to forty-fivers," organized "The New Eastern Front" with a program designed to keep the country out of anything other than a defensive war, to promote the spread of Democracy in the Western hemisphere and to strengthen the army and navy.

Then, there's a peace school to train peace and anti-war workers. It's called the "Jane Addams Peace School," and is located in Manhattan. Its curiculum includes public speaking, organization methods, peace education and war propaganda.

Hi-Yo, Here's a Real Drug Store Cowboy

Oklahoma City (AP) —There really is a drug store cowboy in Oklahoma City.

All the messenger boys were on other errands when Miss Letha Scott, druggist, needed one in a hurry. Just then Tup Robertson rode up on his horse.

"Tup, why don't you make this delivery for me?" said she. And Tup was off in a flash.

It made such a hit with the customer that Miss Scott got two other boys with horses, ten - gallon hats and trimmings to carry her packages.

New Type German Mine Is Set Off By Sound Waves

Washington, Dec. 1. (AP) — The new type German mines blamed for heavy recent shipping losses in the North Sea were reported today to be so devised that their charge may be set off by sound waves as well as by the magnetic force of a ship's hull.

Informed quarters here said they had received word that Great Britain had discovered the secret of the mines by recovering several of them unexploded.

While they were described as probably the most formidable new weapon of the war, British naval authorities were represented as confident that means of copeing with them could be devised quickly, now that their nature and mechanism had been brought to light.

The British findings were said to be:

1. The firing mechanism was extremely sensitive and was based on a trigger that would be sprung eithed by magnetic force, or, through acoustical horns, by sound waves.

2. The mines apparently were anchired directly on the sea bottom, rather than set drift or attached to cables regulating their distance beneath the surface.

3. The explosive charge was heavy enough to blast the hull of a passing surface ship from a considerable depth, but the weapons were most effective in comparatively shallow coastal waters. One was recovered from a depth of nearly 150 feet.

The mines raised a new difficulty for British and French naval forces. Some ordinance experts thought it might be met by using energy rays which they said should be effective at considerable distances.

A firing mechanism sensitive enough to be set off by sound waves or by magnetism would react to an energy ray of some kind, it was suggested.

Rapid Reading Is Rejected As A Bad Practice

s More of a Hindrance Than a Help, Dr. Myers Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Some persons read at an amazing rate, while most of us read rather slowly. Most reading experts seem to assume that practically every person should read more rapidly than he does. The experts point out that slow readers usually have wasteful eye movements as they read and tend to pronounce every word, even to move the lips when they read silently.

For reading fiction, at which the bulk of reading time is spent merely for narrative, speed is certainly very desirable. Speed also is desirable for skimming serious materials. But for literary style, for improvement of self-expression in speech or writing, and for reflective thinking and mastery of facts, the habit of very rapid reading may prove a hindrance rather than a help.

Not Rapid Readers

How did Abe Lincoln and Benjamin Franklin get their simple, forceful styles? They were not rapid readers. They read far fewer books than the average sixth grade child has read. But they read these books over and over, without reason for haste as they did so. Lincoln was read to in his early years. Probably Franklin also was. Franklin said he read Addison with a purpose to imitate his style. You see the results in his Autobiography.

Just Skim Through

What is happening to the average high school student who attempts to read rapidly from his basic textbooks? The trouble is that so many of them only skim these books, scarcely mastering the alphabet of careful and reflective study.

Furthermore, the average high school and college student is expected to read so many "solid books" that for want of time his reading is only skimming. He gets rough impressions, very rough, instead of mastery. Often he leaves a course in a maze of confusion.

If the average student in high school, certainly in college, were to read carefully and reflectively all the books assigned in his courses, he would have no time left for sleep or recreation. A few conscientious students to try to read all of them and pay the price.

I believe about the greatest curse in high school and college is the long, loathsome lists of "outside readings." I'm not condemning the list but the length of it. Maybe the magnitude of book assignments at high school and college is a major factor in inducing students to avoid serious reading after graduation.

Time was when all reading at school, in the grades, was oral reading, but there is a swing back to more oral reading, fortunately.

Any youth or adult who wishes to improve his effectiveness of expression can afford to read aloud for half an hour or so a day, choosing materials written in simple, forceful style. The Bible is a good source, so are the classic fairy tales. If a young child happens to be listening, so much the better.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Why do you advise reading, rather than telling, stories to the young child at home?

A. Almost anyone can read a story; few can tell it well. When you read, you usually employ better language. Besides, the book has pictures and takes on for the child a kind of personality as the source of things to think about, rather than a person.

Organizations To Keep U. S. Out of War Are Booming

By ROBERT N. STURDEVANT

New York, Dec. 1. (AP) — Peace organizations are booming in the United States.

Nobody seems to know how many there are, but in New York alone one survey, made before the new European war, listed 209 groups concerned with promoting peace on earth and good will toward men.

There are scores of others scattered throughout the nation. Many have sprung up since the new war, concerning themselves principally with keeping America out of it.

The flood of peace literature is tremendous.

Catchy slogans are at a premium and variations on the theme "Keep America Out of War" have resulted in no fewer than four groups with almost identical names.

You may buy metal plates for your auto bearing the injunction "Keep America Out of War", or you may wear any number of buttons and emblems bespeaking your neutral attitude.

Young GOP Favors Civil Service for State Employees

Conference of Young Republicans Held in Fairmont

Fairmont, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—A proposal for a Civil Service system for all state employes was brought out tonight on the eve of the "thanksgiving conference" of State Young Republicans.

The state group's committee on Civil Service announcel it would ask for endorsement of a plan to create a three-man Civil Service Board which would oversee the hiring of all state workers.

The board would be under the administration of a director, to be selected through civil service examination.

Chairman Frank Everhart of Kingwood said the Civil Service recommendation, if accepted tomorrow by the general conference would be submitted to the next legislature.

About 150 delegates registered during the day, and officials said would attend the one-day session.

The resolutions committee, assigned the task of formulating the group's policies for the 1940 campaign, was scheduled to meet tonight. It was indicated some announcement of its findings might be made in advance of its formal report.

President Russell Nesbitt of Wheeling named a five-member credentials committee to handle certification of delegates and affiliated groups' representation. The chairman is J. A. Eyster of Halltown. Members are Harold Eagle of Hinton, Miss Pauline Duling of Keyser, Donald Van Camp of Middlebourne and Francis Watson of Fairmont.

Chairman R. Worth Shumaker of Buckhannon of the School Reform committee said a partial report would be submitted tomorrow.

Nesbitt will make his interim report to the general conference tomorrow afternoon.

Other speakers will niclude Donald W. Hornbeck, Chairman of the National Federation, and Representatives Dewey Short of Missouri and A. C. Schiffler of Wheeling.

It was announced that Richard Nowinson, editor of the "Young Republican" would not be able to attend.

School Board Answer Comes Too Late

Lester B. Reed, chairman of the Mt. Savage Citizens committee, announced definitely last night that Monday's mass meeting will be held in St. Patrick's hall.

The committee had asked the school board for permission to meet in the school building, but when the board's answer was held up for several days, arrangements were made to meet in the church hall.

The school question will be taken up, and State Senator Robert B. Kimble will speak in favor of allowing the people to elect their county board of education.

Luther League To See Detective's Exhibit

A demonstration in finger printing and modern crime detection methods will be given at tomorrow evening's meeting of the Luther League of St. Paul's Lutheran church.

Detective Sergeant B. F. Gaffney, of the Cumberland police, will give the demonstration. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held in the Sunday school room of the church, starting at 6:30 p. m.

Jail Prisoner Taken Back to Illinois

Herbert B. Baumhoff, arrested here Oct. 10 for passing worthless checks, yesterday was taken to Peoria, Ill., where he is charged with selling stock in a non-existent firm.

Baumhoff was released by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe after restitution was made for the worthless checks he allegedly passed here and in Washington.

Baumhoff was taken to Peoria by Deputy Sheriff Guy E. Dusenberry, of Peoria county.

Many Marylanders Find Employment

Baltimore, Dec. 1. (AP)—Continued improvement in heavy industries and the start of the Christmas rush provided new employment for 3,819 persons in Maryland in November, Director D. L. B. Fringer of the Maryland state employment service said today.

The Baltimore office placed 2,028 persons, including 164 professional workers, 517 skilled craftsmen and 290 domestics.

Since the first of this year, Fringer disclosed, the service has found employment for 28,561 persons.

Short $5,000 in Accounts, Employe Of Bank Suicides

Richlands, Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—Cashier C. B. Orr of the Richlands National Bank announced today the discovery of a $5,000 shortage twenty-four hours after Thomas Brammer Wells, discharged assistant cashier, was found shot to death.

Commonwealth's Attorney Carl Gillispie, who conducted an investigation, said Wells killed himself with a shotgun. The body, with wounds in the neck and head, was found yesterday at noon by Norfolk and Western section employes near the railroad tracks on the outskirts of Cedar Bluff.

Orr said bank officials had suspected a shortage in accounts and that Wells was discharged Monday.

A letter found on the former assistant's body and addressed to Orr said there was was a $700 shortage and that private stock certificates in a safety deposit box would cover part of it, the cashier related.

Orr said an audit was started Monday and completed today which revealed a $5,000 shortage.

The cashier related Wells' letter also told where missing ledger pages could be found.

The safe deposit box cannot be opened until a bank examiner arrives, Orr added.

Wells, a former resident of Roanoke, is survived by his widow and two children.

Liquor Store Robbed

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—State police reported today the state liquor store at Clendenin was robbed last night of nine cases of liquor valued at $202.20.

A side window was broken.

Hi-Y Members

David Moses, Barton, was severely bitten on the calf of the leg yesterday by a large hunting dog.

The child was bitten as she walked through the yard of a schoolmate. She was given first aid treatment by a physician in Barton, later being removed to Westernport where the wound was cauterized. The dog has been isolated to determine if it is suffering from rabies.

Brief Mention

Mrs. John Walker, Gilmore, was removed to Memorial hospital, Cumberland, to undergo an operation.

Dr. M. J. McDermott and son, Cowan, Baltimore, were recent visitors.

William Berry who is visiting in Baltimore, was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Anne Whiteford, who has been visiting relatives here for the past month.

Mrs. Phillip Lashbaugh, Barton, was removed to Miners hospital, Frostburg, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Lashbaugh fell some time ago and has not fully recovered, when she fell again.

Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy announce the birth of a daughter in Reeves clinic, Westernport.

Hetzel Wolford Sent to Prison

Charged with Contributing to Delinquency of a Minor

Grantsville, Dec. 1—Hetzel Wolford, 28, near Mt. Savage, was sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction last night at a hearing in Trial Magistrate's Court here. He was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor and also violating a parole. Wolford had been sentenced by a local magistrate several months ago, but the sentence was suspended.

Harley McKenzie Held

Harley McKenzie, Grantsville, was taken to the county jail at Oakland yesterday afternoon by Constable Daniel W. Hershberger, where he is being held on a charge of wife-beating. Officers were called to the home about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, when McKenzie is alleged to have come home intoxicated and started beating his wife. He will be brought here later for a hearing before the local magistrate.

Aged Man Hit

Harrison Beachy, near Jennings, is being held in the Somerset county jail on charges of being a hit-skip driver. Beachy is said to have struck an elderly man named Collier near Somerfield, Pa., and failed to stop. Evidence connected him with the affair when he ran out of gas further up the hill and parts of the man's clothing were found on his fender. It is also thought that because of his advanced age, the man might have fallen against the machine. A hearing in the case will be held later.

Mrs. Neil Dies

Mrs. Clara Catherine Neil, 58, died at her home at Friendsville last night. She was born at Accident, March 28, 1881, a daughter of the late Adam and Elizabeth Miller Snyder, natives of this section. Surviving are her husband, August F. Neil, Friendsville, whom she married July 19, 1919, and one foster-daughter, Selma Miller, Toledo, O. She also leaves the following brothers and sisters: William A. Snyder, Piedmont, W. Va.; A. C. Snyder, Accident; Dr. F. W. Snyder, Cumberland; Erma Snyder, Buffalo, N. Y.; Freda Snyder, Toledo, O.; Mrs. George Bushman and Mrs. L. C. Zimmerman, Eden, N. Y.

Bridge Club Meets

Miss Jean Young and Mrs. W. J. Glenn jointly entertained the Teachers' Club last night at their home at Friendsville. Three tables of contract bridge were in play, Miss Betty Shunk, Friendsville, being the only additional guest. Miss Emma Caulk won both the high score and floating prizes, Mrs. William E. Tarbell, second high, and Miss Ruth Keefe, the consolation. Luncheon was served at the conclusion of the evening.

Aid Meeting Held

The ladies of the Methodist Ladies' Aid Society met last night at the home of Mrs. Melissa Boucher, who served as their hostess. Mrs. Harry C. Edwards led the devotionals and readings were given by Mrs. Henry F. Durst, Mrs. Leonard B. Schaefer, Miss Ethel Broadwater and Mrs. Marshall Beachy. Plans were made for the annual Christmas party, which will be held at the home of Mrs. D. R. Carder on Thursday evening, December 28. Mrs. Clayton Edwards was admitted to membership in the society at this meeting. Following the discussion of business matters, the eighteen members present enjoyed a brief social hour, during which refreshments were served.

Sends Threatening Letter

Huntington, W Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—Special Agent J. W. Warnes of the FBI said today Wilbur Teeter, 67, of Elkins, admitted writing a letter to an Elkins attorney demanding money under threat of bodily harm.

Warnes reported the letter was sent on October 30 to Earl Maxwell. He added that Teeter was charged with attempted extortion.

Man Says He Carries Out Word of Lord by Chopping Hand Off

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—Displaying the bandaged stump of a right arm, twenty-four-year-old Elbert Snyder told hospital visitors today he had "carried out the word of the Lord."

The youth, who recently joined a church, said he despoiled some religious literature—and because his hand "had offended by body" chopped it off.

He notified neighbors "after a couple of hours" and was taken to a hospital.

Physicians said he was weak from loss of blood.

"Shortly after my hand offended me," the Spring Hill youth said, "I prayed and asked the Lord what to do. Somehow I recalled that it says in the Bible to cut off the hand that offends the body.

"I knew it was a message from God, so I rushed out into the yard and grabbed up the axe. I put my right hand—the hand that had tried to blacken my whole body—on the chopping block and cut it off."

Cutting the hand off, the youth said, didn't cause him much pain because "I had carried out the word of the Lord.

"The minute I chopped off my right hand I began to feel better."

Young GOP Favors Civil Service for State Employees

Conference of Young Republicans Held in Fairmont

Fairmont, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—A proposal for a Civil Service system for all state employes was brought out tonight on the eve of the "thanksgiving conference" of State Young Republicans.

The state group's committee on Civil Service announcel it would ask for endorsement of a plan to create a three-man Civil Service Board which would oversee the hiring of all state workers.

The board would be under the administration of a director, to be selected through civil service examination.

Chairman Frank Everhart of Kingwood said the Civil Service recommendation, if accepted tomorrow by the general conference would be submitted to the next legislature.

About 150 delegates registered during the day, and officials said would attend the one-day session.

The resolutions committee, assigned the task of formulating the group's policies for the 1940 campaign, was scheduled to meet tonight. It was indicated some announcement of its findings might be made in advance of its formal report.

President Russell Nesbitt of Wheeling named a five-member credentials committee to handle certification of delegates and affiliated groups' representation. The chairman is J. A. Eyster of Halltown. Members are Harold Eagle of Hinton, Miss Pauline Duling of Keyser, Donald Van Camp of Middlebourne and Francis Watson of Fairmont.

Chairman R. Worth Shumaker of Buckhannon of the School Reform committee said a partial report would be submitted tomorrow.

Nesbitt will make his interim report to the general conference tomorrow afternoon.

Other speakers will niclude Donald W. Hornbeck, Chairman of the National Federation, and Representatives Dewey Short of Missouri and A. C. Schiffler of Wheeling.

It was announced that Richard Swinson, editor of the "Young Republican" would not be able to attend.

School Board Answer Comes Too Late

Lester B. Reed, chairman of the Mt. Savage Citizens committee, announced definitely last night that Monday's mass meeting will be held in St. Patrick's hall.

The committee had asked the school board for permission to meet in the school building, but when the board's answer was held up for several days, arrangements were made to meet in the church hall.

The school question will be taken up, and State Senator Robert B. Kimble will speak in favor of allowing the people to elect their county board of education.

Luther League To See Detective's Exhibit

A demonstration in finger printing and modern crime detection methods will be given at tomorrow evening's meeting of the Luther League of St. Paul's Lutheran church.

Detective Sergeant B. F. Gaffney, of the Cumberland police, will give the demonstration. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held in the Sunday school room of the church, starting at 6:30 p. m.

Short $5,000 in Accounts, Employe Of Bank Suicides

Richlands, Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—Cashier C. B. Orr of the Richlands National Bank announced today the discovery of a $5,000 shortage twenty-four hours after Thomas Brammer Wells, discharged assistant cashier, was found shot to death.

Commonwealth's Attorney Carl Gillispie, who conducted an investigation, said Wells killed himself with a shotgun. The body, with wounds in the neck and head, was found yesterday at noon by Norfolk and Western section employes near the railroad tracks on the outskirts of Cedar Bluff.

Orr said bank officials had suspected a shortage in accounts and that Wells was discharged Monday.

A letter found on the former assistant's body and addressed to Orr said there was was a $700 shortage and that private stock certificates in a safety deposit box would cover part of it, the cashier related.

Orr said an audit was started Monday and completed today which revealed a $5,000 shortage.

The cashier related Wells' letter also told where missing ledger pages could be found.

The safe deposit box cannot be opened until a bank examiner arrives, Orr added.

Wells, a former resident of Roanoke, is survived by his widow and two children.

Hetzel Wolford Sent to Prison

Charged with Contributing to Delinquency of a Minor

Grantsville, Dec. 1—Hetzel Wolford, 28, near Mt. Savage, was sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction last night at a hearing in Trial Magistrate's Court here. He was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor and also violating a parole. Wolford had been sentenced by a local magistrate several months ago, but the sentence was suspended.

Harley McKenzie Held

Harley McKenzie, Grantsville, was taken to the county jail at Oakland yesterday afternoon by Constable Daniel W. Hershberger, where he is being held on a charge of wife-beating. Officers were called to the home about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, when McKenzie is alleged to have come home intoxicated and started beating his wife. He will be brought here later for a hearing before the local magistrate.

Aged Man Hit

Harrison Beachy, near Jennings, is being held in the Somerset county jail on charges of being a hit-skip driver. Beachy is said to have struck an elderly man named Collier near Somerfield, Pa., and failed to stop. Evidence connected him with the affair when he ran out of gas further up the hill and parts of the man's clothing were found on his fender. It is also thought that because of his advanced age, the man might have fallen against the machine. A hearing in the case will be held later.

Rain Threatens--President Will Divide His Allegiance

By BILL BONI

Philadelphia, Dec. 1. (AP) — The business men's lunch now offers you grapefruit as well as soup, and costs $1.50 instead of 65 cents. Hotels are throwing up cots in hallways and selling sleeping space in spare bathtubs. Philadelphia, in other words, is in its annual stride for the Army-Navy football game.

So are the Army and the Navy. Under somber skies that held a threat of rain, Navy had a final limbering-up session this afternoon in the Temple University stadium. The Cadets, whipping through a lively drill that featured forward passes, worked out in the huge municipal stadium where the two teams will play tomorrow—before some 104,000 spectators.

Of this number, 101,610 will occupy seats that were sold for this 40th episode in the service series, including 2,30 Midshipmen and 1,-900 Cadets. The others will include President Roosevelt and the entourage that travels with him, unless the weather should cause the chief executive to change his mind, ushers, vendors, guards and the usual impressive delegation from the working press.

Army Favorite

As the advance guard of this sizable turnout, largest of the 1939 gridiron season, moved into the city tonight, they found Army on the favorite's end of whatever odds were being quoted. Eight would get you five if you fancied the Grey of West Point, five would get you seven if the Annapolis dark blue was more to your taste.

Off their records—probably the poorest either academy ever had brought into their annual game—there appeared little basis for drawing a line between them. In six major games, with Dartmouth, Notre Dame, Clemson, Penn, Columbia and Princeton, Navy's best showing was a scoreless tie with Dartmouth. In five major games, Army's best efforts brought ties with Columbia and Penn State, while the Soldiers lost to Yale, Notre Dame and Harvard.

Navy Weak on Passes

Army's position in the betting odds is based chiefly on Navy's deplorable weakness against passes.

The president is due to arrive at 1:15. He will spend the first half on the Army side, the second with Navy. Two sections, comprising some 560 seats, have been cleared out to make way for his car, and this afternoon Col. E. W. Starling, head of the secret service, put his men and a Philadelphia police detachment through a dress rehearsal.

Baltimore Orioles File for Compensation

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Chairman William Milnes Maloy of Maryland Unemployment Compensation board disclosed today the board had declined benefit applications of three players on the Baltimore International League baseball club.

Maloy said all three were residents of other states and applied almost as soon as the baseball season ended. Other players planned to file similar claims if the first three were successful, the chairman added. Their names were not made public.

The board ruled the players were, under terms of their contracts, hired for a full year, although they drew pay only during the playing season.

Beth Jacob League

The Tigers whitewashed the Giants and the Cubs took over the Yankees by a 2-1 count in Beth Jacob League matches over the Savoy drives. Max Gerson, of the Tigers, banged the uprights for a 457 high-set mark. The scores:

Redskins Expected To Beat Giants for Pro Grid Title

By JOHN LARDNER
Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

New York, Dec. 1.—The Professional football championships of east and west will be decided Sunday, when the Green Bay Packers grapple the Detroit Lions on one front and the Washington Redskins, accompanied by George Preston Marshall, the wet-wash Tycoon, and 15,000 rabid adherents, invade New York to meet the Giants.

Green Bay is favored to whip the Lions. Mr. Marshall is favored to take the Giants, as he did three years ago. When his football team has done its duty on the field, Mr. Marshall will back his delivery truck up to the Giants' door and collect their shirts. This double service is a feature of the Marshall laundry system, the only drawback being that the shirts never come back.

The Washington team is hotter than Mr. Marshall's flatiron. Seldom scoring less than four touchdowns in a game, and sometimes collecting six or seven, the Redskins may well be the greatest offensive football machine ever assembled.

Mr. Marshall believes they are.

"Naturally," said the noted undershirt-rejuvenator, making an effort to restrain himself, "I expect the Giants to offer stubborn resistance."

Expect No Such Thing

This remark was drowned by the derisive shouts of his followers, who obviously expect no such thing.

"The Giants," continued Mr. Marshall with dignity, "are a capable outfit."

"Like hell!" barked his impulsive cohorts.

Waving a hand for silence, the popular collar-starcher went on as follows:

"The contest should be thrilling and enjoyable (applause). My team being the greatest of all time (renewed applause), and the Giants being not so bad themselves (sustained raspberries), the battle should be nip and tuck. When the shades of night descend on the Sabbath day (cheers), the Redskins will probably have won by no more than (speaker's voice drowned out at this point) touchdowns. I thank you."

There is some question as to just how many touchdowns Mr. Marshall said his team would win by. Some observers heard "five" and others "eight." At any rate, Mr. Marshall is far from overconfident, and concedes the possibility of the Giants scoring a field goal, if the wind is with them.

The Washington team has by all odds the biggest and noisiest mobile cheering section ever mustered behind one football team. The city of Washington, with J. Edgar Hoover at the Stork Club, and 15,000 citizens in New York for the football clash, will be virtually deserted this weekend.

Musicians Provide Accompaniment

No college team ever had so many bands. Mr. Marshall carries one band around with him just for laughs, one just for flutes and oboes, and one just for playing the "Washington Redskins March" in the key of three flats. When you add up the laundry business of the saxophone-players alone, who are notoriously hard on socks, you see how Mr. Marshall is able to pay Sammy Baugh's salary year in and year out.

Two years ago, when the legions of Marshall rolled to the championship of the world with successive victories over the Giants and Chicago Bears, the two big names of the ball club were Samuel Baugh and Cliff Battles. Battles is now a collegiate mastermind. Baugh survives, and linked with him in the Washington pantheon are Andy Farkas, the demon plunger; Frank Filchock, the alternate pitcher; Dick Todd, the sprinter; Wayne Millner, peerless pass-hawk, and a line which bulges ferociously from flank to flank.

Filchock and Baugh dominate the passers in a great passing league. Parker Hall, Davey O'Brien, Ace Parker, and Arnie Herber have pitched more often, individually, but Baugh and Filchock between them have completed ninety-four passes in 160 attempts for a startling average of .587. Farkas, the demon plunger, has toted the ball 137 times for an average of four yards a clip, and, with eleven touchdowns, is the league's leading scorer.

With music and Marshall to celebrate their feats, the Redskins have practically submerged the Giants in advance. The Giants are not spectacular. They are merely good. Some critics, in fact, believe them to be too good. Defensively they are hard to top, and offensively they seem to score when they have to. In spite of the alarums and detonations of the Marshall rooting squad, this should be quite a ball game.

We will cast one mild vote for Washington in the east and for Green Bay on the western front.

El Chico Destroyed

El Chico, candidate for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, pulled up lame after a three-furlong gallop. The colt was undefeated in 1938, winning $84,100 in seven races.

Lou Ambers Bout With Armstrong Definitely Off

Third Meeting Abandoned As N. Y. Commission Makes New Rule

By SID FEDER

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — The Henry Armstrong - Lou Ambers bout for the world welterweight championship was definitely abandoned today, and with it went all chance that a boxer will ever again match Armstrong's feat of dominating three weight divisions as titleholder.

After hearing from Promoter Mike Jacobs that he was cancelling the 15-round welterweight go, which had been scheduled for tonight and postponed because of Armstrong's ill health, the New York State Athletic Commission revealed it was amending its rules so that never again could a fighter hold the title in more than one weight division at a time.

Armstrong skyrocketed out of St. Louis, by way of Los Angeles, three years ago and, with terrific pace and slugging power, fought his way to the championships of the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight divisions simultaneously, a performance never before accomplished.

One Champ in Class, New Rule

"To prevent such mixups as now confronts us," General John J. Phelan, the commission chairman, announced today, "we are going to make it impossible for a fighter to hold the championships in two weight classes at the same time. We are amending our rules so that an individual holding a championship in one class will not be permitted to enter a title bout with the championship of another class unless he relinquishes the championship he holds."

At the same time, the commission approved a plan by which Armstrong would defend his 147-pound crown January 24 against Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican slugger, and Ambers would put his lightweight championship on the line against the "No. 1 challenger" in February or March.

Ambers' opponent in this fight would be either Sammy Angott of Louisville, Ky., a ranking contender; Eric Bone, the British lightweight champion, or the winner of a bout between Billy Marquardt of Canada and Lew Jenkins of Sweetwater, Texas, scheduled for Madison Square Garden December 15.

Tonight's cancelled contest would have been the third between Ambers and Armstrong. Armstrong won the first last year and Ambers took the second last summer, regaining his lightweight crown from Hurricane Hank.

Central Teams To Play Two Games Next Week

Lonaconing Central high school's boys' and girls' basketball teams step on the gas in earnest next week when the Alumnae meets Coach Lucille Houck's sextet and the Alumni takes a try at Coach Melvin Henry's five on the Central high court on Tuesday night.

On Friday the Central school teams play Oakland high's court contingents at Oakland.

Deer Hunters Get Results in Tucker County

Fewer Reported Killed Second Day of Season, Game Wardens Say

Section 20 and Section 73 of Article 99, Maryland Game Code, provide an open season on the Virginia White-tail deer for a period of five (5) days, beginning the first Monday in December (except on the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club in Washington County where the season is December 15th to December 24th, inclusive); provided, however, it shall be unlawful to hunt any deer in Worcester County.

It is unlawful to kill any deer except a male (buck) with two or more points to one antler, and the law provides that "Every person killing an Elk or Deer found in a wild state shall, within twenty-four hours, write the State Game Warden giving name, address, hunter's license number and county and location where said Elk or Deer was killed."

The District Deputy Game Wardens in every County of the State (except Worcester County) have been furnished with blanks on which to report the kill of deer.

It is unlawful for any person to kill more than one buck deer in one season. We would appreciate the favor if those who are fortunate in killing a deer would either contact the District Deputy Game Warden of their County giving them this information, or report same to this department direct, in conformance with the law.

Use of Gun for Hunting Deer

It is unlawful to hunt deer in any manner except through the use of a gun propelling one all-lead or lead alloy or soft nosed or expanding bullet or ball at a single discharge. Therefore, a rifle can be used carrying one soft nosed bullet or a shot-gun can be used carrying one gun shell loaded with a ball or what is known as pumpkin seed.

It is unlawful to take any deer in any manner except through the method known as still hunting.

It is unlawful to hunt or shoot any deer while swimming through the waters of any stream, pond or lake.

It is unlawful to hunt deer by the use of a dog or dogs or have a dog or dogs in the woods and use same for chasing same. Any dog or dogs found pursuing any deer may be killed by any Deputy Game Warden of this State or any other person.

It is unlawful to set any trap, snare or net of any description or to place any deer lick or pitfall or to make use of any artificial light, battery, etc.

The penalty for violation is $100.00 and costs for each and every offense.

Just a couple of old cowhands out for a ride in old Arizony. But you should recognize the boys, despite their western getup. At the left is Bill DeLancey, star catcher of the St. Louis Cardinals several years back who has won a battle against illness and plans a major league comeback next spring and right, Lou Nova, the heavyweight boxer. Both boys are enjoying themselves at Phoenix.

Lonaconing Court Teams Take Pair

Central High School's girls basketball team had little trouble with a home-town All-Star aggregation in the opening of the Lonaconing scholastic court campaign last night, Coach Lucille Houck's sextet winning easily 63 to 26 as Central unleashed some heavy scoring guns.

It was a different story when Coach Melvin "Newt" Henry's Orange and Black boys made their 1939-40 bow against Berlin, Pa., High. They had to resort to some par-excellent foul-line shooting to come away with a 21-14 victory.

In fact the boys game was a close-guarding affair each team scoring only five field goals. Central rang up 11 for 16 at the charity line while Berlin bagged but four in 14 shots from the free-throw stripe.

The Central girls led all the way in their test, with the scores 26-1, 39-12 and 47-14 at the quarters. The run-away first period gave Miss Houck a chance to try her second stringers who just about held the All-Stars even in the second semester.

It was an even-Stephen affair in the third period but the school girls stepped on it to pull away again to a wide-margin win.

Henry's boys led Berlin throughout getting a 7-2 jump at the quarter, 10-6 at the half and 15-3 at the three-way post.

19 BOYS SURVIVE TWO CUTS IN ALLEGANY COURT SQUAD

Coach Walter L. "Bill" Bowers, Allegany High's veteran basketball mentor who has twice made cuts in the original squad of 73, plans to carry the remaining 19 boys throughout the season.

Fifty-five answered the first call and at the close of the football season, 18 more joined the already big squad. Drills have been held for the past three weeks in preparation for the opening game, which will be December 15 if an opponent can be found and a week later if no foe can be located for the December 15 date.

Bowers is building his quintet around three who saw regular service last season. Comprising this trio are Lou Bell, guard; Jim Gaffney, center, and Tommy Mont, forward who started in several tussles.

Others who were on the 1938-39 squad and are again working out are William Winters, Harvey Connors, Robert Wolford and John Kirkpatrick. Wolford, only a freshman, wasn't eligible to play last season.

Newcomers are Franklin See, Milton Athey, Aobert McLucas, Kenneth Sherman, Jack Sharrett, Donald Dell, James Wilson, Donald McIntyre, William James, George Greenya, James Hess and Tom Rudd.

Many of the new boys have had previous experience with teams in the Junior Sunday School League. Coach Bowers intends to continue his policy of practice every school day.

According to Bowers, the schedule is nearing completion but dates for several games including the Alumni tussle have not been fixed while other battles are still pending.

Whorls Sweep Bobbins In Spinners' League

In the Celanese Spinners League on the Savoy Alleys, the Bobbins took three of three from the Whorls with R. Clem's 455 paving the way to the victory. In the same league, the Dummies won two from the Spindles and the Candles stopped the Jets in two of three. McNeill of the losers posted high score for the league evening with a 465 set. A 180 by Jeffery of the Jets topped the 179's of the Candle's Lease and R. Clem of the Bobbins for high individual game.

Wage-Hour Law On the Gridiron!

Pullman, Wash. (AP) — The score was 21-13 late in the final quarter of the annual battle between those two nine-mile-distant rivals, University of Idaho and Washington State College. W. S. C. was leading.

The last five minutes were played in gloomy darkness. Numerous times out occasioned by Idaho's last minute passing attack kept stopping the clock.

Lights burned brightly in the press box, but the scribes couldn't see the field very well.

Then, with just a couple of minutes to go, W. S. C. sent in a horde of substitutes.

Calling All Grid Scouts

Abilene, Tex., (AP)—It looks like Eck Curtis has struck pay dirt this season in the football material that turned up at Abilene High school. Prexy Anderson, Abilene sports writer, appraised the outfit and here is his report:

The smallest member of Coach Curtis's team weighs 192 pounds and the slowest ball carrier or interference runner does the hundred in 9.8 with a millstone around his neck. The regular punter not only can hit a buffalo nickel at 70 yards, but can hit the buffalo on the fore or hind quarters at will. And there are two other punters better than him.

And Anderson is considered a football conservative.

Pretty Good

Lexington, Ky.—Jock, son of the unbeaten Colin, is leading the way this year as a sire of two-year-old winners. A total of 14 sons and daughters of Jock have won races in this, their first year at the races.

Army and Navy Muster Mascots For Game Today

Service Teams Depending On Military Maxim of Civil War

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—It appeared today that outcome of the Army-Navy football battle tomorrow will depend on a paraphrase of that old military maxim: "Git thar fustest with the mostest mascots."

The Navy varsity, hunting a dependable hex for the Cadet legions, this week enlisted Melissa, the tough little Schnauzer mascot of the undefeated "B" squad, as assistant to Bill VIII, traditional Navy goat.

But, today, the Navy intelligence service reported that the West Pointers are taking no chances on being outnumbered in mascot shock troops—the Greylegs have added a spare mascot to match Melissa.

The Army advised the Naval academy that Poncho, a little Ecuadorean burro, had been mustered into the service as aide-de-camp to Mr. Jackson, the old army mule.

Mascoting, like soldiering or sailoring, needs extended training, and the Middies would bet Poncho shows more left feet in the hexing business than the dumbest rookie in the awkward squad.

They also pointed out that M'liss and Bill had got there "firstest." The Navy mascots went to Philadelphia last night with the team, but Army's four-footed wizards will travel with the corps tomorrow.

With the team already on the battle site, the Naval academy was comparatively quiet today after last night's salvo of enthusiasm at the three-bonfire pep rally.

The Midshipmen will entrain at 8:10 a. m. for Philadelphia. Special trains for civilians and officers will leave soon after.

Long Distance Recovery

Pullman, Wash. (AP)—Dick Renfro, Washington State College fullback, caught his own "forward pass" against the University of Idaho here recently.

Renfro, carrying the ball, hit the line for three yards before somebody him him so hard the ball squirted into the air.

Renfro twisted and reeled forward and fell on his side some eight yards beyond the line of scrimmage.

He looked up in time to see the ball he had fumbled five wards back come down in his arms.

Conference Meeting Scheduled Here Today

Petersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1.—The annual fall meeting of the Potomac Valley Conference will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Petersburg High School building. An all-conference football team will be selected and action likely will be taken on the mixup which resulted when Parsons and Ridgeley each turned in undefeated seasons but with Parsons winning six games to Ridgeley's four.

Army-Navy Game Brings Out Profiteers

Around 104,000 Spectators Expected--'Sell-Out' Months Ago

By BILL BONI

Philadelphia, Dec. 1. (AP) — The business men's lunch now offers you grapefruit as well as soup, and costs $1.50 instead of 65 cents. Hotels are throwing up cots in hallways and selling sleeping space in spare bathtubs. Philadelphia, in other words, is in its annual stride for the Army-Navy football game.

So are the Army and the Navy. Under somber skies that held a threat of rain, Navy had a final limbering-up session this afternoon in the Temple University stadium. The Cadets, whipping through a lively drill that featured forward passes, worked out in the huge municipal stadium where the two teams will play tomorrow—before some 104,000 spectators.

Of this number, 101,610 will occupy seats that were sold for this 40th episode in the service series, including 2,30 Midshipmen and 1,400 Cadets. The others will include President Roosevelt and the entourage that travels with him, unless the weather should cause the chief executive to change his mind, ushers, vendors, guards and the usual impressive delegation from the working press.

Army Favorite

As the advance guard of this sizeable turnout, largest of the 1939 gridiron season, moved into the city tonight, they found Army on the favorite's end of whatever odds were being quoted. Eight would get you five if you fancied the Grey of West Point, five would get you seven if the Annapolis dark blue was more to your taste.

Off their records—probably the poorest either academy ever had brought into their annual game—there appeared little basis for drawing a line between them. In six major games, with Dartmouth, Notre Dame, Clemson, Penn, Columbia and Princeton, Navy's best showing was a scoreless tie with Dartmouth. In five major games, Army's best efforts brought ties with Columbia and Penn State, while the Soldiers lost to Yale, Notre Dame and Harvard.

Navy Weak on Passes

Army's position in the betting odds is based chiefly on Navy's deplorable weakness against passes.

The president is due to arrive at 1:15. He will spend the first half on the Army side, the second with Navy. Two sections, comprising some 560 seats, have been cleared out to make way for his car, and this afternoon Col. E. W. Starling, head of the secret service, put his men and a Philadelphia police detachment through a dress rehearsal.

Baltimore Orioles File for Compensation

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Chairman William Milnes Maloy of Maryland Unemployment Compensation board disclosed today the board had declined benefit applications of three players on the Baltimore International League baseball club.

Maloy said all three were residents of other states and applied almost as soon as the baseball season ended. Other players planned to file similar claims if the first three were successful, the chairman added. Their names were not made public.

The board ruled the players were, under terms of their contracts, hired for a full year, although they drew pay only during the playing season.

Beth Jacob League

The Tigers whitewashed the Giants and the Cubs took over the Yankees by a 2-1 count in Beth Jacob League matches over the Savoy drives. Max Gerson, of the Tigers, banged the uprights for a 457 high-set mark. The scores:

Redskins Expected To Beat Giants for Pro Grid Title

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

New York, Dec. 1.—The Professional football championships of east and west will be decided Sunday, when the Green Bay Packers grapple the Detroit Lions on one front and the Washington Redskins, accompanied by George Preston Marshall, the wet-wash Tycoon, and 15,000 rabid adherents, invade New York to meet the Giants.

Green Bay is favored to whip the Lions. Mr. Marshall is favored to take the Giants, as he did three years ago. When his football team has done its duty on the field, Mr. Marshall will back his delivery truck up to the Giants' door and collect their shirts. This double service is a feature of the Marshall laundry system, the only drawback being that the shirts never come back.

The Washington team is hotter than Mr. Marshall's flatiron. Seldom scoring less than four touchdowns in a game, and sometimes collecting six or seven, the Redskins may well be the greatest offensive football machine ever assembled.

Mr. Marshall believes they are.

"Naturally," said the noted undershirt-rejuvenator, making an effort to restrain himself, "I expect the Giants to offer stubborn resistance."

Expect No Such Thing

This remark was drowned by the derisive shouts of his followers, who obviously expect no such thing.

"The Giants," continued Mr. Marshall with dignity, "are a capable outfit."

"Like hell!" barked his impulsive cohorts.

Waving a hand for silence, the popular collar-starcher went on as follows:

"The contest should be thrilling and enjoyable (applause). My team being the greatest of all time (renewed applause), and the Giants being not so bad themselves (sustained raspberries), the battle should be nip and tuck. When the shades of night descend on the Sabbath day (cheers), the Redskins will probably have won by no more than (speaker's voice drowned out at this point) touchdowns. I thank you."

There is some question as to just how many touchdowns Mr. Marshall said his team would win by. Some observers heard "five" and others "eight." At any rate, Mr. Marshall is far from overconfident, and concedes the possibility of the Giants scoring a field goal, if the wind is with them.

The Washington team has by all odds the biggest and noisiest mobile cheering section ever mustered behind one football team. The city of Washington, with J. Edgar Hoover at the Stork Club, and 15,000 citizens in New York for the football clash, will be virtually deserted this weekend.

Musicians Provide Accompaniment

No college team ever had so many bands. Mr. Marshall carries one band around with him just for laughs, one just for flutes and oboes, and one just for playing the "Washington Redskins March" in the key of three flats. When you add up the laundry business of the saxophone-players alone, who are notoriously hard on socks, you see how Mr. Marshall is able to pay Sammy Baugh's salary year in and year out.

Two years ago, when the legions of Marshall rolled to the championship of the world with successive victories over the Giants and Chicago Bears, the two big names of the ball club were Samuel Baugh and Cliff Battles. Battles is now a collegiate mastermind. Baugh survives, and linked with him in the Washington pantheon are Andy Farkas, the demon plunger; Frank Filchock, the alternate pitcher; Dick Todd, the sprinter; Wayne Millner, peerless pass-hawk, and a line which bulges ferociously from flank to flank.

Filchock and Baugh dominate the passers in a great passing league. Parker Hall, Davey O'Brien, Ace Parker, and Arnie Herber have pitched more often, individually, but Baugh and Filchock between them have completed ninety-four passes in 160 attempts for a startling average of .587. Farkas, the demon plunger, has toted the ball 137 times for an average of four yards a clip, and, with eleven touchdowns, is the league's leading scorer.

With music and Marshall to celebrate their feats, the Redskins have practically submerged the Giants in advance. The Giants are not spectacular. They are merely good. Some critics, in fact, believe them to be too good. Defensively they are hard to top, and offensively they seem to score when they have to. In spite of the alarums and detonations of the Marshall rooting squad, this should be quite a ball game.

We will cast one mild vote for Washington in the east and for Green Bay on the western front.

El Chico Destroyed

El Chico, candidate for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, pulled up lame after a three-furlong gallop. The colt was undefeated in 1938, winning $84,100 in seven races.

Lou Ambers Bout With Armstrong Definitely Off

Third Meeting Abandoned As N. Y. Commission Makes New Rule

By SID FEDER

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — The Henry Armstrong - Lou Ambers bout for the world welterweight championship was definitely abandoned today, and with it went all chance that a boxer will ever again match Armstrong's feat of dominating three weight divisions as titleholder.

After hearing from Promoter Mike Jacobs that he was cancelling the 15-round welterweight go, which had been scheduled for tonight and postponed because of Armstrong's ill health, the New York State Athletic Commission revealed it was amending its rules so that never again could a fighter hold the title in more than one weight division at a time.

Armstrong skyrocketed out of St. Louis, by way of Los Angeles, three years ago and, with terrific pace and slugging power, fought his way to the championships of the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight divisions simultaneously, a performance never before accomplished.

One Champ in Class, New Rule

"To prevent such mixups as now confronts us," General John J. Phelan, the commission chairman, announced today, "we are going to make it impossible for a fighter to hold the championships in two weight classes at the same time. We are amending our rules so that an individual holding a championship in one class will not be permitted to enter a title bout with the championship of another class unless he relinquishes the championship he holds."

At the same time, the commission approved a plan by which Armstrong would defend his 147-pound crown January 24 against Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican slugger, and Ambers would put his lightweight championship on the line against the "No. 1 challenger" in February or March.

Ambers' opponent in this fight would be either Sammy Angott of Louisville, Ky., a ranking contender; Eric Bone, the British lightweight champion, or the winner of a bout between Billy Marquardt of Canada and Lew Jenkins of Sweetwater, Texas, scheduled for Madison Square Garden December 15.

Tonight's cancelled contest would have been the third between Ambers and Armstrong. Armstrong won the first last year and Ambers took the second last summer, regaining his lightweight crown from Hurricane Hank.

Central Teams To Play Two Games Next Week

Lonaconing Central high school's boys' and girls' basketball teams step on the gas in earnest next week when the Alumnae meets Coach Lucille Houck's sextet and the Alumni takes a try at Coach Melvin Henry's five on the Central high court on Tuesday night.

On Friday the Central school teams play Oakland high's court contingents at Oakland.

Fewer Reported Killed Second Day of Season, Game Wardens Say

Section 20 and Section 73 of Article 99, Maryland Game Code, provide an open season on the Virginia White-tail deer for a period of five (5) days, beginning the first Monday in December (except on the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club in Washington County where the season is December 15th to December 24th, inclusive); provided, however, it shall be unlawful to hunt any deer in Worcester County.

It is unlawful to kill any deer except a male (buck) with two or more points to one antler, and the law provides that "Every person killing an Elk or Deer found in a wild state shall, within twenty-four hours, write the State Game Warden giving name, address, hunter's license number and county and location where said Elk or Deer was killed."

The District Deputy Game Wardens in every County of the State (except Worcester County) have been furnished with blanks on which to report the kill of deer.

It is unlawful for any person to kill more than one buck deer in one season. We would appreciate the favor if those who are fortunate in killing a deer would either contact the District Deputy Game Warden of their County giving them this information, or report same to this department direct, in conformance with the law.

Use of Gun for Hunting Deer

It is unlawful to hunt deer in any manner except through the use of a gun propelling one all-lead or lead alloy or soft nosed or expanding bullet or ball at a single discharge. Therefore, a rifle can be used carrying one soft nosed bullet or a shot-gun can be used carrying one gun shell loaded with a ball or what is known as pumpkin seed.

It is unlawful to take any deer in any manner except through the method known as still hunting.

It is unlawful to hunt or shoot any deer while swimming through the waters of any stream, pond or lake.

It is unlawful to hunt deer by the use of a dog or dogs or have a dog or dogs in the woods and use same for chasing same. Any dog or dogs found pursuing any deer may be killed by any Deputy Game Warden of this State or any other person.

It is unlawful to set any trap, snare or net of any description or to place any deer lick or pitfall or to make use of any artificial light, battery, etc.

The penalty for violation is $100.00 and costs for each and every offense.

Lonaconing Court Teams Take Pair

Central High School's girls basketball team had little trouble with a home-town All-Star aggregation in the opening of the Lonaconing scholastic court campaign last night, Coach Lucille Houck's sextet winning easily 63 to 26 as Central unleashed some heavy scoring guns.

It was a different story when Coach Melvin "Newt" Henry's Orange and Black boys made their 1939-40 bow against Berlin, Pa., High. They had to resort to some par-excellent foul-line shooting to come away with a 21-14 victory.

In fact the boys game was a close-guarding affair each team scoring only five field goals. Central rang up 11 for 16 at the charity line while Berlin bagged but four in 14 shots from the free-throw stripe.

The Central girls led all the way in their test, with the scores 26-1, 39-12 and 47-14 at the quarters. The run-away first period gave Miss Houck a chance to try her second stringers who just about held the All-Stars even in the second semester.

It was an even-Stephen affair in the third period but the school girls stepped on it to pull away again to a wide-margin win.

Henry's boys led Berlin throughout getting a 7-2 jump at the quarter, 10-6 at the half and 15-3 at the three-way post.

19 BOYS SURVIVE TWO CUTS IN ALLEGANY COURT SQUAD

Coach Walter L. "Bill" Bowers, Allegany High's veteran basketball mentor who has twice made cuts in the original squad of 73, plans to carry the remaining 19 boys throughout the season.

Fifty-five answered the first call and at the close of the football season, 18 more joined the already big squad. Drills have been held for the past three weeks in preparation for the opening game, which will be December 15 if an opponent can be found and a week later if no foe can be located for the December 15 date.

Bowers is building his quintet around three who saw regular service last season. Comprising this trio are Lou Bell, guard; Jim Gaffney, center, and Tommy Mont, forward who started in several tussles.

Others who were on the 1938-39 squad and are again working out are William Winters, Harvey Connors, Robert Wolford and John Kirkpatrick. Wolford, only a freshman, wasn't eligible to play last season.

Newcomers are Franklin See, Milton Athey, Aobert McLucas, Kenneth Sherman, Jack Sharrett, Donald Dell, James Wilson, Donald McIntyre, William James, George Greenya, James Hess and Tom Rudd.

Many of the new boys have had previous experience with teams in the Junior Sunday School League. Coach Bowers intends to continue his policy of practice every school day.

According to Bowers, the schedule is nearing completion but dates for several games including the Alumni tussle have not been fixed while other battles are still pending.

Whorls Sweep Bobbins In Spinners' League

In the Celanese Spinners League on the Savoy Alleys, the Bobbins took three of three from the Whorls with R. Clem's 455 paving the way to the victory. In the same league, the Dummies won two from the Spindles and the Candles stopped the Jets in two of three. McNeill of the losers posted high score for the league evening with a 465 set. A 180 by Jeffery of the Jets topped the 179's of the Candle's Lease and R. Clem of the Bobbins for high individual game.

Wage-Hour Law On the Gridiron!

Pullman, Wash. (AP) — The score was 21-13 late in the final quarter of the annual battle between those two nine-mile-distant rivals, University of Idaho and Washington State College. W. S. C. was leading.

The last five minutes were played in gloomy darkness. Numerous times out occasioned by Idaho's last minute passing attack kept stopping the clock.

Lights burned brightly in the press box, but the scribes couldn't see the field very well.

Then, with just a couple of minutes to go, W. S. C. sent in a horde of substitutes.

Quipped the press box wit:

"Hah! The night shift!"

Calling All Grid Scouts

Abilene, Tex., (AP)—It looks like Eck Curtis has struck pay dirt this season in the football material that turned up at Abilene High school. Prexy Anderson, Abilene sports writer, appraised the outfit and here is his report:

The smallest member of Coach Curtis's team weighs 192 pounds and the slowest ball carrier or interference runner does the hundred in 9.8 with a millstone around his neck. The regular punter not only can hit a buffalo nickel at 70 yards, but can hit the buffalo on the fore or hind quarters at will. And there are two other punters better than him.

And Anderson is considered a football conservative.

The Nelson Neons were dimmed twice by Rosenbaums, the Chevrolets copped a brace from United Accessories and the Railway Express hauled the Evening Times into camp 2 to 1, in Commercial League matches at the Savoy. Johnson, of the United Accessories, spilled 504 sticks for the evening's top set mark. The scores:

Pretty Good

Lexington, Ky.—Jock, son of the unbeaten Colin, is leading the way this year as a sire of two-year-old winners. A total of 14 sons and daughters of Jock have won races in this, their first year at the races.

Army and Navy Muster Mascots For Game Today

Service Teams Depending On Military Maxim of Civil War

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (AP)—It appeared today that outcome of the Army-Navy football battle tomorrow will depend on a paraphrase of that old military maxim: "Git thar fustest with the mostest mascots."

The Navy varsity, hunting a dependable hex for the Cadet legions, this week enlisted Melissa, the tough little Schnauzer mascot of the undefeated "B" squad, as assistant to Bill VIII, traditional Navy goat.

But, today, the Navy intelligence service reported that the West Pointers are taking no chances on being outnumbered in mascot shock troops—the Greylegs have added a spare mascot to match Melissa.

The Army advised the Naval academy that Poncho, a little Ecuadorean burro, had been mustered into the service as aide-de-camp to Mr. Jackson, the old army mule.

But at the Naval academy the news occasioned no alarm. Midshipmen retained a quiet faith that Army's rookie mascot couldn't match Melissa's magic. Melissa, it was freely pointed out, is an old seadog, battle-tested in "B" squad games.

Mascoting, like soldiering or sailoring, needs extended training, and the Middies would bet Poncho shows more left feet in the hexing business than the dumbest rookie in the awkward squad.

They also pointed out that M'liss and Bill had got there "firstest." The Navy mascots went to Philadelphia last night with the team, but Army's four-footed wizards will travel with the corps tomorrow.

With the team already on the battle site, the Naval academy was comparatively quiet today after last night's salvo of enthusiasm at the three-bonfire pep rally.

The Midshipmen will entrain at 8:10 a. m. for Philadelphia. Special trains for civilians and officers will leave soon after.

Long Distance Recovery

Pullman, Wash. (AP)—Dick Renfro, Washington State College fullback, caught his own "forward pass" against the University of Idaho here recently.

Renfro, carrying the ball, hit the line for three yards before somebody him him so hard the ball squirted into the air.

Renfro twisted and reeled forward and fell on his side some eight yards beyond the line of scrimmage.

He looked up in time to see the ball he had fumbled five wards back come down in his arms.

Conference Meeting Scheduled Here Today

Petersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1.—The annual fall meeting of the Potomac Valley Conference will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Petersburg High School building. An all-conference football team will be selected and action likely will be taken on the mixup which resulted when Parsons and Ridgeley each turned in undefeated seasons but with Parsons winning six games to Ridgeley's four.

Picard-Nelson Golf Feud To Flare Anew

Miami Open May Settle Battle of 1939 Supremacy

Several Hundred Others Seek $10,000 Prize Money

Sammy Snead and "Jug" McSpaden Are Threats

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP) — Some say Henry Picard, the P.G.A. champion, is the year's outstanding professional golfer. Others say it's Byron Nelson, the national open titleholder.

The argument should be settled here Dec. 14-17 when Picard and Nelson get together with a couple hundred playmates in the $10,000 Miami Open tournament, the last of the 1939 campaign.

Picard, the stylist from Hershey, Pa., has a slight edge in the friendly feud for the Vardon trophy, emblematic of professional supremacy. He not only holds a 459-454 edge in points but is the year's leading money winner with $10,202 to Nelson's $8,386.

So there will be more at stake than the $2,500 top prize when the field swings away on the first lap of the 72-hole tournament.

The rest of the boys, however, are by no means conceding this tournament either to Picard or Nelson. Ralph Guldahl, always well regarded, could pass Picard's earnings for the year by adding the first prize to the $9,377 he already has collected. Dick Metz has picked up $8,600 and will be among the favorites, as will Sam Snead and Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

McSpaden won the tournament last year with a 275, beating Picard by a stroke. The year before Snead set a tournament record with a 267, 13 strokes under par. Slammin' Sam, top money winner last year, now is in fifth place with $7,212.

Snead Shoots Skeet

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP) — Sam Snead just couldn't get excited today about his election to the Ryder Cup golf team—it took an introduction to skeet shooting to arouse the hillbilly professional.

Since the matches are between the Americans and the British and the British are more or less occupied with military affairs, it looks like an empty honor.

The matches were to be held in Florida in January.

Snead, whose notification came from the U. S. Professional golf Association, went skeet shooting—for the first time — broke 20 out of 25 targets — and was really excited.

Said the Slammer:

"This is more fun than golf, and I seem to be a lot better at it."

Snead said he will enter the $10,000 Miami Open this month and from there will play on around the winter golf circuit.

Illness cut his playing short last year.

Hopkins Courtmen Play Here Sunday

The Cumberland Dragons will open their basketball season Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock by meeting the Homewood Hurricanes of Baltimore in the preliminary to the Cumberland Collegian-All-American Red Head battle on the SS. Peter and Paul School court.

The Hurricane roster includes members of the Johns Hopkins University squad. Coming here will be Joe Bitsak, former Passaic, N. J., High hoopster; Alan Sullivan, diminutive forward from Newtown High, New York; Walter Terpenning, six-foot, three-inch center from Alboon, Mich.; George Snively, former Waynesboro (Pa.) High and Peddie School cager and gridder; Jack Remsen, speed merchant who starred at Roosevelt High, Washington; Mel Lewis, former Beckley (W. Va.) High cager and track star and Bill and Tom Robinson, late of the Allegany High bench.

The Hurricanes, who line up as a tough foe for the Dragons in their opener, are scheduled to play a Hagerstown quint in the Hub City Saturday night.

Sunday Loop Season Will Get Going Today

First Presbyterian cagers and St. John's will clash in the headline contest this afternoon at the Central Y. M. C. A. where the annual Sunday School Basketball League campaign will be inaugurated.

Presbyterian, again coached by Ray Weatherholt, will be out for revenge. Last year after finishing the regular season undefeated, Presbyterian lost two straight to St. John's in the championship play-off series.

The tussle will open the program at 1 o'clock. At 1:55, Trinity M. E. will tangle with Grace M. E.; at 2:50, Central M. E. will test St. Paul's; at 3:45, Episcopal will engage St. Luke's and at 4:40, Grace Baptist will go against Centre Street M. E.

First Baptist will be idle. Games are scheduled every Saturday with one club having an open date on each of the playing dates. New teams this year are Grace Baptist and St. Luke's while United Brethren gave up its franchise

THE MAIN THRILL

Red River, Arkansas, Dec. 1 — What is the big thrill of sport? A 50-yard touchdown run? A world series homer? A full iron dead to the pin? A long, completed forward into the end zone? A head-and-head finish to the wire?

I'll take mine in the first sudden whirr and drum-beat of wings as the first covey of the year gets up.

The startling effect is something the merely casual hunter rarely gets used to. The dogs are frozen into black and white marble—you know the covey is only a few feet away. Yet you rarely see a bird. The camouflage is perfect. You creep closer and closer. Then the explosion takes place and the air seems packed with quail and hurtling feathers. You feel a quick shock.

The big temptation is always to blaze away at the thickest part of the covey in the air, which means an almost sure miss. You can't understand why, but under this system results are lamentably sour.

Hunting Dogs

A short while back I was with a party of three duck shooting in the Deans' blind at Commons River, Long Island.

One of the features of this hunt was the amazing work of two Labrador retrievers. The moment a duck hit the water or crashed beyond the river into a thicket of pines, one of the retrievers was under way in a flash and dash. It knew almost to the square foot where the duck had fallen.

But there is still nothing in sport that quite equals the action of a good bird dog—the fast-moving, intensive search for quail and the sudden freezing as the covey is found.

Bill Dickey's three favorite dogs are named Tillie, Sally and Sadie and they know they have been on a day's hunt when they follow the long legs of the two Dickeys by thicket and swamp. They know their stuff. They have also discovered there is quite a difference in the results that develop from Bill Dickey's gun and that of your touring correspondent.

Five Straight?

The Yankee catcher and the Arkansas quail hunter can't see any reason why the Yankees shouldn't pick up their fifth straight pennant—plus their fifth consecutive world series swag.

"This is still a young ball club," Bill tells you, sitting on a log along the Red River trail. "It may be that the battery of Ruffing and Dickey isn't quite as young as it used to be, but most of the bunch have many years to go.

"You can figure on Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio for at least ten years more if they don't get hurt. There's no telling how far Keller will go. There's a great natural hitter with the best pair of hands and forearms I've seen in a long time. He's a fine all-around athlete who should be up among the three top hitters next season. When you have a pair of swingers such as DiMaggio and Keller in one outfield you have plenty. .

"Rolfe and Crosetti will be just as good for quite a spell on beyond and so will Babe Dahlgren.

This Joe Gordon is a fellow who gives me a lot of thrills through a season. I've seen him make play after play I knew were almost impossible. Some of them you hardly believe after you see it. As you know, Joe practised being an acrobat for two or three years. There are many times when he looks like two acrobats killing off those sure base hits that whistle over second or spin out towards right field."

Better Race

Bill looks for a better and a closer race next season. He figures the Red Sox rookies, with more experience, will be even better and that Boston will get better pitching.

"Boston and Cleveland both should be harder to handle next summer," he says. "That fellow Feller alone makes Cleveland something to watch. He should be close to 30 wins next summer, which is quite a help to any outfit. Feller would certainly make a world series look different if we had to face one like him, although you couldn't ask for much better pitching than Paul Derringer gave out. He came close to winning two games, which would have made a big difference with our pitching staff in pretty bad shape at the finish."

"How will the Yankee pitching staff be this next season?" I asked.

"Just about the same," Bill said. "Our younger pitchers may not get away quite as fast as they did last spring, but that year's experience ought to make them better for the long haul. Ruffing will be as good as ever. Charley is one of the easiest working pitchers I've ever seen. He can't keep on forever, but there are some good young ones moving up.

"I always laugh," Bill continued, "when they say our slugging won. Many people forget this is one of the best defensive ball clubs that ever played—I don't care how far back you go. They cut off more hits and more runs than any other team—and it's defense that wins many a ball game we might have lost with just good, average fielding."

Mr. Dickey never mentioned a Yankee catcher by the name of Dickey who happens to have done quite a job holding the Yankees where they are. Few realize the value of a great catcher—especially one of the great catchers of all time — maybe the most valuable entry that ever wore a mask, handled his pitchers and walloped the ball at crucial spots.

That's Mr. Dickey in person.

Mountaineers To Close Poor Season With Rodgers' Day

W. Va. U. To Honor Most Famous Athletic Son Today

Morgantown, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—West Virginia's Mountaineers close one of their most disappointing seasons tomorrow against George Washington, with 7,500 fans expected to witness the 2 p. m. kickoff.

The day has been designated "Rodgers' Day" in honor of the Mountaineers' most famous athletic son, Ira Rodgers, in his 25th year on the campus, either as player or coach.

Dr. Marshall (Sleepy) Glenn, who is expected to anounce his retirement from coaching after the contest, has drilled his charges at a fast clip, hopeful they will explode another ball game as they did in Lexington last week. Although losing 13-6, West Virginia actually outplayed the powerhouse southern outfit.

Glenn planned one lineup switch from the Kentucky game, sending in Tom Davies, a senior, at the wingback in place of Don McCann.

The visitors have lost but three contests while West Virginia has been beaten five times and scored a tie with South Carolina. Because of its light backfield, averaging 176.1 pounds to West Virginia's 188.2 pound per man backs, the visitors average about 6½ pounds lighter in weight.

Pat Comiskey Declares He's Now on Way to Top

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Undefeated Pat Comiskey looked speculatively at the beefy fists with which he'd just knocked down his 24th consecutive heavyweight.

"I'm on my way," he grinned, as though he might have been doubtful before but was dead certain now. "Dunno how long it'll take or how fast I'll go, but I'm on my way to the top."

And Patrick Edward, the fast, husky Paterson, N. J., Irishman whose fistic future looks golden, wasn't bragging. He'd just hung up his 14th straight kayo, a lusty, battering technical knockout over Maynard Daniels, hitherto undefeated ex-marine from Washington, D. C., and Manteo, N. C.

Powerful Pat, figured by the experts as one of the nation's white-hope heavyweights was highly pleased. Daniels had coasted through 28 fights with a score of knockouts and he shot the works against Comiskey.

"He's easily the toughest guy I've run into," the Jersey giant asserted. "But, I'm set for some tough scraps from here out. He hit me plenty hard and I found I could take it."

Pat blasted Daniels with rights and lefts to the face from the opening bell last night, closed the ex-marine's left eye, and went on from there, punishing the game Daniels badly until the referee halted the bout after the sixth. Pat weighed 203, Daniels was 12 pounds lighter.

Fort Hill Gridders Presented Letters

Twenty-four Ft. Hill High School gridders were awarded letters at a special assembly yesterday with John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh, director of athletics making the presentation.

Victor D. Heisey, principal, presided. Talks were made by Coach Johnny Long, Ray Hahne, representing the alumni, and Col. Nelson W. Russler, representing patrons of the school and followers of its teams. Band music and cheering completed the program.

City Scholastic Court Grind Starts on Friday

The city scholastic basketball grind will get started next Friday night when "Bobby" Cavanaugh, Fort Hill Sentinels, city, W. M. I., Cumberland Valley Athletic League and state champions, will tangle with the Frostburg State Jayvees in the Sentinel gym.

Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High cagers will launch their campaign Friday, December 15, by entertaining Beall High of Frostburg. Allegany is seeking a foe for a December 15 opener, but if unsuccessful will get under way the following week.

Oakland High of Garrett county got the jump on the other schools in this district. Coach Thomas Baucom's five has already played two games, defeating Fellowsville and losing to Terra Alta. Thursday Paw Paw won over its Alumni, 34-27.

Clears Annenberg In Anti-Trust Case

Court Rejects Civil Suit Based on Race Service Monopoly Charge

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Bulletin Record Publishing Company, publisher of a racing information sheet, today lost its Federal Court fight with M. L. Annenberg and thirteen other defendants whom the Record company charged had conspired to monopolize the dissemination of racing news.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan dismissed the civil action for want of equity, by upholding the report of Charles McDonald, master in chancery, who heard the case.

The court held the Bulletin Record's publication was a lawful one, but the purpose to which it was put was unlawful — serving bookmakers and their customers.

The racing sheet, the court continued, aided and abetted gambling and if the court were to have acted against the Annenberg interests it, too, would be aiding and abetting.

Of the Bulletin Record charge that a conspiracy existed to drive its publication off the market, Judge Sullivan ruled there was insufficient evidence to prove the Madison Publishing Company, another racing paper publisher, was organized for that purpose.

The Bulletin Record sheet, the ruling continued, was not a commodity in the sense of the Sherman anti-trust act and therefore not protectable by that statute.

Judge Sullivan said he found no discrimination by the recently disbanded nationwide News Service, Inc., as to price for wire service to the plaintiff company.

Tippen Tops Scorers In Frostburg Soccer

Frostburg, Dec. 1 — Booting 11 field goals for as many points, J. Tippen of the Hibernians was the leading scorer in the Frostburg Soccer League the past season.

Llewellyn of the champion Americans was second with eight markers on seven field goals and a penalty and "Jaggers" Drew of Midlothian, who topped the list last year with 14 points, finished third with seven.

Dunn of the Americans was fourth with six. Finzel of the Americans, Brady of Midlothian and Weibrecht of the Scots tied for fifth with five and Cole of the Hibernians, Goldsworthy of the Arsenals and Glime of the Rangers were knotted for eighth with four apiece. Individual records follow:

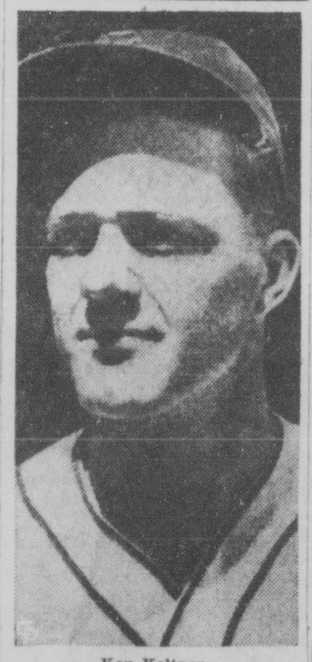
Penn's Grid Hopes High

Philadelphia, Pa.—The freshman football squad of the University of Pennsylvania is said to be the best in many years. Quaker hopes for 1940, as a result, are very high.

ALL A "BIG JOKE"



Ken Keltner

Unmasked as the star baseball player with a $7,500-a-year salary who applied for $15 weekly unemployment compensation, Kenny Keltner, crack third baseman of the Cleveland Indians, declared the whole incident was a "big joke." Keltner, who said he had applied to the Ohio bureau of unemployment compensation upon advice of an insurance man in his home city, Milwaukee, stated that "as soon as I found out I wasn't entitled to any, I withdrew the claim."

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — Ernie Lombardi probably will go down in baseball history as the only man who ever had a reserved seat at home plate in a world series, and all because he was too good a sport to offer an alibi.

We've always thought there was more than met the eye in that picture of Lombardi holding his ground as the Yanks were coming in the last game of the 1939 Major League follies, and when he saw Doc Rohde recently we tried to get behind the picture.

Doc Rohde is the trainer for the Cincinnati Reds, and last season he used more tape than a stock market ticker as he tried to keep at least a quorum in the field. The Reds' hospital list was longer than Lombardi's nap.

Figuring that if anybody should know the circumstances behind that misplay it would be Rohde, we asked him if Lombardi was injured.

"I am sure he must have been dazed," he replied, "as he was hit hard as Charley Keller came in. However, he wouldn't admit it. I asked him and all he would say was: 'I guess I was in a trance.' "

Knowing Lombardi and the difficulty of getting information from him, that was quite a speech.

We suggested the possibility that Lombardi might be traded this winter, and Rohde came back with:

"Why? Where would they get another catcher as good?"

Which was a stumper, as the comparatively few really good catchers will stay put. If a good receiver was available Joe Cronin would have had him long ago. Cronin said that it wasn't the pitching, but the catching, that was the big weakness of the Red Sox this year.

"And don't forget," Rohde added, "that Lombardi caught both Vander Meer's no-hit games. A poor catcher couldn't do that."

Incidentally, Rohde thinks that Vander Meer will come back next season.

He pointed out that after Vander Meer's no-hitters in 1938 the money rolled in. He was swamped with offers for testimonials, radio appearances and other money-making propositions.

He was on a spot, and his numerous outside interests probably preyed on his mind. Next season he'll be back to normal, as on his 1939 record nobody is going to chase him down alleys to get him to sign anything but a trafic ticket.

Vander Meer missed spring training this year because of illness, and was bothered by an ailing arm all season. It was one of those mysterious arm injuries which defy treatment. No chipped bone or torn ligament. Just a sore arm, that's all.

Tennessee's Bob Foxx Wins Neyland's Praise

He seldom has been in the headlines but always he has been in the thick of the battle. That's Bob Foxx, Tennessee's wingback. A junior, the 180-pound Knoxville youth has been a regular on the Volunteer eleven from the day he ousted two letter men from the wingback post in Tennessee's opening game in 1938.

To the spectator in the stands he has been just another cog in the well oiled Vol machine, but to Maj. Bob Neyland, his coach, "he's an athlete!"

"I have seen few men with as near perfect co-ordination between mind and muscle as Foxx," Neyland observed. "There's just one way to describe him—he's an athlete!"

Dad Went A-Hunting (But So Did Mom)

Harlowton, Mont., (AP) — When Harlan Lucas went deer hunting he took his wife along, principally for companionship and to guard their car.

"Maybe you can amuse yourself by fishing," Lucas told her as he prepared to leave her at the camp ground and take to the big game trails.

Mrs. Lucas fished. She caught her limit of trout. Then she saw a fine buck deer a short distance away and shot and killed it with a small caliber rifle that happened to be in the car.

Shortly her footsore husband returned. He'd had a long walk, but no good luck.

Jim Gaffney Edges Out Billy Davis To Top Scorers

Allegany Fullback Tallies 26 Points to 24 by Fort Hill Star

Jim Gaffney of Allegany High beat out Billy Davis of Fort Hill to retain the Cumberland Valley Athletic League scoring championship by a scant two-point margin.

Each Cumberlander scored four touchdowns in the four loop games played by each school but Gaffney finished in front with 26 markers while Davis was forced to take the runner-up berth with 24.

Tommy Mont, Allegany quarterback, beat out Billy Dean of Fort Hill for third, Mont getting 20 markers on three touchdowns and two extra points and Dean registering 19 tallies on two touchdowns and seven conversions.

"Ox" Aronholt Fifth

Grover "Ox" Aronholt, who captained the Sentinels before suffering a broken ankle, was fifth with 14 points. Aronholt played in three games but was missing in the all-important tussle with Allegany which decided the championship.

Four boys each gathered two touchdowns. They were B. Russell, Fahrney and Freyer of Hagerstown and Bill McIntyre of the Handley High Judges. Jones of Hagerstown, with nine points, completes the first ten.

Gaffney, who copped the crown last season with 49 markers scored one touchdown in each of Allegan's tussles while Davis made one against Hagerstown, two against Martinsburg and one against Handley.

Picard-Nelson Golf Feud To Flare Anew

Several Hundred Others Seek $10,000 Prize Money

Sammy Snead and "Jug" McSpaden Are Threats

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP) — Some say Henry Picard, the P.G.A. champion, is the year's outstanding professional golfer. Others say it's Byron Nelson, the national open titleholder.

The argument should be settled here Dec. 14-17 when Picard and Nelson get together with a couple hundred playmates in the $10,000 Miami Open tournament, the last of the 1939 campaign.

Picard, the stylist from Hershey, Pa., has a slight edge in the friendly feud for the Vardon trophy, emblematic of professional supremacy. He not only holds a 459-454 edge in points but is the year's leading money winner with $10,202 to Nelson's $8,386.

So there will be more at stake than the $2,500 top prize when the field swings away on the first lap of the 72-hole tournament.

The rest of the boys, however, are by no means conceding this tournament either to Picard or Nelson. Ralph Guldahl, always well regarded, could pass Picard's earnings for the year by adding the first prize to the $9,377 he already has collected. Dick Metz has picked up $8,600 and will be among the favorites, as will Sam Snead and Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

McSpaden won the tournament last year with a 275, beating Picard by a stroke. The year before Snead set a tournament record with a 267, 13 strokes under par. Slammin' Sam, top money winner last year, now is in fifth place with $7,212.

Snead Shoots Skeet

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP) — Sam Snead just couldn't get excited today about his election to the Ryder Cup golf team—it took an introduction to skeet shooting to arouse the hillbilly professional.

Since the matches are between the Americans and the British and the British are more or less occupied with military affairs, it looks like an empty honor.

The matches were to be held in Florida in January.

Snead, whose notification came from the U. S. Professional golf Association, went skeet shooting—for the first time — broke 20 out of 25 targets — and was really excited.

Said the Slammer:

"This is more fun than golf, and I seem to be a lot better at it."

Snead said he will enter the $10,000 Miami Open this month and from there will play on around the winter golf circuit.

Illness cut his playing short last year.

Hopkins Courtmen Play Here Sunday

The Cumberland Dragons will open their basketball season Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock by meeting the Homewood Hurricanes of Baltimore in the preliminary to the Cumberland Collegian-All-American Red Head battle on the SS. Peter and Paul School court.

The Hurricane roster includes members of the Johns Hopkins University squad. Coming here will be Joe Bitsak, former Passaic, N. J., High hoopster; Alan Sullivan, diminutive forward from Newtown High, New York; Walter Terpenning, six-foot, three-inch center from Alboon, Mich.; George Snively, former Waynesboro (Pa.) High and Peddie School cager and gridder; Jack Remsen, speed merchant who starred at Roosevelt High, Washington; Mel Lewis, former Beckley (W. Va.) High cager and track star and Bill and Tom Robinson, late of the Allegany High bench.

The Hurricanes, who line up as a tough foe for the Dragons in their opener, are scheduled to play a Hagerstown quint in the Hub City Saturday night.

Sunday Loop Season Will Get Going Today

First Presbyterian cagers and St. John's will clash in the headline contest this afternoon at the Central Y. M. C. A. where the annual Sunday School Basketball League campaign will be inaugurated.

Presbyterian, again coached by Ray Weatherholt, will be out for revenge. Last year after finishing the regular season undefeated, Presbyterian lost two straight to St. John's in the championship play-off series.

The tussle will open the program at 1 o'clock. At 1:55, Trinity M. E. will tangle with Grace M. E.; at 2:50, Central M. E. will test St. Paul's; at 3:45, Episcopal will engage St. Luke's and at 4:40, Grace Baptist will go against Centre Street M. E.

First Baptist will be idle. Games are scheduled every Saturday with one club having an open date on each of the playing dates. New teams this year are Grace Baptist and St. Luke's while United Brethren gave up its franchise.

THE MAIN THRILL

Red River, Arkansas, Dec. 1 — What is the big thrill of sport? A 50-yard touchdown run? A world series homer? A full iron dead to the pin? A long, completed forward into the end zone? A head-and-head finish to the wire?

I'll take mine in the first sudden whirr and drum-beat of wings as the first covey of the year gets up.

The startling effect is something the merely casual hunter rarely gets used to. The dogs are frozen into black and white marble—you know the covey is only a few feet away. Yet you rarely see a bird. The camouflage is perfect. You creep closer and closer. Then the explosion takes place and the air seems packed with quail and hurtling feathers. You feel a quick shock.

The big temptation is always to blaze away at the thickest part of the covey in the air, which means an almost sure miss. You can't understand why, but under this system results are lamentably sour.

Hunting Dogs

A short while back I was with a party of three duck shooting in the Deans' blind at Commons River, Long Island.

One of the features of this hunt was the amazing work of two Labrador retrievers. The moment a duck hit the water or crashed beyond the river into a thicket of pines, one of the retrievers was under way in a flash and dash. It knew almost to the square foot where the duck had fallen.

But there is still nothing in sport that quite equals the action of a good bird dog—the fast-moving, intensive search for quail and the sudden freezing as the covey is found.

Bill Dickey's three favorite dogs are named Tillie, Sally and Sadie and they know they have been on a day's hunt when they follow the long legs of the two Dickeys by thicket and swamp. They know their stuff. They have also discovered there is quite a difference in the results that develop from Bill Dickey's gun and that of your touring correspondent.

Five Straight?

The Yankee catcher and the Arkansas quail hunter can't see any reason why the Yankees shouldn't pick up their fifth straight pennant—plus their fifth consecutive world series swag.

"This is still a young ball club," Bill tells you, sitting on a log along the Red River trail. "It may be that the battery of Ruffing and Dickey isn't quite as young as it used to be, but most of the bunch have many years to go.

"You can figure on Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio for at least ten years more if they don't get hurt. There's no telling how far Keller will go. There's a great natural hitter with the best pair of hands and forearms I've seen in a long time. He's a fine all-around athlete who should be up among the three top hitters next season. When you have a pair of swingers such as DiMaggio and Keller in one outfield you have plenty. .

"Rolfe and Crosetti will be just as good for quite a spell on beyond and so will Babe Dahlgren.

This Joe Gordon is a fellow who gives me a lot of thrills through a season. I've seen him make play after play I knew were almost impossible. Some of them you hardly believe after you see it. As you know, Joe practised being an acrobat for two or three years. There are many times when he looks like two acrobats killing off those sure base hits that whistle over second or spin out towards right field."

Better Race

Bill looks for a better and a closer race next season. He figures the Red Sox rookies, with more experience, will be even better and that Boston will get better pitching.

"Boston and Cleveland both should be harder to handle next summer," he says. "That fellow Feller alone makes Cleveland something to watch. He should be close to 30 wins next summer, which is quite a help to any outfit. Feller would certainly make a world series look different if we had to face one like him, although you couldn't ask for much better pitching than Paul Derringer gave out. He came close to winning two games, which would have made a big difference with our pitching staff in pretty bad shape at the finish."

"How will the Yankee pitching staff be this next season?" I asked.

"Just about the same," Bill said. "Our younger pitchers may not get away quite as fast as they did last spring, but that year's experience ought to make them better for the long haul. Ruffing will be as good as ever. Charley is one of the easiest working pitchers I've ever seen. He can't keep on forever, but there are some good young ones moving up.

"I always laugh," Bill continued, "when they say our slugging won. Many people forget this is one of the best defensive ball clubs that ever played—I don't care how far back you go. They cut off more hits and more runs than any other team—and it's defense that wins many a ball game we might have lost with just good, average fielding."

Mr. Dickey never mentioned a Yankee catcher by the name of Dickey who happens to have done quite a job holding the Yankees where they are. Few realize the value of a great catcher—especially one of the great catchers of all time — maybe the most valuable entry that ever wore a mask, handled his pitchers and walloped the ball at crucial spots.

That's Mr. Dickey in person.

Mountaineers To Close Poor Season With Rodgers' Day

W. Va. U. To Honor Most Famous Athletic Son Today

Morgantown, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—West Virginia's Mountaineers close one of their most disappointing seasons tomorrow against George Washington, with 7,500 fans expected to witness the 2 p. m. kickoff.

The day has been designated "Rodgers' Day" in honor of the Mountaineers' most famous athletic son, Ira Rodgers, in his 25th year on the campus, either as player or coach.

Dr. Marshall (Sleepy) Glenn, who is expected to anounce his retirement from coaching after the contest, has drilled his charges at a fast clip, hopeful they will explode another ball game as they did in Lexington last week. Although losing 13-6, West Virginia actually outplayed the powerhouse southern outfit.

Glenn planned one lineup switch from the Kentucky game, sending in Tom Davies, a senior, at the wingback in place of Don McCann.

The visitors have lost but three contests while West Virginia has been beaten five times and scored a tie with South Carolina. Because of its light backfield, averaging 176.1 pounds to West Virginia's 188.2 pound per man backs, the visitors average about 6½ pounds lighter in weight.

Pat Comiskey Declares He's Now on Way to Top

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP)—Undefeated Pat Comiskey looked speculatively at the beefy fists with which he'd just knocked down his 24th consecutive heavyweight.

"I'm on my way," he grinned, as though he might have been doubtful before but was dead certain now. "Dunno how long it'll take or how fast I'll go, but I'm on my way to the top."

And Patrick Edward, the fast, husky Paterson, N. J., Irishman whose fistic future looks golden, wasn't bragging. He'd just hung up his 14th straight kayo, a lusty, battering technical knockout over Maynard Daniels, hitherto undefeated ex-marine from Washington, D. C., and Manteo, N. C.

Powerful Pat, figured by the experts as one of the nation's white-hope heavyweights was highly pleased. Daniels had coasted through 28 fights with a score of knockouts and he shot the works against Comiskey.

"He's easily the toughest guy I've run into," the Jersey giant asserted. "But, I'm set for some tough scraps from here out. He hit me plenty hard and I found I could take it."

Pat blasted Daniels with rights and lefts to the face from the opening bell last night, closed the ex-marine's left eye, and went on from there, punishing the game Daniels badly until the referee halted the bout after the sixth. Pat weighed 203, Daniels was 12 pounds lighter.

Fort Hill Gridders Presented Letters

Twenty-four Ft. Hill High School gridders were awarded letters at a special assembly yesterday with John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh, director of athletics making the presentation.

Victor D. Heisey, principal, presided. Talks were made by Coach Johnny Long, Ray Hahne, representing the alumni, and Col. Nelson W. Russler, representing patrons of the school and followers of its teams. Band music and cheering completed the program.

City Scholastic Court Grind Starts on Friday

The city scholastic basketball grind will get started next Friday night when "Bobby" Cavanaugh, Fort Hill Sentinels, city, W. M. I., Cumberland Valley Athletic League and state champions, will tangle with the Frostburg State Jayvees in the Sentinel gym.

Coach Art Slocum's LaSalle High cagers will launch their campaign Friday, December 15, by entertaining Beall High of Frostburg. Allegany is seeking a foe for a December 15 opener, but if unsuccessful will get under way the following week.

Oakland High of Garrett county got the jump on the other schools in this district, Coach Thomas Baucom's five has already played two games, defeating Fellowsville and losing to Terra Alta. Thursday Paw Paw won over its Alumni, 34-27.

Clears Annenberg In Anti-Trust Case

Court Rejects Civil Suit Based on Race Service Monopoly Charge

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Bulletin Record Publishing Company, publisher of a racing information sheet, today lost its Federal Court fight with M. L. Annenberg and thirteen other defendants whom the Record company charged had conspired to monopolize the dissemination of racing news.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan dismissed the civil action for want of equity, by upholding the report of Charles McDonald, master in chancery, who heard the case.

The court held the Bulletin Record's publication was a lawful one, but the purpose to which it was put was unlawful — serving bookmakers and their customers.

The racing sheet, the court continued, aided and abetted gambling and if the court were to have acted against the Annenberg interests it, too, would be aiding and abetting.

Of the Bulletin Record charge that a conspiracy existed to drive its publication off the market, Judge Sullivan ruled there was insufficient evidence to prove the Madison Publishing Company, another racing paper publisher, was organized for that purpose.

The Bulletin Record sheet, the ruling continued, was not a commodity in the sense of the Sherman anti-trust act and therefore not protectable by that statute.

Judge Sullivan said he found no discrimination by the recently disbanded nationwide News Service, Inc., as to price for wire service to the plaintiff company.

Tippen Tops Scorers In Frostburg Soccer

Frostburg, Dec. 1 — Booting 11 field goals for as many points, J. Tippen of the Hibernians was the leading scorer in the Frostburg Soccer League the past season.

Llewellyn of the champion Americans was second with eight markers on seven field goals and a penalty and "Jaggers" Drew of Midlothian, who topped the list last year with 14 points, finished third with seven.

Dunn of the Americans was fourth with six, Finzel of the Americans, Brady of Midlothian and Weibrecht of the Scots tied for fifth with five and Cole of the Hibernians, Goldsworthy of the Arsenals and Glime of the Rangers were knotted for eighth with four apiece. Individual records follow:

Penn's Grid Hopes High

Philadelphia, Pa.—The freshman football squad of the University of Pennsylvania is said to be the best in many years. Quaker hopes for 1940, as a result, are very high.

ALL A "BIG JOKE"

Ken Keltner

Unmasked as the star baseball player with a $7,500-a-year salary who applied for $15 weekly unemployment compensation, Kenny Keltner, crack third baseman of the Cleveland Indians, declared the whole incident was a "big joke." Keltner, who said he had applied to the Ohio bureau of unemployment compensation upon advice of an insurance man in his home city, Milwaukee, stated that "as soon as I found out I wasn't entitled to any, I withdrew the claim."

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — Ernie Lombardi probably will go down in baseball history as the only man who ever had a reserved seat at home plate in a world series, and all because he was too good a sport to offer an alibi.

We've always thought there was more than met the eye in that picture of Lombardi holding his ground as the Yanks were coming in the last game of the 1939 Major League follies, and when he saw Doc Rohde recently we tried to get behind the picture.

Doc Rohde is the trainer for the Cincinnati Reds, and last season he used more tape than a stock market ticker as he tried to keep at least a quorum in the field. The Reds' hospital list was longer than Lombardi's nap.

Figuring that if anybody should know the circumstances behind that misplay it would be Rohde, we asked him if Lombardi was injured.

"I am sure he must have been dazed," he replied, "as he was hit hard as Charley Keller came in. However, he wouldn't admit it. I asked him and all he would say was: 'I guess I was in a trance.' "

Knowing Lombardi and the difficulty of getting information from him, that was quite a speech.

We suggested the possibility that Lombardi might be traded this winter, and Rohde came back with:

"Why? Where would they get another catcher as good?"

Which was a stumper, as the comparatively few really good catchers will stay put. If a good receiver was available Joe Cronin would have had him long ago. Cronin said that it wasn't the pitching, but the catching, that was the big weakness of the Red Sox this year.

"And don't forget," Rohde added, "that Lombardi caught both Vander Meer's no-hit games. A poor catcher couldn't do that."

Incidentally, Rohde thinks that Vander Meer will come back next season.

He pointed out that after Vander Meer's no-hitters in 1938 the money rolled in. He was swamped with offers for testimonials, radio appearances and other money-making propositions.

He was on a spot, and his numerous outside interests probably preyed on his mind. Next season he'll be back to normal, as on his 1939 record nobody is going to chase him down alleys to get him to sign anything but a trafic ticket.

Vander Meer missed spring training this year because of illness, and was bothered by an ailing arm all season. It was one of those mysterious arm injuries which defy treatment. No chipped bone or torn ligament. Just a sore arm, that's all.

Tennessee's Bob Foxx Wins Neyland's Praise

He seldom has been in the headlines but always he has been in the thick of the battle. That's Bob Foxx, Tennessee's wingback. A junior, the 180-pound Knoxville youth has been a regular on the Volunteer eleven from the day he ousted two letter men from the wingback post in Tennessee's opening game in 1938.

To the spectator in the stands he has been just another cog in the well oiled Vol machine, but to Maj. Bob Neyland, his coach, "he's an athlete!"

"I have seen few men with as near perfect co-ordination between mind and muscle as Foxx," Neyland observed. "There's just one way to describe him—he's an athlete!"

Dad Went A-Hunting (But So Did Mom)

Harlowton, Mont., (AP) — When Harlan Lucas went deer hunting he took his wife along, principally for companionship and to guard their car.

"Maybe you can amuse yourself by fishing," Lucas told her as he prepared to leave her at the camp ground and take to the big game trails.

Mrs. Lucas fished. She caught her limit of trout. Then she saw a fine buck deer a short distance away and shot and killed it with a small caliber rifle that happened to be in the car.

Shortly her footsore husband returned. He'd had a long walk, but no good luck.

Jim Gaffney Edges Out Billy Davis To Top Scorers

Allegany Fullback Tallies 26 Points to 24 by Fort Hill Star

Jim Gaffney of Allegany High beat out Billy Davis of Fort Hill to retain the Cumberland Valley Athletic League scoring championship by a scant two-point margin.

Each Cumberlander scored four touchdowns in the four loop games played by each school but Gaffney finished in front with 26 markers while Davis was forced to take the runner-up berth with 24.

Tommy Mont, Allegany quarterback, beat out Billy Dean of Fort Hill for third, Mont getting 20 markers on three touchdowns and two extra points and Dean registering 19 tallies on two touchdowns and seven conversions.

"Ox" Aronholt Fifth

Grover "Ox" Aronholt, who captained the Sentinels before suffering a broken ankle, was fifth with 14 points. Aronholt played in three games but was missing in the all-important tussle with Allegany which decided the championship.

Four boys each gathered two touchdowns. They were B. Russell, Fahrney and Freyer of Hagerstown and Bill McIntyre of the Handley High Judges, Jones of Hagerstown, with nine points, completes the first ten.

Gaffney, who copped the crown last season with 49 markers, scored one touchdown in each of Allegan's tussles while Davis made one against Hagerstown, two against Martinsburg and one against Handley.

Stocks Advance for First Time in Nine Days Despite Profit Taking

Aircrafts Listless on Reports C.I.O. Plans Drive for Members

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — For the first time in nine consecutive sessions the stock market today stepped out on the rising side.

Gains ran to around three points in early dealings, but these were later cut down or cancelled. In the final hour buying came back in steels, aircrafts and specialties and favored issues ended at or near the day's best marks.

Transfers amounted to 606,480 shares, compared with 838,840 the day before. The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was 50.3. Since November 21 it had been down or unchanged.

Early bullishness was said to have been inspired partly by reports the administration and financial quarters were mulling over some program to lessen the pressure of foreign liquidation of American securities.

Aircrafts were listless most of the time following reports the C. I. O. was preparing an organizing drive in the aviation field.

Aluminum Company spurted eleven in the curb on comparatively heavy turnover. Ahead fractions to around a point were Nehi, Fisk Rubber, Lockheed and Electric Bond and Share. Turnover of 143,000 shares compared with 155,000 Thursday.

"Rulers of the Sea" Boasts Starring Trio

The greatest sea picture ever filmed — a picture justifiably called so in view of the fact that it was produced and directed by Frank Lloyd, maker of such screen masterpieces as "If I Were King," "Wells Fargo" and "Mutiny on the Bounty," continues to crowd the Strand at nearly every showing.

A salty and romantic tale of the first triumph of steam over sail in crossing the North Atlantic, it bears the title "Rulers of the Sea," boasts a starring trio consisting of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe, great Scottish character actor, and a supporting cast headed by George Bancroft and Montague Love.

With Fairbanks seen as the first mate of a sailing ship, Miss Lockwood as the courageous daughter of a Scottish inventor, and Will Fyffe as the inventor, a man who believes that he has perfected a steam engine powerful enough to drive a ship acress the Atlantic, the narrative starts to unfold as Fairbanks casts his lot with Fyffe, works with him to perfect the engine and interest backers for an Atlantic crossing. Their dreams, their discouragement, their triumphs lead the picture to a magnificent climax in which the little steamer "Dog Star" essays the first crossing of the Atlantic by steam.

"The Phantom Stage" And "Climbing High"

Closing today at the Embassy Theater is the double feature, Bob Baker in the thrilling western drama, "The Phantom Stage," with an all-star western cast, and Jessie Matthews in the musical feature, "Climbing High." In addition to the two features, another chapter of the serial "Mandrake, the Magician," will be shown.

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theater will be the twin-hit attraction, "Four Feathers," filmed in gorgeous technicolor and starring Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith, John Clements and the new star, June Duprey, and "Blondie Takes a Vacation," based on the comic strip by Chic Young. The film stars Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and a fine supporting cast.

Bette Davis Portrays Part of Vixen Schemer

A waspish women with an angry downturn to the corners of her mouth sat on the throne of England and told Sir Francis Bacon she would have the head of Lord Essex, her lover, even though it might break her heart to take it.

A bundle of venom she seemed to be, with her harsh voice, nervous gestures and flaming red wig, which did not quite hid the suggestion of baldness beneath.

This was Bette Davis as a visitor might have seen her almost any day on the set of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," playing the role of Elizabeth, queen of Shakespeare's England, dressed in the finery of that bygone age, with tight bodice, voluminous skirts and elaborate jewels. A small but mighty person, a vixen schemer and a lonely woman. But every inch a queen. The film opens today at the Liberty.

In contrast to this, one should see Bette Davis at home.

"BLONDIE" THE BOSS

"Blondie" . . . Penny Singleton again portrays the slightly balmy boss of the Bumsteads in Columbia's "Blondie Takes a Vacation," coming tomorrow to the Embassy Theater.

TYCOON

FACING DEATH TOGETHER

William Henry, Judith Barrett and William Collier, Sr., bravely face death to save Henry's plans for long-range television from the hands of international spies in this tense moment from Paramount's thrill-loaded new drama, "Television Spy," which will open Sunday Midnight at the Strand Theater.

On the stage will be the French Varieties of 1940 starring the 20 Beheney girls.

"Home," she says, "is where I can be comfortable, wear slacks or shorts or anything else I wish, where privacy is possible and where I can work in my garden or lie in a swing or rearrange my furniture. The house I live in means nothing. (She had a dozen in the last few years.) But my home is not my house. I can be at home in an apartment."

Variety of Reporters Seen in Mr. Smith Film

There are reporters and reporters. Frank Capra learned during production of the stirring new Columbia comedy drama, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which co-stars Jean Arthur and James Stewart at the Maryland Theater, with Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell and Beulah Bondi in featured roles. Two contrasting yet similar scenes, each involving the press, were found to require totally different types of newshawks.

One scene shows Stewart—Senator Jeff Smith — being interviewed by Washington's city press. In the other he meets a group of Washington correspondents, men who write about government affairs exclusively and who come from papers all over the nation.

"The city men should be young go-getters," advised James D. "Jim" Preston, well-known Washingtonian

Aircrafts Listless on Reports C.I.O. Plans Drive for Members

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — For the first time in nine consecutive sessions the stock market today stepped out on the rising side.

Gains ran to around three points in early dealings, but these were later cut down or cancelled. In the final hour buying came back in steels, aircrafts and specialties and favored issues ended at or near the day's best marks.

Transfers amounted to 606,480 shares, compared with 838,840 the day before. The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was 50.3. Since November 21 it had been down or unchanged.

Early bullishness was said to have been inspired partly by reports the administration and financial quarters were mulling over some program to lessen the pressure of foreign liquidation of American securities.

Aircrafts were listless most of the time following reports the C. I. O. was preparing an organizing drive in the aviation field.

Aluminum Company spurted eleven in the curb on comparatively heavy turnover. Ahead fractions to around a point were Nehi, Fisk Rubber, Lockheed and Electric Bond and Share. Turnover of 143,000 shares compared with 155,000 Thursday.

"Rulers of the Sea" Boasts Starring Trio

The greatest sea picture ever filmed — a picture justifiably called so in view of the fact that it was produced and directed by Frank Lloyd, maker of such screen masterpieces as "If I Were King," "Wells Fargo" and "Mutiny on the Bounty," continues to crowd the Strand at nearly every showing.

A salty and romantic tale of the first triumph of steam over sail in crossing the North Atlantic, it bears the title "Rulers of the Sea," boasts a starring trio consisting of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe, great Scottish character actor, and a supporting cast headed by George Bancroft and Montague Love.

With Fairbanks seen as the first mate of a sailing ship, Miss Lockwood as the courageous daughter of a Scottish inventor, and Will Fyffe as the inventor, a man who believes that he has perfected a steam engine powerful enough to drive a ship acress the Atlantic, the narrative starts to unfold as Fairbanks casts his lot with Fyffe, works with him to perfect the engine and interest backers for an Atlantic crossing. Their dreams, their discouragement, their triumphs lead the picture to a magnificent climax in which the little steamer "Dog Star" essays the first crossing of the Atlantic by steam.

"The Phantom Stage" And "Climbing High"

Closing today at the Embassy Theater is the double feature, Bob Baker in the thrilling western drama, "The Phantom Stage," with an all-star western cast, and Jessie Matthews in the musical feature, "Climbing High." In addition to the two features, another chapter of the serial "Mandrake, the Magician," will be shown.

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theater will be the twin-hit attraction, "Four Feathers," filmed in gorgeous technicolor and starring Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith, John Clements and the new star, June Duprey, and "Blondie Takes a Vacation," based on the comic strip by Chic Young. The film stars Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and a fine supporting cast.

Bette Davis Portrays Part of Vixen Schemer

A waspish women with an angry downturn to the corners of her mouth sat on the throne of England and told Sir Francis Bacon she would have the head of Lord Essex, her lover, even though it might break her heart to take it.

A bundle of venom she seemed to be, with her harsh voice, nervous gestures and flaming red wig, which did not quite hid the suggestion of baldness beneath.

This was Bette Davis as a visitor might have seen her almost any day on the set of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex," playing the role of Elizabeth, queen of Shakespeare's England, dressed in the finery of that bygone age, with tight bodice, voluminous skirts and elaborate jewels. A small but mighty person, a vixen schemer and a lonely woman. But every inch a queen. The film opens today at the Liberty.

In contrast to this, one should see Bette Davis at home.

"BLONDIE" THE BOSS

"Blondie" . . . Penny Singleton again portrays the slightly balmy boss of the Bumsteads in Columbia's "Blondie Takes a Vacation," coming tomorrow to the Embassy Theater.

TYCOON

FACING DEATH TOGETHER

William Henry, Judith Barrett and William Collier, Sr., bravely face death to save Henry's plans for long-range television from the hands of international spies in this tense moment from Paramount's thrill-loaded new drama, "Television Spy," which will open Sunday Midnight at the Strand Theater.

On the stage will be the French Varieties of 1940 starring the 20 Beheney girls.

"Home," she says, "is where I can be comfortable, wear slacks or shorts or anything else I wish, where privacy is possible and where I can work in my garden or lie in a swing or rearrange my furniture. The house I live in means nothing. (She had a dozen in the last few years.) But my home is not my house. I can be at home in an apartment."

Variety of Reporters Seen in Mr. Smith Film

There are reporters and reporters, Frank Capra learned during production of the stirring new Columbia comedy drama, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which co-stars Jean Arthur and James Stewart at the Maryland Theater, with Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell and Beulah Bondi in featured roles. Two contrasting yet similar scenes, each involving the press, were found to require totally different types of newshawks.

One scene shows Stewart—Senator Jeff Smith — being interviewed by Washington's city press. In the other he meets a group of Washington correspondents, men who write about government affairs exclusively and who come from papers all over the nation.

"The city men should be young go-getters," advised James D. "Jim" Preston, well-known Washingtonian

Claim Shutdown In W.Va. Was Not A Labor Dispute

Attorneys File Briefs with Unemployment Board of Review

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—United Mine Worker attorneys contended today the contractural negotiations between the union and coal operators which brought on the April-May shutdown could not be construed as a labor dispute or grounds for barring miners from jobless benefits.

T. C. Townsend, counsel for the UMWA, in a brief filed with the Unemployment Compensation Department Board of Review, asserted:

"Mere failure to agree upon terms of employment does not constitute a labor dispute. x x x during these negotiations there may be proposals and counter-proposals by the parties who are seeking to agree upon a contract, but there is no dispute until there has first been an agreement."

Operators Oppose New Move

Charles L. Estep, representing Logan Coal Operators, urged the board to sustain Trial Examiner Henry Simms' ruling that the long bituminous coal field shutdown was a labor dispute and that men idle during it were not entitled to unemployment compensation.

"No one who believes in the right of man engaged in negotiating a contract to insist upon the most favorable terms they are able to obtain can blame either side to this controversy for insisting upon their respective positions. x x x However, the rights of these parties to contend over these and other disputed points does not render their negotiations in that respect any the less a labor dispute."

The state law denies benefits to workers engaged in a labor dispute, and Director John S. Stump interpreted the April-May negotiations as one, declaring miners ineligible.

Claimants appealed from that ruling, but Simms sustained it, interpreting a "lockout" also within the labor dispute category.

Appeal to Board

The miners now are appealing to the board of review, and both sides have indicated the case will be carried to the supreme court.

The long shutdown began on April 1 at the expiration of the old two-year contract between operators and miners.

Representatives of both sides gathered in New York on March 14 to begin negotiations for a new contract, and Townsend declared in his brief testimony showed the miners were willing to continue work at the expiration date under the old conditions until a new contract was signed.

"The stoppage of work x x x was due to the expiration of the existing contract of employment," Townsend asserted, "which the operators refused to extend even temporarily."

Agreement on the present "union shop" contract ended the controversy on May 13.

100 Deer Killed In Preston Co.

Kingwood, Dec. 1 — Deer season opened in Preston county Thursday with the kill estimated at 100 the first day. Several illegal kills were reported, among them four doe and three spike bucks.

The first kill was reported by Miss Dorothy Pallettee, 20, who killed a fifteen-point buck.

Although a great number of hunters turned back to Kingwood because of the heavy snow, chief of the state game protectors stationed in the county, H. P. Farley, stated that the hunting, although spoiled the first day, would be much better the second and third days. Up until noon Friday only twelve bucks had been reported in Kingwood.

Brief Items

Mrs. Marian Lanham entertained the members of her bridge club Friday evening at her home on High street with three tables of contract being in play throughout the evening.

Mrs. Virginia Young and daughter, Peggy Lance, have returned to their home in Charleston.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chidester attended the funeral of Mrs. Sara Chidester at Frostburg, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Lenhart visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Copeman in Fairmont this week.

The members of the Westminster Guild of the Presbyterian church will sponsor a spaghetti supper Thursday, December 7, in the American Legion hall on Main street.

William Lohmeyer Dies

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP) — William Lohmeyer, 75-year-old chairman of the Board of the Virginia Land Bank, died last night.

A native of Hanover Germany, he came to Charleston in 1888 and established a stationery store for S. G. Walker. Later he engaged in the insurance business and was affiliated with manufacturing concerns. He was a director of the Old Kanawha National Bank.

Until a few years ago, Lohmeyer was organist for St. John's Episcopal church.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon.

Frostburg Couple To Celebrate Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy Were Married Dec. 4, 1879

Frostburg, Dec. 1—Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, 247 Welsh Hill, who were married December 4, 1879, at a little log cabin on Long Stretch, Garrett county, will observe their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sunday, December 3, at their home with a reception for their children and grandchildren.

Mr. Murphy, 85, and Mrs. Murphy, 76, the former Miss Henrietta Crowe, both members of pioneer Garrett county families, are in fair health and eager for the reunion which will probably be attended by all of their descendants.

They were married by the late Rev. J. R. Andrews, a Methodist clergyman, and have been devout church members throughout life. It seems appropriate that the observance of their sixtieth wedding anniversary is to be held on the Sabboth. Both Mr. and Mrs. Murphy attend First Methodist church regularly.

Mr. Murphy said today that he and his young bride began life on a ten-acre tract of wooded land in the Savage River valley, near Frostburg. The land, he said, was purchased from the late Richard Beall, and he called the place Beallville, where they resided for forty-eight years. After raising a large family, they moved to Frostburg to spend the remainder of their lives.

They have the following children: Quincy Murphy, a merchant of Friendsville; Mrs. Charles Fike, Braddock, Pa.; Mrs. Asa Fresh, New Germany; Ernest, Mrs. Alvin O. Cook, Marion B. Ray and Mrs. Frank R. Keene, this city. There are twenty-one grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Due to the illness of Mrs. Murphy, who is suffering from a nervous condition, the reception Sunday will be confined to members of the family.

Expect Christmas Rush

Postmaster E. J. Donahue said today the Frostburg postoffice was anticipating the largest Christmas business in the history of the office. Through the efforts of Mr. Donahue, the government spent about $2,000 during the past months, making needed repairs and improvements to the building. A new floor in the workroom, more radiation in the vestibule, a general checkup of doors and windows, roof repairs and general repairs to the exterior of the building and grounds has given the place an improved appearance and provided conveniences for the easier handling of mail.

Class Plans Trip

Professor Ivan C. Diehl, head of the geography department at the State Teachers' College, Frostburg, has completed plans for a motor caravan of junior and senior students which he will conduct from Frostburg to Short Gap, W. Va., and return Sunday afternoon.

This field trip is the second in a series organized for the junior and senior geography students at the college. The route includes Clarysville, Six-Mile House, Cresaptown, Triple Lakes, Pinto, Cumberland, Narrows Park, Corriganville, Barrelville, Mt. Savage, Morantown, Allegany and Frostburg, with stops at all places of geomorphological, historical and human interest. The excursion will cover approximately forty-five miles of territory in Maryland and adjacent West Virginia and take about four hours.

Students who will make the trip are Alice Ramey, M. Kathryn Wilson, Martha Meek, Thelma Steyer, Frances Crist, Angela Hannon, Mildred Largent, Leon Klompus, Frances Gower, Claudine Opel, Walter Hedrick, Shirley Gattens, Martha Friend, Pauline Forsyth, Amelia Brode, Dorothy Mont, Joseph Wagner, Helen Simons, M. King Wilson, Ruth Hammer, Naomi Mackley, Dorothy Rollins, Dwight Roy, Marie Winner and Lorraine Corwell.

Frostburg Briefs

The Borden Shaft Fire Department held a dance Friday evening at Legion hall, Mechanic street, to raise funds to buy equipment for the department which was organized a year ago. A similar dance will be held every Friday evening. The officers of the department are: William Davis, president; Leonard Miller, fire chief; William Landfield, treasurer and Richard Duncan, secretary.

A rally day program will be held Sunday, 3 p. m., at the Vale Summit Methodist church. A feature of the program will be a drama, "The Jones Family", by Willis Scott, Francis Fatkin, Anna Fatkin, Thomas Albright, Alma Cookerly and the Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver. There will be a discourse by the Rev. Mr. Lineweaver whose topic will be "Moving Forward."

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Crowe, Linden street, announce the birth of a son, Tuesday at the Miners' Hospital. Mrs. Crowe is the former Miss Florence Klopper, Smithburg.

Frostburg Personals

Paul Robinson, clerk at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore, a former resident of this city, will arrive here Saturday to spend the weekend with Darrell Zeller, at the Zeller home, 123 West Main street. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Robinson. Mr. Robinson and Mr. Zeller were classmates at Beall high school.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter Shryock, Frost avenue, returned from Parkersburg, W. Va., where they were the guests of Mrs. Shryock's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Dils.

Miss Catherine Klosterman, Eckhart, is spending several months in Detroit, Mich.

William Mason, ill for eight weeks at his home, Park avenue, has returned to his work at the Hitchins Brothers Company store.

Joseph Gerson, formerly of the St. Cloud Motor Company, this city, who recently sold his interest to his brother, Samuel, is in Charleston, S. C., visiting Myer and Philip Kline, former Frostburgers, who are engaged in wholesale and retail steel business.

Edward Parks, sales manager of the Frostburg district of the Potomac Edison Company, is much improved after an illness of seven weeks. He resides in the Weimer apartments, Broadway.

George Goodwin, Hagerstown, was a recent guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Goodwin, Ormond street.

Gurney Beeman of Beeman's Radio service, 95 East Main street, is in Akron, Ohio, on a business trip. During his absence, his business will be in charge of William B. Rank, Borden Shaft.

Nelson Speir, Water street, returned home after spending several days in Baltimore.

Hayden Lewis, fifth grade teacher at the Sykesville public school, returned to Carroll county after visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Lewis, 116 Ormond street.

Publishers in Favor Of More Pictures

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—The increasing importance of pictures in newspaper coverage brought proposals by State Associated Press members today concerning a faster system of distribution of pictures of state events.

Plans for coverage of next year's political campaign also occupied the members who came here for the annual fall meeting.

The A.P. members met in the morning, and later were entertained at lunch with members of the West Virginia Publishers' Association.

The publishers met during the afternoon.

Charles Hodel of the Beckley Newspaper Publishing Company, chairman of the State A.P. group, presided at the wire service session.

Among those attending were O. S. Gramling of New York, executive assistant in charge of membership for the A.P., and Floyd Hockenhull of Chicago, publisher of Circulation Management, who addressed the publishers' association.

Thirty-Six Miners Killed in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP) — Coal mining in West Virginia during November cost thirty - six lives against forty in October, the State Mines Department reported today.

H. G. Houtz, department engineer, estimated November production at 11,000,000 tons against 13,020,000 in the preceding month. He pointed out, however, that November had less working days and a general observance of Thanksgiving.

"There was, however, a noticeable slackening of production after November 18," said Houtz.

Mine Chief N. P. Rhinehart said a second safety conference of State Mine inspectors contemplated for December had been postponed until after January 1.

Hi-Y Members Attend Meeting In Washington

Nine Lonaconing Boys at Older Boys Conference in Capital

Lonaconing, Dec. 1.—Nine delegates of the Central Hi-Y club left yesterday to attend the seventeenth annual Older Boys conference of Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia, in Washington, D. C., for three days starting Friday, Dec. 1.

The delegates were accompanied by Lowell M. Sowers and Mac Holmes and are making the trip by automobiles. While in Washington they will tour the Federal Bureau of Investigation with J. Edgar Hoover, and will visit the Supreme Court and will have their pictures taken on the steps of the Supreme Court building.

This conference is sponsored by the Young Men's Christian Association of Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia. This year the theme of the conference will be "Effectice Christian Living."

Miners Are Still Seeking Unemployment Compensation

Attorneys File Briefs with Unemployment Board of Review

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—United Mine Worker attorneys contended today the contractural negotiations between the union and coal operators which brought on the April-May shutdown could not be construed as a labor dispute or grounds for barring miners from jobless benefits.

T. C. Townsend, counsel for the UMWA, in a brief filed with the Unemployment Compensation Department Board of Review, asserted:

"Mere failure to agree upon terms of employment does not constitute a labor dispute, x x x during these negotiations there may be proposals and counter-proposals by the parties who are seeking to agree upon a contract, but there is no dispute until there has first been an agreement."

Operators Oppose New Move

Charles L. Estep, representing Logan Coal Operators, urged the board to sustain Trial Examiner Henry Simms' ruling that the long bituminous coal field shutdown was a labor dispute and that men idle during it were not entitled to unemployment compensation.

"No one who believes in the right of man engaged in negotiating a contract to insist upon the most favorable terms they are able to obtain can blame either side to this controversy for insisting upon their respective positions. x x x However the rights of these parties to contend over these and other disputed points does not render their negotiations in that respect any the less a labor dispute."

The state law denies benefits to workers engaged in a labor dispute, and Director John S. Stump interpreted the April-May negotiations as one, declaring miners ineligible.

Claimants appealed from that ruling, but Simms sustained it, interpreting a "lockout" also within the labor dispute category.

Appeal to Board

The miners now are appealing to the board of review, and both sides have indicated the case will be carried to the supreme court.

The long shutdown began on April 1 at the expiration of the old two-year contract between operators and miners.

Representatives of both sides gathered in New York on March 14 to begin negotiations for a new contract, and Townsend declared in his brief testimony showed the miners were willing to continue work at the expiration date under the old conditions until a new contract was signed.

"The stoppage of work x x x was due to the expiration of the existing contract of employment," Townsend asserted, "which the operators refused to extend even temporarily."

Agreement on the present "union shop" contract ended the controversy on May 13.

100 Deer Killed In Preston Co.

Kingwood, Dec. 1 — Deer season opened in Preston county Thursday with the kill estimated at 100 the first day. Several illegal kills were reported, among them four doe and three spike bucks.

The first kill was reported by Miss Dorothy Pallettee, 20, who killed a fifteen-point buck.

Although a great number of hunters turned back to Kingwood because of the heavy snow, chief of the state game protectors stationed in the county, H. P. Farley, stated that the hunting, although spoiled the first day, would be much better the second and third days. Up until noon Friday only twelve bucks had been reported in Kingwood.

Frostburg Couple To Celebrate Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy Were Married Dec. 4, 1879

Frostburg, Dec. 1 — Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, 247 Welsh Hill, who were married December 4, 1879, at a little log cabin on Long Stretch, Garrett county, will observe their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sunday, December 3, at their home with a reception for their children and grandchildren.

Mr. Murphy, 85, and Mrs. Murphy, 76, the former Miss Henrietta Crowe, both members of pioneer Garrett county families, are in fair health and eager for the reunion which will probably be attended by all of their descendants.

They were married by the late Rev. J. R. Andrews, a Methodist clergyman, and have been devout church members throughout life. It seems appropriate that the observance of their sixtieth wedding anniversary is to be held on the Sabboth. Both Mr. and Mrs. Murphy attend First Methodist church regularly.

Mr. Murphy said today that he and his young bride began life on a ten-acre tract of wooded land in the Savage River valley, near Frostburg. The land, he said, was purchased from the late Richard Beall, and he called the place Beallville, where they resided for forty-eight years. After raising a large family, they moved to Frostburg to spend the remainder of their lives.

They have the following children: Quincy Murphy, a merchant of Friendsville; Mrs. Charles Fike, Braddock, Pa.; Mrs. Asa Fresh, New Germany; Ernest, Mrs. Alvin O. Cook, Marion B. Ray and Mrs. Frank R. Keene, this city. There are twenty-one grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Due to the illness of Mrs. Murphy, who is suffering from a nervous condition, the reception Sunday will be confined to members of the family.

Expect Christmas Rush

Postmaster E. J. Donahue said today the Frostburg postoffice was anticipating the largest Christmas business in the history of the office. Through the efforts of Mr. Donahue, the government spent about $2,000 during the past months, making needed repairs and improvements to the building. A new floor in the workroom, more radiation in the vestibule, a general checkup of doors and windows, roof repairs and general repairs to the exterior of the building and grounds has given the place an improved appearance and provided conveniences for the easier handling of mail.

Class Plans Trip

Professor Ivan C. Diehl, head of the geography department at the State Teachers' College, Frostburg, has completed plans for a motor caravan of junior and senior students which he will conduct from Frostburg to Short Gap, W. Va., and return Sunday afternoon.

This field trip is the second in a series organized for the junior and senior geography students at the college. The route includes Clarysville, Six-Mile House, Cresaptown, Triple Lakes, Pinto, Cumberland, Narrows Park, Corriganville, Barrelville, Mt. Savage, Morantown, Allegany and Frostburg, with stops at all places of geomorphological, historical and human interest. The excursion will cover approximately forty-five miles of territory in Maryland and adjacent West Virginia and take about four hours.

Students who will make the trip are Alice Ramey, M. Kathryn Wilson, Martha Meek, Thelma Steyer, Frances Crist, Angela Hannon, Mildred Largent, Leon Klompus, Frances Gower, Claudine Opel, Walter Hedrick, Shirley Gattens, Martha Friend, Pauline Forsyth, Amelia Brode, Dorothy Mont, Joseph Wagner, Helen Simons, M. Hayden Lewis, fifth grade teacher at the Sykesville public school, returned to Carroll county after visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Lewis, 116 Ormond street.

Publishers in Favor Of More Pictures

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—The increasing importance of pictures in newspaper coverage brought proposals by State Associated Press members today concerning a faster system of distribution of pictures of state events.

Plans for coverage of next year's political campaign also occupied the members who came here for the annual fall meeting.

The A.P. members met in the morning, and later were entertained at lunch with members of the West Virginia Publishers' Association.

The publishers met during the afternoon.

Charles Hodel of the Beckley Newspaper Publishing Company, chairman of the State A.P. group, presided at the wire service session.

Among those attending were O. S. Gramling of New York, executive assistant in charge of membership for the A.P., and Floyd Hockenhull of Chicago, publisher of Circulation Management, who addressed the publishers' association.

Thirty-Six Miners Killed in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP) — Coal mining in West Virginia during November cost thirty - six lives against forty in October, the State Mines Department reported today.

H. G. Houtz, department engineer, estimated November production at 11,000,000 tons against 13,020,000 in the preceding month. He pointed out, however, that November had less working days and a general observance of Thanksgiving.

"There was, however, a noticeable slackening of production after November 18," said Houtz.

Mine Chief N. P. Rhinehart said a second safety conference of State Mine inspectors contemplated for December had been postponed until after January 1.

Petersburg Airport Is Completed

Final Inspection Is Being Made by D. H. Reid of Washington

Petersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1.—Petersburg emergency airport, constructed during the past several months on the south side of the Potomac river near Petersburg is now ready for use and the lights have been turned on for regular service.

J. E. Thomason, Montgomery, Ala., said the work has been completed with the exception of painting the steel holding the lights and other equipment and this work will be done in the spring. The airport has a fine level runway about a half mile long—2,700 feet—and is 500 feet wide. Lights along the boundary number twenty-three in all—nineteen white lights and four green ones—there are two lights at the end of the runways to indicate the extremes. There are also two course lights, green in color, which will be used to flash signals in aeronautical code to planes entering the port after dark.

A huge beacon has also been erected on a sixty-foot tower. Operated automatically, the beacon flashes a beam of light that can be seen by plane for miles. The next nearest beacon north is in Hardy county at Helmick Rock. The next beacon south is at Dolly Sods and can be been for miles, and is slightly to the left of the peak towering above Hyre's Rocks.

D. H. Reid, a government inspector for the CAA is here checking every detail essential to a successful operation of the airport. The air line runs from Washington, D. C., via Elkins, W. Va. to Cincinnati, O.

Movie 'Bad Man' Scores Big Hit in Thriller

Possessor of the most unusual face in pictures, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams is an internationally known polo star who finds work in the movies an agreeable and profitable "hobby."

A better explanation, perhaps, may be found in the fact that although Williams is a high-goal performer on the polo field, the game is played for pleasure and not for money.

Established through "tough guy" roles which stand out as classics of the screen, Williams is seen as the hard-boiled mate on a slave ship in Universal's adventure drama, "Mutiny on the Blackhawk."

The picture is now at the Garden Theater, with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore, Noah Beery, Mamo Clark, Princess Luana, Mala, Thurston Hall and Richard Lane. Williams supplies menace along with Beery in a stirring tale of mutiny and war which led to California joining the Union.

Charles Starrett, supported by Iris Meredith, is starred in the co-feature at the Garden, the "Spoilers of the Range," a western.

Episcopal Church To Hold Services

Congregation To Meet in Presbyterian Church Building

Oakland, Dec. 1. —The congregation of St. Matthew's Episcopal church will begin holding services in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church in the downtown section, starting Sunday morning, December 3, it was announced by the Rev. David C. Trimble, rector.

Tht Presbyterian church property has been leased by St. Matthew's Vestry from the local Presbyterian trustees.

During the past month the Presbyterian church has been redecorated inside and necessary alterations made in the nave and chancel. A sacristy at the back of the nave has been added for the convenience of the clergy and choir. An almost entirely new system of electric wiring has also been installed.

No regular services have been held by the Presbyterians here in the last year, and there has been no resident pastor for almost two years, the last being the Rev. W. A. Ashley of Kingwood, W. Va. Since 1935 members of the Episcopal church have been worshiping for eight months in the year in the church parish house, Center street, and in their church building on Fourth street, near the high school, during the summer. The agreement between both groups is being looked upon as mutually helpful.

The Rev. Trimble announced services for Sunday as follows: Holy Communion at 8 a. m., and also at 11 a. m., with sermon by the rector.

Marriage Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Virginia Welling, daughter of Mrs. Clara Little Welling and the late Charles R. Welling ,to Thomas Jewell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Jewell of Crumpton, Md., on November 23. The ceremony was performed at Crumpton by the Rev. Ralph Hopkins, of the Methodist church.

The bride was attired in an afternoon gown of ashes of roses, with brown accessories. She carried a bouquet of gradenias. Mrs. Jewell is a graduate of Oakland high school, class of 1938, and had been employed for the past year and a half at the Half Price Store in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Jewell will reside in Seaford, Del., where the groom is employed with the duPont manufacturers.

Road Commission Classes Contraption As Motorcycle

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—Robert Duke didn't know what to call the contraption in which he drives daily from Bakerton to Shepherdstown, and neither did the state road commission after they received a description.

Duke assembled the machine himself from parts which he picked up at junk yards. The front axle and the steering wheel came from one old automobile, the vacuum tank from another. The frame was made from iron girders which were taken from an old Harpers Ferry bridge which crashed in the 1936 flood.

The springs were once a part of a radio wind charger, and the drive chain tightener was taken from a cream separator. The motor—which Duke claims speeds the contraption along at about fifty miles an hour—formerly was part of a motorcycle until it was discarded as useless.

The exhaust pipe once was a part of a vacuum cleaner.

What kind of license was required, Duke asked the road commission.

Finally, the commission came up with an answer — a motorcycle license would suffice.

Fire Destroys Home

Romney, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—J. Bruce Thompson was burned on the face and head while carrying furniture from his Three Churches home, destroyed by an early morning fire.

Volunteer firemen prevented the flames from reaching a nearby church.

Final Inspection Is Being Made by D. H. Reid of Washington

Petersburg, W. Va., Dec. 1.—Petersburg emergency airport, constructed during the past several months on the south side of the Potomac river near Petersburg is now ready for use and the lights have been turned on for regular service.

J. E. Thomason, Montgomery, Ala., said the work has been completed with the exception of painting the steel holding the lights and other equipment and this work will be done in the spring. The airport has a fine level runway about a half mile long—2,700 feet—and is 500 feet wide. Lights along the boundary number twenty-three in all—nineteen white lights and four green ones—there are two lights at the end of the runways to indicate the extremes. There are also two course lights, green in color, which will be used to flash signals in aeronautical code to planes entering the port after dark.

A huge beacon has also been erected on a sixty-foot tower. Operated automatically, the beacon flashes a beam of light that can be seen by plane for miles. The next nearest beacon north is in Hardy county at Helmick Rock. The next beacon south is at Dolly Sods and can be been for miles, and is slightly to the left of the peak towering above Hyre's Rocks.

D. H. Reid, a government inspector for the CAA is here checking every detail essential to a successful operation of the airport. The air line runs from Washington, D. C., via Elkins, W. Va. to Cincinnati, O.

Movie 'Bad Man' Scores Big Hit in Thriller

Possessor of the most unusual face in pictures, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams is an internationally known polo star who finds work in the movies an agreeable and profitable "hobby."

A better explanation, perhaps, may be found in the fact that although Williams is a high-goal performer on the polo field, the game is played for pleasure and not for money.

Established through "tough guy" roles which stand out as classics of the screen, Williams is seen as the hard-boiled mate on a slave ship in Universal's adventure drama, "Mutiny on the Blackhawk."

The picture is now at the Garden Theater, with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Constance Moore, Noah Beery, Mamo Clark, Princess Luana, Mala, Thurston Hall and Richard Lane. Williams supplies menace along with Beery in a stirring tale of mutiny and war which led to California joining the Union.

Charles Starrett, supported by Iris Meredith, is starred in the co-feature at the Garden, the "Spoilers of the Range," a western.

Episcopal Church To Hold Services

Congregation To Meet in Presbyterian Church Building

Oakland, Dec. 1. —The congregation of St. Matthew's Episcopal church will begin holding services in the Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church in the downtown section, starting Sunday morning, December 3, it was announced by the Rev David C. Trimble, rector.

Tht Presbyterian church property has been leased by St. Matthew's Vestry from the local Presbyterian trustees.

During the past month the Presbyterian church has been redecorated inside and necessary alterations made in the nave and chancel. A sacristy at the back of the nave has been added for the convenience of the clergy and choir. An almost entirely new system of electric wiring has also been installed.

No regular services have been held by the Presbyterians here in the last year, and there has been no resident pastor for almost two years, the last being the Rev. W. A. Ashley of Kingwood, W. Va. Since 1935 members of the Episcopal church have been worshiping for eight months in the year in the church parish house, Center street, and in their church building on Fourth street, near the high school during the summer. The agreement between both groups is being looked upon as mutually helpful.

The Rev. Trimble announced services for Sunday as follows: Holy Communion at 8 a. m., and also at 11 a. m., with sermon by the rector.

Marriage Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Virginia Welling, daughter of Mrs. Clara Little Welling and the late Charles R. Welling ,to Thomas Jewell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Jewell of Crumpton, Md., on November 23. The ceremony was performed at Crumpton by the Rev. Ralph Hopkins, of the Methodist church.

The bride was attired in an afternoon gown of ashes of roses, with brown accessories. She carried a bouquet of gradenias. Mrs. Jewell is a graduate of Oakland high school, class of 1938, and had been employed for the past year and a half at the Half Price Store in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Jewell will reside in Seaford, Del., where the groom is employed with the duPont manufacturers.

Three illegal kills have been reported in the county.

Lawrence Smith Fined

Lawrence Smith, Norton, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate G. W. Doyle where he pleaded guilty to two charges, one of assault and battery, the other for unlawful destruction of property. He was fined $5 and costs or ten days in jail on the first charge, and $10 and costs and ten days in jail on the second charge. The assault and battery charge was alleged to have been made against Lester Phillips, also of Norton.

Odd Kill Reported

The oddest kill of the deer season yesterday was reported by E. D. Tucker, Jr., Nutter Fort, who said he shot his 150 - pound, eight-point buck "in self defense." He was on a drive and starting to climb over a fence when he said the deer "jumped right up in my face from the other side of the fence". Tucker dropped to one knee, took a shot without taking aim, the ball ploughing through the buck's heart. Tucker said the butt of the rifle rested upon his knee.

Arnan Guild Meets

The Arnan Guild met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Ruth Ridgway where plans were made for their annual Christmas pageant to be held in the Presbyterian church December 24 under the direction of Mrs. John McNeely, Mrs. Dale Ridgway and Kent Lambert. Mrs. Stark L. Coberly was elected secretary to succeed Dorothy Allee, who resigned. The club will have a Christmas party Dec. 14 at their Sunday school rooms.

Brief Mention

A meeting of the Tucker County Principal's Association was held in the Worden Hotel at Davis last night with Earl Corcoran, of this city, in charge. The theme of the meeting was "The place of the principal in the community."

Speakers were R. E. King, Bretz principal; Ira McDowell, Davis high school principal and Stellman Harper, principal of the Thomas Main school.

Others present were County Superintendent Shirley Cooper, J. H. Patterson, Jason Wolford, F. C. Randolph, Naomi Williams, Dale Ridgway, Felix Colabrese, Gertrude Dietz and Louise Bombarger.

The Parsons Parent-Teachers Association met last night in the graded school auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Parsons announce the birth of a son. The mother is the former Miss Lessie Fitzwater. This is their first child.

Bret Allender, Pittsburgh, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Allender.

Mrs. Guy Green, Buckhannon, has entered the Tucker County hospital for medical treatment.

Road Commission Classes Contraption As Motorcycle

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—Robert Duke didn't know what to call the contraption in which he drives daily from Bakerton to Shepherdstown, and neither did the state road commission after they received a description.

Duke assembled the machine himself from parts which he picked up at junk yards. The front axle and the steering wheel came from one old automobile, the vacuum tank from another. The frame was made from iron girders which were taken from an old Harpers Ferry bridge which crashed in the 1936 flood.

The springs were once a part of a radio wind charger, and the drive chain tightener was taken from a cream separator. The motor—which Duke claims speeds the contraption along at about fifty miles an hour—formerly was part of a motorcycle until it was discarded as useless.

The exhaust pipe once was a part of a vacuum cleaner.

What kind of license was required, Duke asked the road commission.

Finally, the commission came up with an answer — a motorcycle license would suffice.

Fire Destroys Home

Romney, W. Va., Dec. 1. (AP)—J. Bruce Thompson was burned on the face and head while carrying furniture from his Three Churches home, destroyed by an early morning fire.

Volunteer firemen prevented the flames from reaching a nearby church.

In Memoriams

In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, Mary Elizabeth Breighner, who passed away one year ago, December 2nd.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In her silent lonely grave.

Days of sadness come over us,
Secret tears often flow.
Fond memory keeps you near us,
Though you left us a year ago.

We can never forget you, mother,
While in this world we stay,
God only knows our feelings,
Since you have passed away.
SADLY MISSED BY HER FAMILY.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Melvin Sturtz, Vs. Louise Sturtz.
No. 15408 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce a Vinculo Matrimonii of the Plaintiff from the Defendant. The bill states that the parties were married July 27th, 1927, in Cumberland, Maryland, and that one child was born of the said marriage and resides with the parents of the Plaintiff.

The bill further states that the defendant deserted and abandoned the Plaintiff on or about March 8th, 1936, and that such desertion and abandonment has been continuous and uninterrupted for more than three years, and is deliberate and final and without any hope of reconciliation; that the Plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, and that the Defendant is a non-resident of said State. The Plaintiff asks for the custody of the infant child of said marriage.

IT IS THEREUPON, this 9th. day of November, 1939, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County in equity, ordered that the Plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be published in some newspaper, published in Allegany County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 11th. day of December, 1939, giving notice to the said absent defendant of the object and purpose of this suit, and warning her to be and appear in this Court in person or by Solicitor on or before the 27th. day of December, 1939, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

In Memoriams

In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, Mary Elizabeth Breighner, who passed away one year ago, December 2nd.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In her silent lonely grave.

Days of sadness come over us,
Secret tears often flow
Fond memory keeps you near us,
Though you left us a year ago.

We can ne'er forget you, mother,
While in this world we stay,
God only knows our feelings
Since you have passed away.
SADLY MISSED BY HER FAMILY

Organizer Says Bus Driver Fired For Unionism

To File Charges With Labor Board, Kreisel Reports

Floyd Kreisel, representative of the local bus drivers' union, last night reported that charges of discharging a bus driver for union activity would be filed with the National Labor Relations Board against the Potomac Edison Company.

Kreisel alleges that the company discharged Robert C. Jenkins, a bus driver, for union activity after he had helped to start the new union and had served on the negotiating committee.

Driver Claims Illness

The union representative states that Jenkins turned in his equipment at the bus company and was off duty for several days due to an illness.

When Jenkins returned to work four days later, Kreisel said, he was informed by a company official that they would let him know on November 29 whether or not he would be permitted to return to work. On November 29 Jenkins was informed that he was discharged, Kreisel said.

Doctor's Certificate Promised

Kreisel stated that the company contends that Jenkins voluntarily quit his job after turning in his equipment with the remark: "Lay it away; I won't need it for a few days."

The union representative stated that Jenkins is prepared to present a doctor's certificate proving his illness.

WANTED: JOBS FOR YOUTH—One of the greatest tragedies of the depression was the millions of young men and women turned out of school with nothing to do. Even today, with returning prosperity, there are 1,200 young men and girls on Uncle Sam's NYA project payroll in Allegany county. And the quota has recently been upped to 1,600. The depression will not be over until America can give all its young men and its young women gainful employment. The above picture, snapped at "open house" Thursday night in the B&O back shops, shows two lucky young apprentices who have jobs, are getting valuable training. It illustrates, too, the desire of most young Americans to do useful work. The machine is a journal lathe, which trues up the axle upon which locomotive wheels turn. The apprentices are Frank C. Tracy, Fort Hill grad, and Vincent Comiskey, of Connellsville.—News Staff Photo.

Runaway Girl, 13, And Pal Caught

Brought Back Here From Washington

A thirteen-year-old girl and the twenty-year-old youth she ran away with were brought to the county jail from Washington last night.

According to the girl's father she left her home in Eckhart Thursday morning and started for Beall High School, Frostburg.

That was the last her parents saw of her. Later, the father checked the bus depot and discovered that the girl had started for Washington with a 20-year-old youth.

The State's attorney put a call through to Washington and soon after Chief Detective B. W. Thompson found the pair at the home of the youth's sister.

A warrant sworn out by the father of the runaway girl charging her with being a delinquent minor. The youth, Ray Beeman, was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The pair were returned here by a sheriff's deputy and were being held last night.

Omission in Court Case Is Supplied

In the report of the Western Maryland cases decided by the state Court of Appeals appearing in yesterday's Cumberland News, there was an unfortunate ommission respecting the attorneys acting in the case of Viola E. Miller against Harvey L. Holler, in which a verdict for $12,000 damages was reversed and the case was remanded to Frederick county for a new trial.

The verdict was returned against Holler and James H. Stevens as the result of an automobile accident. The latter, represented by Attorney Edward J. Ryan, took no appeal while Holler, represented by Attorney George Henderson, appealed and won the reversal.

Former Sign Painter Jailed as Vagrant

George Dressman, about 50, of LaVale, was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday in Trial Magistrate's Court on a charge of vagrancy.

Dressman, a former sign painter, was arrested Wednesday night by State Trooper George J. Miller for being intoxicated.

Authorities said Dressman had no visible means of support.

Three More Young Boys Arrested as Burglars

City police last night, arrested three more juveniles as they continued their crack down on boy burglars.

Two 14-year-old youths and a 13-year-old boy were apprehended for being involved in robbing either Jesse Garvin's barber shop on Central avenue; the Queen City feed store on Third street, or Shade's grocery on Maryland avenue.

Detective Robert E. Flynn, who investigated, said one of the older boys' took $30 from the barber shop's cash register last night. The boy entered the place after breaking a hole in a window and then unlatching it, he said.

Some Money Recovered

The owner of the shop told police that there was $30.15 in the register, but that he found a ten cent piece in the machine and a nickle on the floor after the robbery. Police recovered $22.21 of the stolen money.

The other older boy, who was allegedly involved with the younger boy in robbing Shade's grocery last week, got a "split" of the barber shop money. But he didn't take part in the burglary.

Police said that about a dozen bars of soap were taken from the grocery store. The two boys broke into a storage room and were unable to enter the store because of a locked door, they added.

Stole Rabbit Feed

The younger boy is also charged with breaking into the feed store last month. He stole some feed for his rabbits when he couldn't find anything else, authorities said.

All three boys admitted their parts in the robberies when questioned last night by Detective Flynn. Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Officer Frank J. Zawaski and Walter P. Crabtree also figured in the arrests.

Two Already

Two other boys, 14 and 15, were arrested by police this week for robbing at least eight establishments in Cumberland and Ridgeley during the past three weeks. Ridgeley Chief of Police C. V. Barncord cooperated with local authorities in solving the crimes.

The youths arrested last night were released in custody of their parents. They are scheduled to be given a hearing today in Juvenile court.

Bad Target Picked By Motorist

A careless driving charge was placed against William Boggs, of RFD 5, Robert's Place, last night after his car crashed into a police traffic warning post at Baltimore avenue and Front street.

Boggs was released after he posted a $10 bond for a hearing this morning in Police court. He also posted $10 to cover the damage done to the sign and lantern.

Officer James E. Kelley made the arrest.

Driver Fined $50 On Second Trip

Man Arrested Twice On Same Charge

A first offense may be excusable, but when the offender gets arrested the second time for the same violation—look out.

Alston Liller, 700 Fafayette avenue, was fined $50 and costs yesterday in Trial Magistrate's court for operating a motor vehicle without a license. He was committed to thirty days in jail in default.

Liller pleaded guilty to the license charge. He was arrested October 4 on the same count, and forfeited a $10 bond when he failed to appear in court the following day.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., presided at yesterday's hearing. He said Liller had been convicted on a motor charge several years ago.

Officers R. C. Cassen and J. H. Newhouse preferred the charge against Liller.

In Police court, Elmer G. Kalbaugh, 322 Baltimore avenue, and Edward Collins, 129 Humbird street, arrested yesterday morning in South Cumberland, were acquitted of careless driving.

Child Catches Arm In Clothes Wringer

Little Stella Charuhas today knows better than to play "washwoman" with a real washing machine.

Stella, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Charuhas, 206 Spring street, had her right arm severely lacerated yesterday when she caught it in a clothes wringer.

The child's mother was working near by when the accident occurred.

Stella was taken to Allegany hospital. She was admitted at 12:25 p. m., and twelve sutures were used to close the wound in her arm above the elbow. Her condition was "good" last night.

Auto Hits Girl, 7, On Way to School

Seven-year-old Maxine Walters, 140 Hanover street, was injured yesterday morning when she was struck by a car while enroute to school.

Maxine suffered lacerations and brush burns about her face, arms and leg when she was struck by the car driven by A. V. Ellis, 101 Humbird street, while crossing North Centre street.

Ellis took the girl to Allegany hospital. She was released after being treated.

Our Photographer Wants Picture of First Deer

The News photographer wants a picture of the first lucky deer hunter to report in Allegany county.

Phone the News office and arrangements will be made for taking the picture. No cost involved.

Remember, it is the first hunter to report that counts, so phone in your report as soon as possible.

Before 8 a. m. Monday, phone 416.

The News is also interested in getting an account of all deer killed, or any funny or unusual experiences hunters may have. They can be phoned in or brought in any evening.

Varied Program Enjoyed by PTA

Third Graders Present Thanksgiving Play

A varied program, including a touching Thanksgiving playlet, a denunciation of Communism, and two safety talks, was presented Thursday night at the monthly meeting of the Gephart Parent-Teacher Association. There was a large audience.

The playlet was put on by first graders, and was called a "Thanksgiving Up-to-Date." It showed a modern family on Thanksgiving; the father went golfing, the mother to a card party, and brothers and sisters to a football game, leaving only a little crippled boy at home. He fell asleep and dreamed of the old-fashioned Pilgrim Thanksgiving, his dream being enacted on the stage.

Happily enough, other members of the family finally decided to cancel their engagements and came rushing home for a real Thanksgiving celebration with the little crippled boy.

The denunciation of Communism was delivered by Harry S. Lannon, Celanese foreman, who declared it the duty of all parents to teach their children of "the undermining and detrimental activities of the Communists."

President William Landefeld stressed the great value of Parent-Teacher Association activities in aiding safety campaigns to protect children from death in the streets.

Daniel D'Amicol, vice-president of the Western Maryland Motor Club, pointed out that responsibility for the safety of children lies with parents and teachers as well as with the motorists.

City Council Buys Christmas Seal Bond At $100 Par Value

A Christmas seal bond for $100 yesterday was ordered purchased by the mayor and city council at a meeting called primarily for the purpose of passing the payroll and bills for the last two weeks of November.

A letter seeking the use of motion picture equipment and a room to conduct a one-day school for U. S. census enumerators was referred to Commissioner Edgar Reynolds.

Council yesterday voided their action ordering Louis P. Saterakos to demolish a building at 259 North Centre street which Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka had declared a fire hazard. The action was voided when City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer reported that necessary repairs were being made.

Pants Set Afire, Joke Backfires

Two NYA Workers Held For Burning Another

Two youths, who said they thought it would be a "joke" to set fire to a companion's clothing, were ordered yesterday to appear before the January grand jury.

Howard Curry, 20, of Browning street, and John Brunk, 18, of Goethe street, were arraigned in Trial Magistrates court on a charge of assault with intent to harm. Both were ordered held under $500 bond each, but Brunk was released when his bond was posted.

Robert Thompson, 18, of Reynolds street, accused the pair of setting his clothes on fire after some inflammable paint removing fluid spilled on his trouser leg.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew said all three youths, employed by the NYA, were working in the basement of the new West Side school when the alleged assault occurred on Oct. 27. Matches were used to ignite Thompson's clothing, he said.

Curry and Brunk termed the incident a "joke", but Thompson didn't think so. His leg was badly burned and he was under medical care for several weeks.

Deaths

Edward Snyder

Edward Snyder, 121 Springdale street, died late last night at Allegany hospital, where he had been a patient since Nov. 19. He was 65.

The body was removed to Stein's Funeral Home.

Mrs. George Wigfield

Mrs. Pleasant Wigfield, wife of George Wigfield of R. F. D. 4, died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Griffin, of Bedford road, after a brief illness. She was 62.

A native of Allegany county, Mrs. Wigfield was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell Stottlemyer. She was a member of St. Hermon church.

Surviving, besides her husband and daughter, are six sons: Ellis Wigfield, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Melvin, Clyde, Urner, Glenn, and Arol Wigfield; three other daughters, Mrs. John Irons, Mrs. A. J. Irons and Miss Juanita Wigfield, all of Cumberland; a brother, Perry Stottlemyer, of Hancock; and three sisters, Mrs. John Apple and Mrs. Samuel Sipes, of Little Orleans, and Mrs. M. P. Martin, of Freeport, Pa.

Virgil E. Printy

Virgil Eugene Printy died Thursday at his home in Ellerslie following a lingering illness. He was 38.

Mr. Printy was born in Ellerslie. He was a son of Walter and the late Emma Lowery Printy.

Surviving, besides his father, are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Printy; six sons, Lenwood, Robert, Paul, Richard, Francis and Gerald Printy; two daughters, Mary and Nacy Printy, all at home; and one brother, Bruce Printy, of Ellerslie.

Dixons in Detroit

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Dixon, 333 Mountain View drive, are in Detroit, where Mr. Dixon, a member of the Board of Managers of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church, is attending the annual meeting of that society. The meeting opens today and closes Tuesday.

Mr. Dixon is author for the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

Three Decisions Of Appeal Court Are Explained

City Relieved Of Responsibility For Curve Crashes

Additional details on three Allegany county cases heard by Court of Appeals at Annapolis were furnished last night by the Associated Press. The Associated Press dispatch follows:

The court of appeals reversed two Cumberland auto accident damage awards and affirmed the judgment awarded a Cumberland woman for illness resulting from eating assertedly tainted corned beef.

Olive R. Leasure's verdict against the Armour & Company packing firm was upheld, the court ruling there was reasonable inference the company had not properly processed the food.

Miss Leasure, her brother, and sister became violently ill May 25, 1937, after eating corned beef packed in Brazil for Armour & Co. Dr. W. F. Williams diagnosed their ailment as botulism poisoning and testified the corned beef was responsible.

Up to Jury To Decide

There was defense testimony that "every reasonable precaution" had been taken to keep the food pure, but the court held the jury was the proper judge of the conflicting allegations.

The verdict against the City of Cumberland in favor of Milton Turney, 19, for injuries sustained on the so-called "Death Curve" on Washington street Nov. 6, 1938, was set aside, without new trial.

Turney alleged the curve was faultily constructed and threw the car off the road into a telephone pole. The court held the city not liable, stating: "The duty of a municipality to keep highways safe for travel is subject to the qualification that the duty is discharged if the municipality exercises ordinary and reasonable care in its performance, for the city is not the insurer of all who travel the roads, even though they may be injured while in the exercise of reasonable care."

"Reasonable Care" Used

The city had employed qualified experts in construction of the curve, and this "reasonable care" absolved them of responsibility, the court held.

The court also reversed the lower court verdict in favor of Viola Miller, injured at the Celanese plant when crushed between two cars, one driven by Harvey Holler, the successful appellant.

The court ruled that relevant testimony in Holler's favor was improperly excluded in the lower court, and remanded the case for a new trial.

Scout Troop 4 To Sell Candy

Girls Raising Funds For Washington Trip

Girl Scout troop 4 will hold a Christmas sale of home-made hard candies and fruit peel from Dec. 9 to 23 to raise funds for a week-end trip to Washington, D. C., in the spring.

Ann Hughes was elected general chairman of the sale Saturday morning when the troop met at Girl Scout headquarters on Greene street.

The staff of the "Girl Scout Star" is handling publicity for the sale, with Ruth Korn as chairman. A special issue has been announced for Dec. 9, opening the sale.

The bicycle delivery committee is headed by Bonnie Davis. Others elected as chairmen of various committee are Helen Clair Davis, Eleanor Kelley, Patty Bowie and Shirley Wilkinson.

The next troop meeting will be held at ten a. m. today at Scout headquarters. Work will be continued on the cloth scrap books and a sewing consultant will give directions for dressing dolls in international costumes.

Creighton Elected Head Of Chosen Friends Lodge

Peter A. Creighton last night was elected noble grand of the Chosen Friends Lodge No. 34, I. O. O. F., along with a full roster of new officers, who will be installed at the first meeting of the organization in January.

Other officers elected last night were: Elroy S. Fox, vice grand; A. Florian Wilson, recording secretary; William H. Kight, secretary.

John E. Woodyard was elected representative to the Grand Lodge and P. H. Ingle and George F. Harrison, members of the board of directors.

Rushed To Hospital After Fall in Street

James Ford, of the Olympia Hotel, a Celanese worker, was rushed to Allegany Hospital early today after he fell in the street directly in front of the hotel.

Observers said he was crossing the street to the hotel when he fell.

Still unconscious, he was taken to the hospital in a police car. A hospital attendant said he regained consciousness shortly after arriving at the hospital, but was still in a dazed condition.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

The forty - foot Santa Claus erected by the Mercantile bureau of the chamber of commerce is now smiling down on the city from his lofty perch on the hill at the head of Baltimore street.

But unless an unusually good job is done of lighting him up, most shoppers will never see him. He's so far away he looks small, for all his generous proportions, and in yesterday's smoke and rain he was about as conspicuous as a camouflaged U-boat.

The poor old fellow looked so lonesome we puffed up the hill to make his acquaintance, and discovered that he was getting a much better view of Baltimore street than Baltimore street is getting of him.

But, being a sociable sort of fellow, he as much as said that he wished he could get closer to the shopping throngs downtown. He kept right on smiling, though, and we told him maybe the lights would put him back in the Christmas whirl.

We hope so, for he's a mighty cheerful big fellow, and belongs down with us common folks. It almost looks like they've got him in a concentration camp way up there on the hill.

—o—

We don't suppose any of the many writers of letters on "Why I Like To Shop in Cumberland" will say because of the ample and convenient parking space afforded. Such a letter should win a prize for originality with no questions asked.

Don't ask us what should be done about it. We wish we knew.

—o—

This is the time of year when people have to be extra careful what they say.

For instance, a man is walking down the street and remarks to his wife, "Mighty pretty robe there in the window." And lo and behold, on Christmas morning there is the robe, which hubby had never given a second thought to, but which he has to pretend was just what he wanted, although for the life of him he can't figure out why his wife ever bought him THAT.

And if he is not very diplomatic and a very, very good actor, pretty soon his wife will be crying that he told her that's just what he wanted, and that probably he was hoping some other woman would give him that, etc., etc.

Yes, you've got to be careful. Watch what you say, and when you hint, brother, hint broadly.

Fort Hill Thespians Present Drama

National Thespian Troupe No. 230 of Fort Hill high school last night presented Rose Warner's "Lavender and Old Lace" before a large audience at the Fort Hill auditorium.

Miss Gerardine Pritchard directed the cast composed of June Storm, Dorothy Lee Campbell, Zelda Sacks, Nadine Sensabaugh, Marlyn Frankfort, Agnes Caparossi, Jack Lanich, Bernard Aronholt, Norman Amtower and Donald Rockwell.

Members of the executive staff are James E. Solt, Miss Katherine Pafel, Miss Edith McKelvey and Kenneth Mowen.

No Open Season On CCC Boys

Deer season opens Monday, but the season on CCC boys remains closed, hunters were warned last night by officials of the Green Ridge camp.

Project Superintendent J. T. Rothrock asked hunters to use care lest some of the 150 boys at the camp be mistaken for deer or hit by stray bullets. The boys are working in the woods in the heart of the deer hunting country.

Mr. Rothrock also asked that deer hunters be advised that the bridge is out on Mertens avenue between Green Ridge and Town Hill.

The old bridge was declared unsafe and was torn out. It will be several weeks yet before the CCC workers get the new bridge built.

Petition Filed In Union Attack On Handbill Law

Attorney Seeks To Start His Case In Circuit Court

Application for a writ of certiorari to remove the case of John G... from Police Court was filed yesterday in Circuit Court by I. D... Avnet, counsel for the Kelly-Springfield local of the United Rubber Workers.

Geis, a former president of the Kelly local, was arrested Nov. 24 by Sergt. Raymond Johnston for issuing handbills without a permit, a violation of a municipal ordinance.

Says Constitution Violated

In the petition filed yesterday Avnet requests the Circuit Court to remove the case from Police Court and inquire into the regularity of the proceedings against Geis which the attorney states are contrary to the Fourteenth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution and Article 40 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights.

Application for the writ followed the arraignment of Geis in Police Court last Saturday when Avnet was granted a continuance by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

Appeal Route Sought

Purpose of requesting the removal of the case from the jurisdiction of the Police Court is to leave the gate open for possible appeals to higher courts.

Having adopted the stand that the municipal handbill ordinance is unconstitutional, United Rubber Worker officials have announced their intention of making a test case out of the present issue.

Six Point Petition

The six-point petition filed yesterday by Avnet is captioned "The State of Maryland at the Relation of John Geis, petitioner versus Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., police magistrate for Cumberland." The points as enumerated in the petition are:

1—That Geis distributed leaflets on a public street in Cumberland on the afternoon of Nov. 24.

2—That Geis handed the papers to people who appeared to be employes of the Kelly - Springfield plant.

For Information Only

3—That the sole purpose of making the distribution was to inform co-workers and fellow employes of a union meeting.

4—That Geis conducted himself in a peaceable and orderly manner, did not interfere with the free passage of any person, and that the leaflets were not strewn or littered upon the public street.

5—Geis was then arrested and charged with violating Ordinance No. 1361 of the city code.

Ordinance "Illegal"

6—That the petitioner has been advised and believes and therefore avers that his arrest and attempted prosecution under the ordinance is illegal and without authority of law. Reasons given were:

a—That the ordinance does not apply to non-commercial distribution of pamphlets, literature or circulars and does not require that the petitioner first procure a license.

Press Freedom Violated

b—That in the event the ordinance is applicable to the petitioner, it is unconstitutional and void and contrary to and in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment and Article 40 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights by abridging the petitioner's right of freedom of speech and of the press.

Hunter Escapes Buck Fever

Dairyman Brings Down First Deer

They don't all get buck fever the first time.

Ferman P. Barton, of the Barton Dairy, shot his first deer Wednesday and didn't develop a case of shakes either.

They did. The first thing Barton knew an eight-point 180 pound buck came bobbing along, passed within sixty yards of the surprised hunter.

Barton calmly put his rifle to his shoulder, fired two shots and the deer fell. Both shots found their mark, one in the ribs and one in the neck.

Asked how he felt after bagging his first deer, Barton said "Just dandy."

'Stymied by 190-Car Freight Train,' Barks Mayor in Police Radio Test

Mayor Harry Irvine went broadcasting yesterday in a police cruiser car as an Alexandria, Va., firm conducted a field strength measurement test in Cumberland for two-way radios.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Manley kept breaking into the conversation with pertinent comments and questions.

Over Raging Canal

"We are now passing over the raging canal," Mayor Irvine radioed. Later the mayor informed the commissioner that "we are now stymied by a 190-car freight train."

The racket the train made in passing came over the radio distinctly, had a cluster of people at police headquarters thinking they were in a depot.

The radio tested operates on a fifteen-watt mobile transmitter. The call number used in yesterday's test was "W3XQB."

Test Successful

Yesterday's test was pronounced quite successful by Mayor Irvine, Manley and Chief Oscar A. Eyerman, who accompanied the mayor in the police car, which was driven by Sergt. Raymond Johnston.

The transmitter tested yesterday kept constant contact with the cruiser as it traveled over the city streets and to the LaVale section.

Reception was excellent in the two-way conversation with interference being noted at only one or two points.

Try Worst Areas

In conducting the tour, Chief Eyerman directed the car into areas where high-tension lines and other sources of interference failed to halt the two-way communication.

Other firms will conduct similar tests in the future, Mayor Irvine said yesterday.

Thar's Gold in Them There Halls, And a Barrel of Fun at Bazaar

Mayor Harry Irvine will officially open Memorial Hospital's annual bazaar tonight at 7:30 p. m. at the State Armory.

The yearly event will open in a setting imitative of the gold rush days of 1849 with the basement of the armory transformed into a replica of a robust mining camp.

The main activities of the bazaar, which will be carried through December 9, will center around booths sponsored by civic, fraternal and charitable organizations.

One of the principal attractions will be the presentation in person of Cumberland's triplets, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Raymond Smith, Klosterman addition, on Wednesday, Dec. 6, between 8 and 9 p. m. The triplets were born at Memorial Hospital Oct. 18, 1937.

Another feature will be an exhibition by the University of Maryland Medical School's tumor collection along with other medical exhibits.

Monday evening, Cumberland's "jitterbugs" will stage a contest and on Tuesday, an old fiddler's contest will be held.

Proceeds from the week-long affair will be devoted to augmenting facilities of the cancer clinic at the hospital.

To File Charges With Labor Board, Kreisel Reports

Floyd Kreisel, representative of the local bus drivers' union, last night reported that charges of discharging a bus driver for union activity would be filed with the National Labor Relations Board against the Potomac Edison Company.

Kreisel alleges that the company discharged Robert C. Jenkins, a bus driver, for union activity after he had helped to start the new union and had served on the negotiating committee.

Driver Claims Illness

The union representative states that Jenkins turned in his equipment at the bus company and was off duty for several days due to an illness.

When Jenkins returned to work four days later, Kreisel said, he was informed by a company official that they would let him know on November 29 whether or not he would be permitted to return to work. On November 29 Jenkins was informed that he was discharged, Kreisel said.

Doctor's Certificate Promised

Kreisel stated that the company contends that Jenkins voluntarily quit his job after turning in his equipment with the remark: "Lay it away; I won't need it for a few days."

The union representative stated that Jenkins is prepared to present a doctor's certificate proving his illness.

WANTED: JOBS FOR YOUTH—One of the greatest tragedies of the depression was the millions of young men and women turned out of school with nothing to do. Even today, with returning prosperity, there are 1,200 young men and girls on Uncle Sam's NYA project payroll in Allegany county. And the quota has recently been upped to 1,600. The depression will not be over until America can give all its young men and its young women gainful employment. The above picture, snapped at "open house" Thursday night in the B&O back shops, shows two lucky young apprentices who have jobs, are getting valuable training. It illustrates, too, the desire of most young Americans to do useful work. The machine is a journal lathe, which trues up the axle upon which locomotive wheels turn. The apprentices are Frank C. Tracy, Fort Hill grad, and Vincent Comiskey, of Connelsville.—News Staff Photo.

Three Decisions Of Appeal Court Are Explained

City Relieved Of Responsibility For Curve Crashes

Additional details on three Allegany county cases heard by Court of Appeals at Annapolis were furnished last night by the Associated Press. The Associated Press dispatch follows:

The court of appeals reversed two Cumberland auto accident damage awards and affirmed the judgment awarded a Cumberland woman for illness resulting from eating asserted-ly tainted corned beef.

Olive R. Leasure's verdict against the Armour & Company packing firm was upheld, the court ruling there was reasonable inference the company had not properly processed the food.

Miss Leasure, her brother, and sister became violently ill May 25, 1937, after eating corned beef packed in Brazil for Armour & Co. Dr. W. F. Williams diagnosed their ailment as botulism poisoning and testified the corned beef was responsible.

Up to Jury To Decide

There was defense testimony that "every reasonable precaution" had been taken to keep the food pure, but the court held the jury was the proper judge of the conflicting allegations.

The verdict against the City of Cumberland in favor of Milton Turney, 19, for injuries sustained on the so-called "Death Curve" on Washington street Nov. 6, 1938, was set aside, without new trial.

Turney alleged the curve was faultily constructed and threw the car off the road into a telephone pole. The court held the city not liable, stating: "The duty of a municipality to keep highways safe for travel is subject to the qualification that the duty is discharged if the municipality exercises ordinary and reasonable care in its performance, for the city is not the insurer of all who travel the roads, even though they may be injured while in the exercise of reasonable care."

"Reasonable Care" Used

The city had employed qualified experts in construction of the curve, and this "reasonable care" absolved them of responsibility, the court held.

The court also reversed the lower court verdict in favor of Viola Miller, injured at the Celanese plant when crushed between two cars, one driven by Harvey Holler, the successful appellant.

The court ruled that relevant testimony in Holler's favor was improperly excluded in the lower court, and remanded the case for a new trial.

Runaway Girl, 13, And Pal Caught

Brought Back Here From Washington

A thirteen-year-old girl and the twenty-year-old youth she ran away with were brought to the county jail from Washington last night.

According to the girl's father she left her home in Eckhart Thursday morning and started for Beall High School, Frostburg.

That was the last her parents saw of her. Later, the father checked the bus depot and discovered that the girl had started for Washington with a 20-year-old youth.

The State's attorney put a call through to Washington and soon after Chief Detective B. W. Thompson found the pair at the home of the youth's sister.

A warrant sworn out by the father of the runaway girl charging her with being a delinquent minor. The youth, Ray Beeman, was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The pair were returned here by a sheriff's deputy and were being held last night.

Omission in Court Case Is Supplied

In the report of the Western Maryland cases decided by the state Court of Appeals appearing in yesterday's Cumberland News, there was an unfortunate ommission respecting the attorneys acting in the case of Viola E. Miller against Harvey L. Holler, in which a verdict for $12,000 damages was reversed and the case was remanded to Frederick county for a new trial.

The verdict was returned against Holler and James H. Stevens as the result of an automobile accident. The latter, represented by Attorney Edward J. Ryan, took no appeal while Holler, represented by Attorney George Henderson, appealed and won the reversal.

Former Sign Painter Jailed as Vagrant

George Dressman, about 50, of LaVale, was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday in Trial Magistrate's Court on a charge of vagrancy.

Dressman, a former sign painter, was arrested Wednesday night by State Trooper George J. Miller for being intoxicated.

Authorities said Dressman had no visible means of support.

Three More Young Boys Arrested as Burglars

City police last night arrested three more juveniles as they continued their crack down on boy burglars.

Two 14-year-old youths and a 13-year-old boy were apprehended for being involved in robbing either Jesse Garvin's barber shop on Central avenue; the Queen City feed store on Third street, or Shade's grocery on Maryland avenue.

Detective Robert E. Flynn, who investigated, said one of the older boys' took $30 from the barber shop's cash register last night. The boy entered the place after breaking a hole in a window and then unlatching it, he said.

Some Money Recovered

The owner of the shop told police that there was $30.15 in the register, but that he found a ten cent piece in the machine and a nickle on the floor after the robbery. Police recovered $22.21 of the stolen money.

The other older boy, who was allegedly involved with the younger boy in robbing Shade's grocery last week, got a "split" of the barber shop money. But he didn't take part in the burglary.

Police said that about a dozen bars of soap were taken from the grocery store. The two boys broke into a storage room and were unable to enter the store because of a locked door, they added.

Stole Rabbit Feed

The younger boy is also charged with breaking into the feed store last month. He stole some feed for his rabbits when he couldn't find anything else, authorities said.

All three boys admitted their parts in the robberies when questioned last night by Detective Flynn. Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Officer Frank J. Zawaski and Walter P. Crabtree also figured in the arrests.

Two Already

Two other boys, 14 and 15, were arrested by police this week for robbing at least eight establishments in Cumberland and Ridgeley during the past three weeks. Ridgeley Chief of Police C. V. Barncord cooperated with local authorities in solving the crimes.

The youths arrested last night were released in custody of their parents. They are scheduled to be given a hearing today in Juvenile court.

Bad Target Picked By Motorist

A careless driving charge was placed against William Boggs, of RFD 5, Robert's Place, last night after his car crashed into a police traffic warning post at Baltimore avenue and Front street.

Boggs was released after he posted a $10 bond for a hearing this morning in Police court. He also posted $10 to cover the damage done to the sign and lantern.

Officer James E. Kelley made the arrest.

Driver Fined $50 On Second Trip

Man Arrested Twice On Same Charge

A first offense may be excusable, but when the offender gets arrested the second time for the same violation—look out.

Alston Liller, 700 Fafayette avenue, was fined $50 and costs yesterday in Trial Magistrate's court for operating a motor vehicle without a license. He was committed to thirty days in jail in default.

Liller pleaded guilty to the license charge. He was arrested October 4 on the same count, and forfeited a $10 bond when he failed to appear in court the following day.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., presided at yesterday's hearing. He said Liller had been convicted on a motor charge several years ago.

Officers R. C. Cassen and J. H. Newhouse preferred the charge against Liller.

In Police court, Elmer G. Kalbaugh, 322 Baltimore avenue, and Edward Collins, 129 Humbird street, arrested yesterday morning in South Cumberland, were acquitted of careless driving.

Child Catches Arm In Clothes Wringer

Little Stella Charuhas today knows better than to play "washwoman" with a real washing machine.

Stella, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Charuhas, 206 Spring street, had her right arm severely lacerated yesterday when she caught it in a clothes wringer.

The child's mother was working near by when the accident occurred.

Stella was taken to Allegany hospital. She was admitted at 12:25 p. m., and twelve sutures were used to close the wound in her arm above the elbow. Her condition was "good" last night.

Auto Hits Girl, 7, On Way to School

Seven-year-old Maxine Walters, 140 Hanover street, was injured yesterday morning when she was struck by a car while enroute to school.

Maxine suffered lacerations and brush burns about her face, arms and leg when she was struck by the car driven by A. V. Ellis, 101 Humbird street, while crossing North Centre street.

Ellis took the girl to Allegany hospital. She was released after being treated.

Our Photographer Wants Picture of First Deer

The News photographer wants a picture of the first lucky deer hunter to report in Allegany county.

Phone the News office and arrangements will be made for taking the picture. No cost involved.

Remember, it is the first hunter to report that counts, so phone in your report as soon as possible.

Before 8 a. m. Monday, phone 416.

The News is also interested in getting an account of all deer killed, or any funny or unusual experiences hunters may have. They can be phoned in or brought in any evening.

Varied Program Enjoyed by PTA

Third Graders Present Thanksgiving Play

A varied program, including a touching Thanksgiving playlet, a denunciation of Communism, and two safety talks, was presented Thursday night at the monthly meeting of the Gephart Parent-Teacher Association. There was a large audience.

The playlet was put on by first graders, and was called a "Thanksgiving Up-to-Date." It showed a modern family on Thanksgiving; the father went golfing, the mother to a card party, and brothers and sisters to a football game, leaving only a little crippled boy at home. He fell asleep and dreamed of the old-fashioned Pilgrim Thanksgiving, his dream being enacted on the stage.

Happily enough, other members of the family finally decided to cancel their engagements and came rushing home for a real Thanksgiving celebration with the little crippled boy.

The denunciation of Communism was delivered by Harry S. Lannon, Celanese foreman, who declared it the duty of all parents to teach their children of "the undermining and detrimental activities of the Communists."

President William Landefeld stressed the great value of Parent-Teacher Association activities in aiding safety campaigns to protect children from death in the streets.

Daniel D'Amicol, vice-president of the Western Maryland Motor Club, pointed out that responsibility for the safety of children lies with parents and teachers as well as with the motorists.

City Council Buys Christmas Seal Bond At $100 Par Value

A Christmas seal bond for $100 yesterday was ordered purchased by the mayor and city council at a meeting called primarily for the purpose of passing the payroll and bills for the last two weeks of November.

A letter seeking the use of motion picture equipment and a room to conduct a one-day school for U. S. census enumerators was referred to Commissioner Edgar Reynolds.

Council yesterday voided their action ordering Louis P. Saterakos to demolish a building at 259 North Centre street which Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka had declared a fire hazard. The action was voided when City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer reported that necessary repairs were being made.

Pants Set Afire, Joke Backfires

Two NYA Workers Held For Burning Another

Two youths, who said they thought it would be a "joke" to set fire to a companion's clothing, were ordered yesterday to appear before the January grand jury.

Howard Curry, 20, of Browning street, and John Brunk, 18, of Goethe street, were arraigned in Trial Magistrates court on a charge of assault with intent to harm. Both were ordered held under $500 bond each, but Brunk was released when his bond was posted.

Robert Thompson, 18, of Reynolds street, accused the pair of setting his clothes on fire after some inflammable paint removing fluid spilled on his trouser leg.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew said all three youths, employed by the NYA, were working in the basement of the new West Side school when the alleged assault occurred on Oct. 27. Matches were used to ignite Thompson's clothing, he said.

Curry and Brunk termed the incident a "joke", but Thompson didn't think so. His leg was badly burned and he was under medical care for several weeks.

Deaths

Edward Snyder

Edward Snyder, 121 Springdale street, died late last night at Allegany hospital, where he had been a patient since Nov. 19. He was 65.

The body was removed to Stein's Funeral Home.

Mrs. George Wigfield

Mrs. Pleasant Wigfield, wife of George Wigfield of R. F. D. 4, died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Griffin, of Bedford road, after a brief illness. She was 62.

A native of Allegany county, Mrs. Wigfield was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell Stottlemyer. She was a member of St. Hermon church.

Surviving, besides her husband and daughter, are six sons: Ellis Wigfield, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Melvin, Clyde, Urner, Glenn, and Arol Wigfield; three other daughters, Mrs. John Irons, Mrs. A. J. Irons and Miss Juanita Wigfield, all of Cumberland; a brother, Perry Stottlemyer, of Hancock; and three sisters, Mrs. John Apple and Mrs. Samuel Sipes, of Little Orleans, and Mrs. M. P. Martin, of Freeport, Pa.

Virgil E. Printy

Virgil Eugene Printy died Thursday at his home in Ellerslie following a lingering illness. He was 38.

Mr. Printy was born in Ellerslie. He was a son of Walter and the late Emma Lowery Printy.

Surviving, besides his father, are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Printy; six sons, Lenwood, Robert, Paul, Richard, Francis and Gerald Printy; two daughters, Mary and Nacy Printy, all at home; and one brother, Bruce Printy, of Ellerslie.

Dixons in Detroit

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Dixon, 333 Mountain View drive, are in Detroit, where Mr. Dixon, a member of the Board of Managers of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church, is attending the annual meeting of that society. The meeting opens today and closes Tuesday.

Mr. Dixon is author for the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

Girls Raising Funds For Washington Trip

Girl Scout troop 4 will hold a Christmas sale of home-made hard candies and fruit peel from Dec. 9 to 23 to raise funds for a week-end trip to Washington, D. C., in the spring.

Ann Hughes was elected general chairman of the sale Saturday morning when the troop met at Girl Scout headquarters on Greene street.

The staff of the "Girl Scout Star" is handling publicity for the sale, with Ruth Korn as chairman. A special issue has been announced for Dec. 9, opening the sale.

The bicycle delivery committee is headed by Bonnie Davis. Others elected as chairmen of various committee are Helen Clair Davis, Eleanor Kelley, Patty Bowie and Shirley Wilkinson.

The next troop meeting will be held at ten a. m. today at Scout headquarters. Work will be continued on the cloth scrap books and a sewing consultant will give directions for dressing dolls in international costumes.

Creighton Elected Head Of Chosen Friends Lodge

Peter A. Creighton last night was elected noble grand of the Chosen Friends Lodge No. 34, I. O. O. F., along with a full roster of new officers, who will be installed at the first meeting of the organization in January.

Other officers elected last night were: Elroy S. Fox, vice grand; A. Florian Wilson, recording secretary; William H. Kight, secretary.

John E. Woodyard was elected representative to the Grand Lodge and P. H. Ingle and George F. Harrison, members of the board of directors.

Still unconscious, he was taken to the hospital in a police car. A hospital attendant said he regained consciousness shortly after arriving at the hospital, but was still in a dazed condition.

Fort Hill Thespians Present Drama

National Thespian Troupe No. 230 of Fort Hill high school last night presented Rose Warner's "Lavender and Old Lace" before a large audience at the Fort Hill auditorium.

Miss Gerardine Pritchard directed the cast composed of June Storm, Dorothy Lee Campbell, Zelda Sacks, Nadine Sensabaugh, Marlyn Frankfort, Agnes Caparossi, Jack Lanich, Bernard Aronholt, Norman Amtower and Donald Rockwell.

Members of the executive staff are James E. Solt, Miss Katherine Pafel, Miss Edith McKelvey and Kenneth Mowen.

No Open Season On CCC Boys

Deer season opens Monday, but the season on CCC boys remains closed, hunters were warned last night by officials of the Green Ridge camp.

Project Superintendent J. T. Rothrock asked hunters to use care lest some of the 150 boys at the camp be mistaken for deer or hit by stray bullets. The boys are working in the woods in the heart of the deer hunting country.

Mr. Rothrock also asked that deer hunters be advised that the bridge is out on Mertens avenue between Green Ridge and Town Hill.

The old bridge was declared unsafe and was torn out. It will be several weeks yet before the CCC workers get the new bridge built.

Hunter Escapes Buck Fever

Dairyman Brings Down First Deer

They don't all get buck fever the first time.

Ferman P. Barton, of the Barton Dairy, shot his first deer Wednesday and didn't develop a case of shakes either.

Barton took his position at a crossroads at near Middle Ridge, W. Va., and then waited for the drivers to rustle up a deer.

They did. The first thing Barton knew an eight-point 180 pound buck came bobbing along, passed within sixty yards of the surprised hunter.

Barton calmly put his rifle to his shoulder, fired two shots and the deer fell. Both shots found their mark, one in the ribs and one in the neck.

Asked how he felt after bagging his first deer, Barton said "Just dandy."

'Stymied by 190-Car Freight Train,' Barks Mayor in Police Radio Test

Mayor Harry Irvine went broadcasting yesterday in a police cruiser car as an Alexandria, Va., firm conducted a field strength measurement test in Cumberland for two-way radios.

Seated in the cruiser car, Mayor Irvine broadcasted the points of interest to his tour to Police Commissioner Harry A. Manley at the microphone in police headquarters.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Manley kept breaking into the conversation with pertinent comments and questions.

Over Raging Canal

"We are now passing over the raging canal," Mayor Irvine radioed. Later the mayor informed the commissioner that "we are now stymied by a 190-car freight train."

The racket the train made in passing came over the radio distinctly, had a cluster of people at police headquarters thinking they were in a depot.

The radio tested operates on a fifteen-watt mobile transmitter. The call number used in yesterday's test was "W3XQB."

Test Successful

Yesterday's test was pronounced quite successful by Mayor Irvine, Manley and Chief Oscar A. Eyerman, who accompanied the mayor in the police car, which was driven by Sergt. Raymond Johnston.

The transmitter tested yesterday kept constant contact with the cruiser as it traveled over the city streets and to the LaVale section.

Reception was excellent in the two-way conversation with interference being noted at only one or two points.

Try Worst Areas

In conducting the tour, Chief Eyerman directed the car into areas where high-tension lines and other sources of interference failed to halt the two-way communication.

Other firms will conduct similar tests in the future, Mayor Irvine said yesterday.

Thar's Gold in Them There Halls, And a Barrel of Fun at Bazaar

Mayor Harry Irvine will officially open Memorial Hospital's annual bazaar tonight at 7:30 p. m. at the State Armory.

The yearly event will open in a setting imitative of the gold rush days of 1849 with the basement of the armory transformed into a replica of a robust mining camp.

The main activities of the bazaar, which will be carried through December 9, will center around booths sponsored by civic, fraternal and charitable organizations.

One of the principal attractions will be the presentation in person of Cumberland's triplets, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Raymond Smith, Klosterman addition, on Wednesday, Dec. 6, between 8 and 9 p. m. The triplets were born at Memorial Hospital Oct. 18, 1937.

Another feature will be an exhibition by the University of Maryland Medical School's tumor collection along with other medical exhibits.

Monday evening, Cumberland's "jitterbugs" will stage a contest and on Tuesday, an old fiddler's contest will be held.

Proceeds from the week-long affair will be devoted to augmenting facilities of the cancer clinic at the hospital.
